McIntosh Doings.

McINTOSH, Minn., Jan. 1st 1890.

ED. JOURNAL:—You will see by the heading of this communication that "Edna" is away from home at the present time and that is the reason you have not heard from her lately. She has been in this neighborhood for the past seven weeks, and in all her travels between the Atlantic and Pacific she has failed to find kinder hearted, or more hospitable people than she has been among in the Thirteen Towns. The business men here are very enterprising and energetic and my opinion is that McIntosh has brighter prospects before her than any town its size in Polk County.

The new flouring mill has been running now for over two weeks and doing lots of business. The farmers are much pleased with the way they are treated by Matt Jenson the manager of the mill.

The members of school district south of town had a Christmas tree on Monday evening. Whoever decorated the building deserves great credit for the artistic manner in which it was done. The exercises were conducted in Norsk but the people were so hospitable that they sang English songs for the benfit of your correspondent. The program was informal but everything went smoothly and everyone seemed very happy.

Miss Lydia LaDue, of Fertile, was visiting friends here the first part of the week.

Knute Rollag is the postmaster of the new post office of Gosen in the town of Knute. The office was opened to-day.

Geo. LeBree's four-year-old boy is quite ill of scarlet fever.

Frank Daudenberg a former resident of this place arrived on Tuesday's train from Dakota and will remain all winter. Welcome back Frank.

The gentlemanly station agent here took me all over his magnificent depot and I was much pleased in examining the different departments. The erection of such a building must have been a great financial strain on the St. P., M. & M. R. R. Co.

Happy New Year to the editor and all my friends and may the Lord bles my enemies. EDNA.

A BIG SUIT.

The Manitoba Proposes to Fight Duluth's Best Road in the Courts.

Duluth Herald, Dec. 31st.

Late yesterday afternoon papers in a suit of the Minneapolis & St. Cloud vs. the Duluth & Winnipeg were filed. The plaintiff is the Manitoba branch from St. Cloud to Hinckley, on the line used by the Eastern, also a child of the Manitoba.

The complaint alleges the plaintiff constructed a line from St. Cloud to Hinckley in 1882, which was within the limit of time set by the legislature for the completion of the work. The state had agreed to give the plaintiff swamp lands not then otherwise appropriated, in odd-numbered sections lying within the counties through which the branch might pass, ten sections per mile. The company was thus entitled to 425,664 acres, but has thus far acquirad only 123,917 acres. In 1875 the state promised to give ten sections of swamp land per mile to the Duluth & Iron Range, under provisions that were carried out, and if there was not enough swamp land within ten miles of the road, the Duluth & Iron Range was to locate the deficiency on any swamp lands within St. Louis, Lake and Cook Counties. On March 9th, 1878, an act giving this grant to the Duluth & Winnipeg was passed.

The charges are made that the Iron Range grant has not been forfeited, that the Duluth & Winnipeg has not constructed its road described in its articles, and not in the time required. It is further charged that the governor has given to the Duluth & Winnipeg title to part of the land selected by the plaintiff to make up the deficiency in its own grant. The plaintiff accordingly asks for judgment that the defendant's grant be declared void; that the defendant be enjoined from making a transfer of any part of the grant, and required to execute a release to the plaintiff; that the defendant be enjoined from further selections and from making any application for a conveyance of such land, until the Minneapolis & St. Cloud gets all it wants.

The U. S. District Attorney.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel.

The appointment of Eugene Hay to the office of U. S. District Attorney for Minnesota, does not, after all, seem to give entire satisfaction, and we are inclined to think it will be the means of weakening instead of strengthing the g. o. p. in the northern part of the state. It may be gratifying to Mr. Washburn and a few of Mr. Hay's personal friends, but it does not seem to meet with the approbition of a large proportion of Republicans who have heretofore been foremost in carrying the party to victory, and all must admit that Halvor Steenerson, of Polk County, has done very much in that direction. In our way of looking at this appointment, it is not because Mr. Washburn cared so much for Mr. Hay, or thought he could or would be the means of aiding the Republican party at the next general election, but that he had the defeat of Senator C. K. Davis for re-election in view, and that by securing Mr. Hay's appointment it would be a step forward in that direction. Just how this matter will effect the party in the future it will be difficult for even the best political judges to say, but at this time the disagreement of our two U. S. Senators does not cause it to look very encouraging. We will, however, predict that Senator Davis will succeed himself as U. S. Senator, no matter who gets the fat offices.

Low Interest.

The Western Rural.

It was reported a few days ago that the Controller of the City of New York had succeeded in placing $6,000,000 of bonds drawing intrest at only two and a half per cent per annum. It should have been stated that these bonds are exempt from taxation. This practically places them on a par with government bonds which yield about two and a half per cent on the current selling value and are also exempt from taxation. It may be claimed that this feature is in effect a raising of the income to nearly four and a half per cent, but probably that is too large an allowance to make, and for the simple reason that many investments are not taxed at all. Perhaps it would be fair to halve the difference and say that the transaction indicates a willingness on the part of capitalists to lend their surplus funds at three and a half per cent per annum in the east. They have to do so in competition with British capital, which is readily obtainable there at three, and can be transferred at the cost of another one-half per cent for transportation and handling. And yet the eastern capitalist when he loans money on a Western farm, which is just as good security as New York bonds, wants to gobble the farm and all there is on it for interest.

WHEAT GROWERS WRATHY.

They Claim They Are Being Confidenced by Elevator Companies.

Special to The Globe.

JAMESTOWN, N. D., Dec. 30.—There are a lot of wrathy wheat growers in the Corinne neighborhood, in Stutsman County. An exceptionally good grade of wheat was raised there this fall. Dazey and Hannaford are the nearest community's nearest elevator points. A farmer, George Wright, a reliable man, was in the city to-day, delegated to consult with representatives as to some legal protection, if possible, to prevent the occurrence of the confidence game that he states has been played on the farmers of his township by elevator companies. He says in his own case, that he raised 4,000 bushels of fine wheat. He hauled the first load to Cargill's elevator, at Dazey. It was graded No. 1 hard. He was paid for it and the rest of the crop was contracted for at the same grade. The second load, after delivery, was graded No. 2 northern, the agent stating that he had received instructions to so grade it. Wright refused to sell at that grade, and took the wheat to Hannaford, where there is only a small warehouse. The first load went No. 1, but the next load was cut to No. 2. As the wheat came from the same field he declined to accept the second offer, and hauled the wheat back to Dazey. The same tactics were worked there. The second load was never as good as the first. Wright then ordered cars, and had no trouble to get them promptly from the Northern Pacific road. Before shipping, but after the wheat was loaded, the agent of the Northern Pacific elevator company appeared on the scene and offered Wright the price of No. 1 hard for all he had and two cents per bushel higher than the market price. Wright refused to have any more to-do with them, and shipped to Duluth, making on each car some $35 over the elevator company's offer. It is reported that many small farmers have been worked the same way, frequent complaints being made over orders to lower one grade on all wheat for that locality, which was done in one day.

Poor Railroads.

The Western Rural.

The railroad monopoly keeps harping upon the alleged fact that it is so cramped by law that it is making no money. Some of the roads are passind dividends. Some of them are paying less than the usual dividends and all of them are growling like a pig with a sore head. It is a fact, too, that the roads are not making as much money as they once did. It would be a sorry commentary upon the effort that has been made by the people and congress to put a stop to railroad plundering of the people, if they were. The Inter-State commerce law has cramped them. There is no doubt of that; but the railroads are yet earning much more than they ought to be permitted to earn. They are suffering no inconvenience or hardship that they have not brought upon themselves. They have been profligate in issuing stock. They have issued and sold millions of dollars of stock that never should have been issued. There was no legitimate call for such stock. The managers and manipulators of the roads issued it for one purpose and only one purpose—to get money to put into their own pockets. These schemers loaded down their roads with watered stock. That stock is now out and represents in some cases seventy-five per cent of the entire stock. Before the Inter-State commerce law came into existence and the roads were a law unto themselves, they could rob the public of enough to pay splendid dividends upon all this stock. They cannot do it now, and what is still better the prospect is that they will be crippled still further in their efforts to float their worthless blocks of stock. Just as sure as the days come and go, we are going steadily ahead to the time when no road will be permitted to earn more than enough to pay a respectable dividend upon its actual value. These are not good days for watered stock. In the near future railroading will cease to be a scheme of robbery, and The Rural has been doing all it could to hasten the coming of that time.

Stealing from Shippers.

The Western Rural.

When a man steals he should be sent to prison. Generally he is sent there, if he does not steal too much or steals from anybody except farmers. The father of a half dozen starving children who should be wicked enough to steal a loaf of bread to feed his perishing little ones would likely bring up in a cell. But the elevators of Chicago steal from every car five bushels of grain from every car shipped from there and never get in sight of a prison. But that comes out of the country grain merchant, some one may say. Nothing of the kind. It comes out of the grain grower. All such leaks are made up by laying the burden on the farmer. Agriculture is made to bear nearly the entire loss of commerce. The country grain buyer, in order to save himself from the losses which are represented by theft perpetrated by the Chicago elevators, lowers the price; to compensate him for extortionate carrying charges he lowers the price; to provide a margin for other middlemen he lowers the price; the manufacturer of goods adds all his expenses and losses to the price and the farmer must pay all of it; the jobber does the same thing; the wholesaler does the same and the retailer does likewise. Interest, insurance, "stealage"—wherever it happens—rents, etc., are piled on the farmer's back in a compact mass.

The farmer calls for relief. Of whom does he demand relief? Of the legislature first. How can the legislature give it? By providing, if such legislative provision is not already made, that the man who steals grain from a shipment of grain under any pretence whatever, shall go to prison like any common criminal. The farmer demands relief from the courts next. He demands that they shall enforce the laws. With stock yards stealing his cattle and elevators stealing his grain and neither grain nor cattle bringing what it costs to produce them it is no wonder that the farmer is wondering what is to become of him.

No Necessity for Minneapolis.

The Great West.

The Minneapolis Journal states that the Twin Cities and the country are interdependent.

What is it that has built Minneapolis right under the wing of St. Paul, itself the largest state metropolis in the northwest? Is there a man so shallow-pated as to say Commerce did it? Was there a demand? Were there certain necessities? Did the people have to leave St. Paul from lack of room? Does the natural trade of these impoverished, sickly, tax-ridden, railroad-bonded counties, with from 1,200 to 3,000 farmers in each, build cities by magic?

Why, men, this is folly—and the newspaper or the man who talks such a doctrine, is not honest in his speech. It is impossible. It is repugnant to reason. The Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas, none of them have a city with the population, the manufactures, or the jobbing trade ONE-HALF that of this St. Paul-on-the-confines-of-the-wilderness—within 95 miles of the vast nameless and trackless regions of the uninhabited!

Does the Minneapolis Journal pretend to believe that any NATURAL demand, and natural INTERDEPENDENCE built—under the shadow of one great city's spires—another magnificent metropolis, with its hundreds of millions of moving capital? Where was the dependence of the farmer! Whence the artificial resources with which this necessary magnificence? Look upon its granite walls, its brick and stone columns, its entablatures, its beautiful hotels, its miles of crowded avenues, its spires and towers and polished plinths! Whence? From the demands of commerce? No, the senseless ass which draggs its clodded feet through the outer streets would bray in chords-negative at such a proposition. Why, its commercial trade with the exterior does not support it.

What does?

Well, her wealth and timber are the crystallized sweat of the Minnesota and Dakota farmers, whose stockingless feet are encased in the tender grasp of wooden shoes! The grain trade of Minneapolis amounts to nearly a hundred millions a year. St. Paul gets none of this, and yet sports her carnivals—that is, she has the legislature once in two years! The wheat trade of Minneapalis is a dishonest trade. It is one mighty fake—in which the ringboard and the chuckluck combine to rob. Rob is too tender a term. But we propose to state the matter gently. They get first the enormous freight charges, FOUR TIMES greater than through tariffs from the east, and ten or twelve times greater than if our early population had canaled their level prairies as the eastern states did. Then there is the elevator combine by which from five to EIGHTEEN cents is added on to the freight rates. Then there is the Millers' Association, in which the most enormous fortunes ever known in milling history have been made. Piled on top of all has been the vast bonding of the state by railway princes of both the twin cities, interest on which is paid by the unlucky farmer, not alone in freights inward, every codfish having to furnish some millionaire with a box-ticket to the theatre! Such is the underground foundation of Minneapolis. It rests squarely and firmly on her base-frauds. She is the congealed, crystalline, translucent and opalescent solidification of want, poverty, ignorance and sorrow, spread out over vast and lonesome prairies—regions where railroad enticements have brought the poor and the unlettered.

Hail Minneapolis! When the blistering summer sun lets loose its quiver to scorch the heart of toil, in yonder palace YOUR sons and daughters are monarchs of a shady boudoir; when the cheerless blizzard sweeps its bitter mantle around the barnlike home on treeless expanses, your children dance and dream the gilded hours away in homes which blossom like the gardens of the Lord. But there comes another day when Nineveh will be remembered, and the ashes of Sodom will be sprinkled upon your jeweled garments. Go to thou fraud.

Washburn's Policy.

Henderson Independent: Senator Washburn's policy seems to be Washburn first, Minneapolis second, and the balance of the State afterwards.

Almost but not quite. It looks more like Washburn first, Minneapolis second, Windom third and the deil take the hindmost.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A, aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

See our new clubbing offer with the St. Paul Daily News and call early and secure one of the leading dailies and THE JOURNAL at less than the price of the daily.

John Bergh left for the west this week. He has been for a long time a resident of this city, well and favorably known, and his many friends will wish him all kinds of good fortune.

Farmers who feel a proper interest in their own welfare should turn out next Monday and hear Prof. Allison, the veteral Farmers' Alliance Lecturer, at Court House Hall, at 2 o'clock p. m.

A. M. Malmberg and Jens Walbeck represented the town of Fisher in the farmers meeting on Monday night. They will do what they can for the spread of the good work in their town.

Ole Renne was up from Valley on Monday. Came up to see how it seems to ride on a first-class road—the D., C & N. Says the farmers are ripe for combinations or any other kind of rebellion.

Remember the day and hour of Prof. Allison's lecture—Monday, Jan. 13th, at 2 o'clock p. m. Farmers, this is specially your meeting. Don't fail to come out and hear what can be said in your behalf.

Hon. H. Steenerson went to St. Paul on Friday evening, returning this week. To a reporter of the Minneapolis Times he said: "I do not wish to be interviewed. I am down here strictly on business, and my business has no reference whatever to politics!"

Frank Cernousek represented the town of Tabor in the farmers meeting on Monday night. Frank says he has his new post office in running order and is now ready for business. Says farmers up there are anxious to organize an Alliance if it is possible to do so.

The woods are afire! Well, maybe not, but the prairies are alive with enthusiasm on the Alliance question. At last the farmers are becoming aroused, and if the good work goes on there will be a good healthy Alliance in every town in the county before spring. Let the good work go on.

A. O. Rolstad, a Crookston old-timer, has purchased Johnny Berg's restaurant on Robert street and is now prepared to attend to the wants of our citizens in that line. He invites all his friends to call in and see him at the new place of business. Everything as slick as a whistle and as neat as a new top.

Swan Anderson was down from Black River last week. Says farmers are all alive to the importance of doing something for their own protection and that they will organize an alliance. Like reports come from many towns. That's right boys, remember Providence helps those who try to help themselves.

A good many JOURNAL readers availed themselves of the opportunity to secure a first-class daily paper for only two dollars and fifty cents for both, and many expressed a desire to do so. We are pleased to say that we are able to continue the offer at an advance of only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. The St. Paul Daily News is one of the best evening papers published in St. Paul, if indeed it is not the best. It is conducted by an old experienced publisher who has spent his life in the newspaper business, and the daily News is the best effort of his life. The News contains all of the news, the market reports and also takes a lively hand in politics from a republican standpoint. No man can afford to do without The News at the price. If you are not a regular subscriber to THE JOURNAL it will require only TWO DOLLARS AND SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS to secure both for one year. Try us and we know you will be pleased.

Our New Clubbing Offer.

We are pleased to announce that we have made arrangements with the St. Paul Daily News whereby we can offer that enterprising sheet for only 25 cents advance over our former offer. Thus, for new subscribers and TWO DOLLARS AND SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS we will send the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and The St. Paul Daily News for one year. We are prepared to make liberal inducements to all in arrears. Call early as this offer is subject to withdrawal at an early date.

La grippe has put in an appearance in this city. The first victim was postmaster Dawley's commission. No other cases have been reported.

All who are interested in forming a township Alliance can have an opportunity to see Prof. Allison next Monday and arrange with him for meeting.

The Grand Forks Evening Star is the name of a new daily that twinked three twinks, got the grip and died, aged three days. Friends of the family invited.

Writing to renew his subscription Thos. Olafson assures THE JOURNAL of his good health and prosperity. We are assured from other sources that Tom is doing a big business and coining the wealth of the realm.

Rariton Chinchilla over coats $3.50 at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

C. T. Lauman, of the McIntosh Times was down over Sunday. Mr. Lauman, takes a good deal of interest in the affairs of the farmers, and is doing a good work for them through his paper.

Judge Christianson is somewhat under the weather. It was feared that he had typhoid fever, but it pans out differently. The Judge says it is not "La grippe," but whatever it is not it has "grip" enough to suit him.

[34-tf] W. G. COOKE.

Will Carlton came all the way down from Angus to attend the farmers meeting on Monday evening, and is very enthusiastic on the Alliance question. He wants an Alliance in his town.

Trying to get out a readable paper while a fellow has the rheumatism in the neck so that he can't hardly peep, may be considered a good "soft snap," but we don't think it is. If you don't believe it, try it.

Good Vermont gray overcoats $2, at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

From many townships comes the cheering news: "We are going to organize." Says one old farmer to us this week: "Well, if it don't do us as much good as we hope for, it will do us no harm, and I think it will be a good thing."

The lecture by Prof. Allison next Monday will be held at two o'clock so that all who wish can go home early. Every farmer within a radius of 12 to 15 miles should hear this veteran lecturer. He is full of facts that it will do you good to hear.

$100,000 to loan.

JOHN MCLEAN.

Don't neglect to secure a first-class weekly and daily paper while you can receive both at less than the price of the daily. TWO DOLLARS AND SEVENTY-FIVE cents secures you the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and The St. Paul Daily News. This offer is only for a limited time. Subject to withdrawal on ten days notice. Call early and avoid the rush.

Money to loan in large or small sums on good farms. Choice farms and city property for sale. CHAS. M. LOWE,

[17-tf] Broadway, Crookston.

Chris. Houston is having a severe siege with his amputated finger. That operation was delayed too long in hopes of saving the finger, with the result that his hand and arm swelled badly. At last accounts Dr. Watts thought he had the unruly member under control, and he has strong hopes that Chris. will pull through with no more serious loss. He may be laid up for some time, however.

Isadore Fortier arrived from Butte, Montana, on the late Saturday night's train and is stopping in the city for a few days. He is in the cattle business out there, and says he is doing very well. Thinks his family does not enjoy living there quite as well as here, though there are many nice families there. There are a dozen or fifteen Crookstonites there. Butte is principally a mining town and has lots of money in circulation.

$64.14 Crookston to New Orleans and return via the Northern Pacific. Proportionately low rates to the City of Mexico and all other southern cities. Call on E. L. Harrison, Agent, for full information.

Farmers, DO YOU REALLY feel that you are wronged out of your just share of the produce of your toil as wheat raisers? If you don't, you ought to by this time. Do you really desire relief from the system that is reducing you to the level with a common slave? Have you any doubts about the efficacy of the Farmers' Alliance to help you in your business? Do you desire light upon the aims and plans of the Alliance? Well, you have now an opportunity to hear what the Alliance has to say for itself and for you. Turn out and hear Prof. Allison next Monday afternoon. The hall should be crowded with farmers.

Children's winter caps 10c.
Boys' suits age 13 to 17, $2.50 at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

The Markets.

Plenty of hay on the market selling at from $6.50 to $7. Wood sells at from $2.50 to $3.00 for soft and from $3.50 to $4.00 as you can catch it. The vast timber lands east of us begin to have the effect of affording cheap fuel in this market.

What They Swore Off On.

On New Year's Day there was a general swearing off all round. We have interviewed our leading citizens and some of them own right up—more of 'em don't, and we have to guess.

Dick Hussey.—Telling ghost stories.
John McLean.—Booming.
Tom Morris.—La grippe.
Mike Leguee.—Leaving his buckskins at home when he goes visiting; pretzels and cheese and one thing and another.

Dr. Watts.—Everything the other fellow does.
Dr. Van Dyke.—Apprentices for clerks
Atty. Wm. Watts.—Dime Museums.
Atty. H. Steenerson.—U. S. District Attorney.
Sandy McKinnon.—Post offices.
Two of the Comrades.—The Post.
Maj. Stansbury————
All subject to change without notice.

Col. Cobham Post met in their new quarters on Friday evening and proceeded to install the following officers:

Commander—C. S. Spendley.

Jun. Vice Com.—Nels Olson.
Surgeon—Comrade Stowe.
Officer of the Day—Geo. Truax.
Quartermaster—O. H. Lucken.
Adjutant—V. B. Carruth.
Officer of the Guard—O. E. Sargent.
Sarg't Major—Carl Schmidt.
Q. M. Sargeant—Comrade Olson.

Tom Morris says he has La grippe sure!

Well, yes, rather. 1890 proves to be a husky youngster, so far as caloric goes.

Farmers, if you get hungry next Monday call at Rolstad's restaurant on Robert street for a good lunch.

Will and Henry Peterson left for a visit to friends in Indiana on Wednesday evening. Expect to be gone about a month.

Prof Allison will stop at the Germania house while in the city where he may be consulted by all wishing to arrange for meetings in their own neighborhood.

The farmers in Andover have made application for an Alliance charter and upon its arrival will organize. Andover promises to send a big delegation to the farmers meeting at court house hall on Monday next.

Turn out everybody to the farmers meeting on Monday next at the court house and listen to the veteran speaker Prof. John Allison who has the reputation of being one of the best alliance speakers in the state. Tell your neighbors about it and let us have a grand rally.

Eben Lancaster was surprised and pleased to greet the arrival of his old friend, Prof. C. W. Salie, who arrived this week with his famous talking machine. Eben has induced the Prof. to remain for a short time and exhibit his wonderful chatter box. They say it beats an old-fashioned "hen party" all holler.

Eben Lancaster has a real, genuine phonograph in his home. He says it is a daisy and as full of the future greatness of Crookston as the most sanguine boomer we have. He asked us down to inquire of the mashine "when will Dawley's commission arrive?" What do you think it said? "When the robbings nest agane," "When the Springtimecomesgentlanny" when the farmers ally—or thereabouts.

Will Peterson had a narrow escape last Sunday evening. He went down to Fisher to see—to make a farewell call on his best—friends there and intended to take the passenger home. The train was late and the first thing he knew it was reported at the depot. He made a break but was a few seconds too late, however he caught on to the third or fourth car but was thrown 19 or seven miles out into the country or such a matter. It was late when he showed up in this city next morning with his face and hands scratched up like he had been run through a sassige grinder. This is how he accounts for the scratches and he says next time he tries to stop a train under as good headway as that was he shall try for a backbolt or let her go—probably the latter.

Good Union cassamere overcoats at $3.50, $4.00, $4.50 and $5.00, at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

Why should not the farmers join the Alliance? There are many more reasons why they should than why they should not. Every other pursuit, every other interest has combined, trusts have been formed to plunder from the farmer on every hand until the time has come that he must combine or get lost in the deal. As one speaker on Monday night very aptly put it "a very serious question confronts the farmer and we must not be discouraged if we do not solve it in a month or a year and yet we must not give up trying." True words and they should be treasured deeply. In union there is strength is proved true by the success of those who are robbing the farmer for in numbers they are insignificant in comparison to the farmers. There is no good reason why a combination of farmers should be less successful than a combination of other business men, if they will put the same amount of energy into it their opponents do. The result of their efforts in Iowa should encourage all to put their shoulders to the wheel, determined to solve the problem satisfactorily or die trying.

Phonograph Exhibition.

Prof. C. W. Salie has rented the building on Robert street recently occupied by Ives & Hatlestad and will give exhibitions on Edison's wonderful phonograph, beginning this morning. All who have never seen this wonderful instrument will now have an opportunity to do so for only ten cents.

The Farmers' Meeting.

Monday night was one of the coldest if not the very coldest night of the season, the mercury going down into the bulb and roosting serenely there—notwithstanding this fact the city hall at 8 o'clock was crowded to its utmost capacity with an earnest body of men—farmers, met to consider a question of deep importance to them—organization. The secretary called the meeting to order and stated that he had just received a letter from the chairman, Andrew Steenerson, stating that owing to sickness in his family he would be obliged to be absent. On motion M. E. Kirsch was elected to fill the vacancy. The report of the committee appointed to draft a constitution was read as follows: "Your committee appointed to draft a constitution for the Polk County Farmers Relief Association beg leave to submit the following report: Committee met pursuant to adjournment at the office of Ives & Hattlestad in the McKinnon Black, on the evening of December 16th, all of the members being present. Organized by electing M. E. Kirsch chairman and H. E. Cooke, secretary. Drafts of constitution submitted by M. E. Kirsch and Chris. Steenerson were fully and freely discussed, but as no agreement could be arrived at the chairman suggested that the matter be reported back to the meeting with the suggestion that a county alliance be organized. The following resolution was then offered and unanimously adopted, viz:

WHEREAS—Having carefully considered the two proposed constitutions submitted to this committee and after ample discussion having failed to agree upon either of them now therefore be it

RESOLVED—That this committee report the same back to the meeting and recommend the adoption by the meeting of a County Farmers' Alliance charter and that the ideas embodied in the constitutions aforesaid be engrafted into the by-laws of said Alliance when so formed.

The secretary of the committee was instructed to procure such papers and instructions as may be necessary for organization. Adjourned."

Upon the report of the committee the secretary reported as the result of his mission with the State Alliance that the suggestion embodied in the recommend of the committee on constitution was impracticable as the County Alliance could only be organized through township alliances and suggested that the report should be amended in conformity therewith. It was therefore amended to recommend to that we form township alliances and the committee was discharged. Stirring addresses were made by Eli Steenerson, Wm. Cunningham, August Peterson, Jens Walbeck, Wm. Carlton, E. D. Childs, M. E. Kirsch and others and as the hour was growing late the organization of an alliance of Crookston township was post-poned until next Monday, when Prof. John Allison will be in attendance. Moved that we adjourn to meet at the court house, on Monday Jan. 13th, at 2 o'clock p. m.

DISSOLUTION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the firm of Edward H. Olson and George Vine, under the firm name of Vine & Olson, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. Edward H. Olson is to collect all monies owing to the firm and George Vine is to pay all bills of the firm, and is the successor of Vine & Olson.

How To Organize A Township Alliance.

By special request we present the following instructions for the organization of Township Alliances, which we find in The Great West:

Call a meeting of farmers. At that meeting, if you agree to form a township Alliance, elect a temporary president and secretary. Then make out an application for a charter in the following order:

To the Recording Secretary of the State Farmers' Alliance:

We, the undersigned, actual farmers, residing in the township of——in the county of Polk, State of Minnesota, hereby apply for a charter for an Alliance to be known as the——Farmers' Alliance in the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, subject to the constitution of the State Alliance.

At least seven farmers must sign the application and two dollars, charter fee, to the Recording Secretary of the State Alliance, who will send the charter to the person named as secretary in the application.

Appoint a committee on constitution and by-laws, with instructions to report at the next meeting of your organization.

At the first meeting agree upon a time and place to meet again for the purpose of adopting a constitution and by-laws, and electing the permanent officers of your Alliance. Meet only when you have business to transact, and make your meetings as interesting as possible.

Report the names and P. O. addresses of your officers, and the number of members in your Alliance, to the Recording Secretary of the State Alliance.

SUBORDINATE ALLIANCE CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1. This Alliance shall be constituted of at least seven members, who shall be practical and operative farmers, and shall be called——Alliance No.——, of the State of Minnesota.

ART. 2. This Alliance shall hold meetings at least once a month, and not oftener than once a week. Five members shall form a quorum.

ART. 3. Application for membership shall be made through a member of the Alliance, who shall personally vouch for the applicant as being a farmer and of good moral character. The application shall be referred to a committee of three members, which shall report at next meeting, unless further time is given. If the committee report favorably or unfavorably, a ballot shall be had, which shall be by depositing a written or printed ticket, bearing the word "yes" or bearing the word "No"—the former admitting to membership and the latter rejecting. If two-thirds of the members voting shall vote in favor of the reception of the candidate he shall be declared elected, otherwise he shall be declared rejected. If elected, he shall, to become a member, sign this constitution.

ART. 4. The officers of this Alliance shall be a President, a Vice-President, a Secretary and a Treasurer, who shall perform the duties of such officers as prescribed in Cushing's Manual. After the first election the officers shall be elected at the first regular meeting in July and January—the regular term of the office being six months.

ART. 5. There shall be a Finance Committee composed of three, named by the President, subject to the approval of the Alliance, who shall audit all bills before they are paid, and shall examine the books and accounts of the Treasurer and report as to their condition on the day or night of every election. When the Finance Committee have endorsed a bill favorable the Treasurer shall pay it, unless objection is made after the Secretary has publicly announced that such a bill has been presented and approved. Then the vote of the Alliance shall be taken upon it.

ART. 6. By-laws made not conflicting with this constitution.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn

Northfield News: Hon. Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, the defeated candidate for District Attorney takes his defeat philosophically and gives utterance to some manly words. Mr. Steenerson is a good man in every respect and usually says good things when he opens his mouth.

The Great West says: The Alliance is in earnest, and intends that there shall not be an intelligent farmer in the State who, inside of a year, shall not be inside of an Alliance. The blockheads we will leave for the corporations. When God makes a man for a serf it is very difficult to do anything with him but let him remain a serf.

Northfield News: All this abuse of Senator C. B. Buckman is entirely uncalled for. The editor of this paper has been associated with him in political work and a most honorable gentlemen have we always found him. Reflections upon Senator Buckman's honor and integrity are sadly out of place and should make him friends. The News simply does not believe the slanders.

The St. Paul Globe of the 6th says that Washburn has dropped Johnson for Collector and will urge the appointment of O. H. Lucken. It pays a very handsome and deserved tribute to Mr. Lucken's worth as a public official and a man, and then, after a lengthy article going to show that Washburn has dropped Johnson and will recommend Lucken, says it is not sure whether it is bonafide or only a blind. Mr. Johnson is reported to have said that he don't care a continental whether Washburn endorses him or not, or words to that effect.

We were asked the question last week: "Do you advise the abolition of the Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners?" Certainly not. The sufferings of the people under the wrongs inflicted by the old Minneapolis Millers Association, when they held everything in their vice-like grip are too fresh in our memory to wish to get back to a system that gave the buyers absolute control of the markets, to wish to return to that, and while the present system is not satisfactory by any means, we are not satisfied that it would not be very much better if properly conducted than it is, and we do think, that with a few changes it would work satisfactorily. The system was devised by capable men, earnestly seeking relief from the burdens imposed by the greed of capitalists, and if properly conducted would, we think, be far more beneficial than it has so far proved. In the very outset we should suggest its removal from the arena of politics as far as possible to do it. The appointments to be made by the Supreme Judges, who should be guided in their choice by no other influence except the fitness of the candidate for the position. No old line elevator man, miller or railroad man should be deemed eligible for the trust. The force should be composed of men chosen by the farmers themselves, through the Alliance. The system of inspection should extend to the country elevators in some way, so that the grain which has to run the gauntlet would start right. The present system may be as near right as can be for the producer who ships his own wheat, but it does not reach the man who drives up to the country buyer with his little load and sees his wheat gobbled up at one or two grades below its actual value, and is docked all the way from four to ten or fifteen pounds, or, in fact, all he will stand. The system, if perfect, should give as ample protection and relief to the poor settler who raises but a hundred bushels or so as to the man who cultivates sections and knows how to ship for himself and look out for his own interests. It should provide a to be worth its cost to the state, and that is just what it does not do. Our plan would be first to elect a farmer legislature, take the Board out of politics entirely, give them all the power the Legislature can confer and then, if they don't attend to their business properly fire them at once and try another crowd. Hunt around and see if we haven't got some Iowa material lying 'round handy, that is a mighty good kind of a Board to have, anyhow get something with life enough to remind people that they are not all dead already. It would be a good idea to get some one who had been bit by the serpent, and who had not forgotten what hurt him, one who could see more money in obtaining the rights of the producer than he could in any other channel. No, while the system is by no means perfect, its projectors knew what they wanted and made a good start, and it has been tried so long now that all it lacks should be perfectly clear, and the application of the remedy far more simple than was the task in the beginning. We trust that good may come from the agitation of the subject, and we believe it will. We do not say that our method of appointment is the best that could be devised, but it may call out the very best that could be devised.

THE COLLECTORSHIP.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, to Pioneer Press, Jan. 5.—Ole H. Lucken of Crookston, is the latest compromise candidate for collector of internal revenue for Minnesota. Mr. Lucken is a Scandinavian, an old soldier, a G. A. R. man and has been county treasurer of Polk County for years. After Eugene Hay was appointed district attorney and Halvor Steenerson was turned down, and it seemed apparent that Danahower would be appointed, several prominent Scandinavians of Minneapolis and the Fifth district began looking for a compromise candidate of their own nationality, and picked up Lucken as the most available. Lucken is to be offered to Senator Davis, it is said, as a compromise, giving Danahower the marshalship, if this would be satisfactory. Lucken is not put forward as a Washburn candidate, although it is said that the junior senator would be content if he were satisfactory to Mr. Davis. The fact that Lucken was a candidate, and some of Senator Washburn's friends were pushing him, has created the impression that the senator has deserted Marcus Johnson. Senator Washburn refused to be interviewed upon the collectorship to-day and a denial or affirmation of the story that he would be friendly to Lucken in case of Senator Davis' endorsement could not be obtained. It is said by those who have been urging Lucken's appointment that in his success federal patronage would be straightened out. It would give the Scandinavians the office they want and at the same time give the Fifth district one of the federal offices. Danahower's appointment as marshal would provide for the Second district. The First has Col. Edwards for collector of customs, and the Fourth has Eugene Hay as district attorney. The Third is the only one not provided for, but could be taken care of when the surveyor general is named. Of course, Senator Buckman was supposed to have the inside track for that place, but he is now a St. Paul man and hails from the cities, which several country editors claim are too well supplied with offices. There is no doubt but what the president intends to appoint a Scandinavian to one of the good offices in Minnesota, and he does not want to appear in a way of turning on on senator and upholding the other. It has been represented to him right along that the collector of internal revenue should be a Scandinavian; that it was an office of their choice, and the best interests of the party would be served by naming a representative man of that nationality for the place. From the representations made by many of the prominent Scandinavians of Minneapolis and northern Minnesota it is likely that the president believes that Lucken would be a good appointment. If Senator Davis consents, Lucken for collector and Danahower for marshal are appointments that are quite likely to be.

THE SNARL IN MINNESOTA

Attorney General Clapp Goes East to Argue Important Cases.

St. Paul Daily News.

Attorney General Clapp left for Washington, D. C., last evening, where he is to appear before the United States Supreme Court on behalf of the State, in two cases involving the powers of the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission, in the matter of establishing charges by railroad companies. The matter was carried up to the United States Supreme Court by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Minnesota Eastern Railroad Companies, upon appeals from decisions of the State Supreme Court at its October term, 1888. The appeal by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company, is from the rates fixed by the Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners for the transportation of milk, and by the Minnesota Eastern Company from the rates established for switching charges at Minneapolis.

Retail Agency.

Merchants Retail Commercial Agency.

The Merchnt's Retail Commercial Agency of Chicago, have one representative here for the purpose of establishing a branch agency in the city. The object of this agency is in brief, the organization of business men into an association for the purpose of protection against delinquent debtors, and at the same time offers a system of collection of bad accounts. By its system every member is enlightened by the experience of other, though the medium of quarterly and by monthly abstracts, as they are established in twenty states, the information they can furnish is drawn from a wide field. The protective system is enforced by the adoption of a penalty contract. They have been in existence between four and five years, and from evidence before us, the branches which have been in existence the longest are enjoying the greatest prosperity. They have upon the membership roll a list of over 75,000 business men and can refer to the secretaries of over 2,000 branches. That it is operating upon a legal basis is shown by the fact that it is incorporated under the laws of the states of Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska.

We believe that the organization of the buisness men of this city with an association of this kind cannot be productive of any other than good results.

The following extracts from the Chicago Inter Ocean shows the status in which it has been placed by the courts.

The noted case of William Nicholson, of Streator, Ill., against Mr. Julius Moses, of this city, was tried before Judge Blanchard of the circuit court at Ottawa on Monday last.

Mr. Moses was a member of The Merchants Retail Commercial Agency which has its offices at No. 53 Dearborn street, this city. Nicholson owed Mr. Moses a bill and refused to pay it after repeated dunnings and then Mr. Moses caused Mr. Nicholson's name to be placed in the Reference Book published by the agency. Nicholson sued Moses for conspiracy and defamation of character Judge Blanchard held in his decision that the agency was on an equal footing with Bradstreet's and Dun's and differed only in that the latter protected the wholesale while the former protected the retail merchants against dishonest customers; and when a debtor would not pay his debts to one merchant there was no reason why he should be permitted to obtain credit from another, by compelling the first merchant to keep silent as to his loss.

The decision is the first on record with regard to black-listing and is considered of great importance among retail merchants who do a credit business.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., JANUARY 8, 1890.

Letter from Southwestern Missouri.

FOR THE PRAIRIE FARMER, BY J. M. RICE.

The completion of a year's residence in what some designate as the Garden of the Southwest, gives an opportunity of comparing it with other sections. A life-long residence in Iowa—with the exception of two seasons in Kansas—gives of course only a limited practical knowledge of the different sections, but enough perhaps to justify the assertion that there is not so much difference as usually supposed, and the world is pretty evenly divided, and that if a man is doing reasonably well in any section, that that is about the best place to stay.

Prosperity and adversity will be found everywhere; the advantages in one particular will be offset by disadvantages in other things. Still it will prove to be true that it will be found necessary to use judgment in selecting a location, and that great differences will be found even in the same sections.

But with the exception of localities where homesteads might yet be secured, the price to be paid generally very fairly indicates the advantages; and if the necessary means to buy is had it makes but little difference as to location for profit. Usually other considerations as to climate, schools, villages, cities, etc., will have much more real weight.

Good land, improvements, good markets etc., command a price everywhere commensurate with their importance. The cheap lands will generally be found—while they may be equal to the best in some cases—to have the disadvantage of inaccessibility to market, cost to improve, or some such thing to equalize. The cheap land in quality may be dear at any price. and in many cases the question to be decided, even in cheap good land, is only one of acres as between it and the higher-priced land, as the profits in cultivation may be the same from the added price received for products.

Difference of climate is generally considered a serious one, the residents of one questioning how the people of the other can endure the heat or cold, the wet or dry, the winds or calms, as the case may be. There are doubtless those who constitutionally can endure one better than the other, but usually it is simply a matter of choice—a "getting used to it," or preparation for it. Besides, the natural laws governing all sections provide for all these things. Where more is required more is supplied, and contrary-wise.

The denizen of the South thinks he could not endure the rigor of the Northern winter. Perhaps he could not, or at least it would go rough with him; but the Northerner buttons his overcoat and lets the snow fly. His stock has abundance of feed from his rich fields, they are well housed, and he cares but little for the storm. Like his Southern neighbor, he is not posted; he thinks the heat of summer and the rains of winter unendurable. But the general feelings in different sections is, "if I could only get some place besides here." The Northman thinks, as one expressed it, "I want to go where they don't have to feed thirteen months in the year," or, "where all I raise in summer is not eaten up in winter." And the Southman thinks if he could but get where the rich, black soil reaches below the farthest penetrating roots, how much better he could do than on the sandy or gravelly land of his present place. The East thinks of the, to them marvellous richness of Western prairies, and the West envies the East of its high prices for products received. And so each locality is comparing with others, forgetting that the drawbacks are perhaps as great as those which they have to contend with. From personal knowledge we give these: We should prefer to cultivate three acres of corn in the loose soils of portions of Kansas than one here, though the one acre might produce an equal amount in a long series of years. We should already undertake the keeping of the same amount of stock on the same acreage of land in Iowa as here, though they might possibly rough it through here better, but not to profit, the difference in favor of the short winter here being balanced by the better pasturage there opening earlier and closing later in the season. While this is in many ways, as compared with the North, a more delightful climate, yet though work can be carried on all winter, evidences of prosperity and adversity are about the same as elsewhere. So the lesson is—contentment.

MORE GANG-WORK.

The Tactics of the Combine.

The Great West.

The following article is taken from the Dawson Sentinel. The editor, Mr. C. J. Coghlan, is one of the truest spirits, and most independent thinkers on the Minnesota provincial press. We shall hear from him again. The condition related is but one of a dozen which has marked the slaughter of granger rights during the past five years. Read it, farmers, and let us know what you think:

"If the farmers of Minnesota are deluding themselves with the idea that there is a free and open market for their grain it is high time that the illusion be dispelled. The fact is that to-day in spite of the folios of "grain laws," "warehouse laws," "elevator laws," et cetera, that encumber our statute books, the primary grain markets of this state are entirely under the control of the railroad managers. Our high-priced and choicely preserved ornament—the honorable Board of Railway and Warehouse Commissioners—can politely request Mr. Truesdale or Mr. J. J. Hill to allow a free and open market on their roads, and these gentlemen can as politely tell the commissioners to go to the devil. And they might as well go to the devil for all the good they can do in this matter. Any railroad in this state can grant any one man or any certain number of men a monopoly of the grain handling business on their line, and every bushel of grain that is shipped must pay any tribute they may see fit to exact, be it one cent or ten. It is true that a farmer can ship his grain for himself if he can haul enough in one day to load a car, but not one farmer in a hundred can do this; so it cuts no figure in the case. The generally prevalent idea that any man can erect a grain house and buy and ship on his own account regardless of the Minneapolis wheat rings, is entirely erroneous. No man or body of men can engage in that business unless it be satisfactory to the railroad managers. And in order to be satisfactory it is necessary that buyers must be connected with the Minneapolis rings.

All this information has been acquired by Mr. Wm. P. Murray, of this county, at an expense of a number of dollars and a good many days' time. Mr. Murray had made all the arrangements to erect and operate a line of independent grain houses on this road and was supported in the matter by many business men and farmers who were aware that the elevator companies now operating houses on this line had formed a pool and were in reality but one concern. The feeling at the east end of the line where there are no farmer houses was much stronger than in this county where at present our markets are upheld by three independent houses.

When Mr. Murray, after spending a good deal of time and considerable money, had perfected his arrangements for handling the grain, he applied to the railroad company for permission to build the houses. He was met with a flat refusal and informed that no more independent houses could be erected on this road. An appeal to the railroad commissioners was barren of results, as they acknowledged themselves to be powerless to act in the matter.

There is no law to prevent the railroad company granting a monopoly to any one concern of the entire grain business on its line. Thus all the boasted "farmers legislation" amounts to nothing—absolutely nothing. For if one concern is privileged to handle all the grain shipped over any line, there is nothing to prevent them stealing as much of it as they please. Of what use are low freight rates and established grades and state inspection and all the other safeguards we are supposed to possess, if the railroad company can compel us to pay any price which one of their monopolies sees fit to impose for handling the grain? Fortunately for Lac qui Parle County we have three independent houses and these, with the one at Clarkfield, are all their are on this line of road. The four Minneapolis companies operating houses are virtually but one concern, and, as the railroad company has started out to foster the monopoly, it is probably only a question of time when our independent houses must succumb to the pressure.

It does seem that the farmers are powerless to cope with the railroads and wheat rings. For a time it looked as if we had an open market, but as soon as our last legislature had shown that it was friendly to the railroads, the latter showed their true spirit and the "open market" was no more.

Mr. Murray assures us that he is not yet through with the fight. He proposes to build a house either at Dawson or Madison upon his own land and then demand a side track from the railroad. If this is refused he will carry the case into the courts, providing he can obtain the support of the railroad commissioners. This is a case in which every farmer of the state is vitally interested, and if the commissioners are wise they will stand by Mr. Murray to the bitter end. If we are entirely at the mercy of the Minneapolis rings we want to know it now, and the farmers of the state will elect to the next legislature men who will stand by their interests though they have to wade through rivers of gold. For in spite of our deplorable experience of last winter, we know that there are men in the state who cannot be bought. If we have been sold out in the matter of an open market it will pay us to spend a good deal of our time in finding men whom we are sure we can trust. And it will be done."

The article taken from the Dawson Sentinel, as above, is crowded full of pungent facts. If any farmer receiving this paper fails to read it, then he fails in the fulfillment of his duty. And, if after reading it, he does not feel inspired to act from this time henceforward with the Alliance—in every possible way—he fails again in coming up to the full standard of his manhood.

But we have faith in the farmer. We believe that they will rouse—will awaken to the slogan that has gone forth! If these things can continue unheeded, then indeed the case of the toiler is a hopeless one.

But the case of Mr. Murray is only one of many. Side tracks have been ripped up. Men have been crowded out of their own elevators. Warehouses have been moved. Men have been ruined within the last three years. Your grain laws, your railway commission, your granger laws are farces which no rich white man is bound to respect. This is a stunner—but look over the record. See what has been done to destroy you, and see how every man who indignantly raises a hand against outrage becomes the butt of abuse and ridicule! How long will you continue to sell your country for party when the reeking base of politics is soaked with corruption; and the framework is reared up with money stolen from you.

How Our Farmers Are Robbed.

Waseca Herald.

"The London Financial Times, of October 24th, announces that the shares and debentures of the Chicago & Northwest Granaries company are now 'over applied for,' and the list is closed. The capitalization is equal to about $1,200,000, in shares of $50 each, and the profits are expected to be not less than 50 per cent. per annum. The property comprises the Star elevator at Minneapolis, a flour mill at Canby, and 75 elevators along the Chicago & Northwestern road in Minnesota and Dakota. The business is reported in the prospectus as having paid dividends of 28 per cent. in 1886, 22 per cent. in 1887, and 30 per cent. in 1888. Also that the 'country elevator pays four or five cents per bushel less than the wheat can be sold for,' and also that it does 'considerable' in selling coal, seed, salt, etc. to the farmers at the same time the grain is bought." The English investors are therefore justified in expecting 15 per cent. profit even upon the greatly increased (watered) capitalization.

Neither the mill or the elevator managers of this country have ever before given the public an inside view of their profits, and this revelation was only intended, probably, for the English investors. Nevertheless, it may open the eyes of our people a little. Is it any wonder that our farmers (and, as a consequence, the rest of us) are growing poor, while a few men are accumulating fortunes—immense fortunes—combinations which draw money from the producing masses unjustly? When will the people elect legislators that will make such robbery impossible?

Feeding Sheep in Minnesota.

Montevideo Leader.

Minnesota is the natural feeding ground for Montana sheep, and just the place to fit them for the market. Sheep grow to a good size and become strong and healthy on the Montana ranches, but they do not get fat. They need grasses and coarse feed we raise in abundance. They can be brought here in double-decked cars at a trifling expense, and are sold here for less than it costs to raise them, simply because they are not fit to kill. Minnesota farmers can make money buying them and feeding them for the winter and early spring markets, and considerable attention is being given to this scheme.

Marshall County Banner.

We are in receipt of a circular from A. C. Clausen, Chief Inspector of grain, which is explanatory and in support of the operation of the law providing for the inspection of grain. The circular reads easily, and we have no reason to question the truth of its assertions; but it does not touch upon the methods adopted for taking advantage of the great army of grain growers who do not ship directly to terminal points, but have to run their grain through the elevators of local markets. The facts are something as follows: A farmer hauls his wheat to an elevator where the agent grades it, then ships to a terminal point where it is perhaps graded the same and so reported to the general office of a great line of line of elevators; that general office sends word to the local agent that the grade fell off at the State Inspector's office, which of course in the instance above reported is an absolute lie, but the local agent must be controled by it and when the same wheat comes again, he grades it lower, and the elevator company makes a "haul." That's practice. One remedy we think of would be for the State Inspector to report the grade of wheat directly to the identical person who loaded it as well as to the nominal shipper who sits at the end of a line of elevators a thousand miles long, figuring how to evade the law relating to weighing and inspection of grain. Another way would be for the state to put a man at every railroad station, to whom the State Inspector could report the grade and any person interested could easily find out how wheat shipped from that station was being graded. As it is, the governmental machinery employed for the enforcement of laws intended for the protection of grain growers, is powerless, useless and expensive, because it yields no substantial results.

From The Northwestern Agriculturist.

Raising cows for the use of city people, and for milkmen who furnish milk to such as do not keep cows, might be taken up with profit on farms within 200 miles of the large cities of the Northwest. Good grade cows of any of the dairy breeds, well-broken to milk, will always bring good prices. They should be from three to five years old, producing a good quantity of milk of good quality. Holstein grades, from sires whose dams are well up in milk and butter records, would, as a rule, suit milkmen, while people who keep cows to supply their own tables would prefer a Jersey or a Guernsey, or a medium sized Holstein. Both these classes of buyers live where feed is high, and understand that it costs as much to keep a poor cow as a good one, and, as a rule, would not take and keep a poor one as a gift. Such cows as are wanted should bring from $60 to $75 each in Minneapolis or St. Paul, and with a little care they can be bred with certainty by any farmer in the Northwest, and the business would pay better than wheat growing, or raising steers for the beef market.

An Iowa dairyman began with a herd of cows that produced an average of 150 pounds of butter a year, but, believing he could do better, he determined to improve his herd every year by the use of carefully selected sires. He now has a herd which averaged, last year, over 300 pounds of butter per cow. The cost of keeping was $39.50 per cow and the net receipts above feed $46.41. His herd numbers 27 cows. This is the experience of a farmer and dairyman who knew what he wanted to do and determined to accomplish it.

"How shall I proceed with a herd of native cows to build a dairy herd?" asks a reader. The first requisite is a purebred sire of Friesian, Jersey or Guernsey blood, strong in butter producing line. The better bred the bull, the more rapidly the dairy qualities will show themselves and the more marked the improvement. Get the best advice you can from an expert in the selection. With the Friesian sire a large flow of milk will result. With the Jersey and Guernsey, look for a small flow of milk. Veal the bull calves. Keep the heifer calves and when they reach the proper age breed them to their sire and fix the superior dairy qualities by a double cross of dairy blood. For use on the heifers resulting from this double cross, be sure to obtain a sire that will still further develop the special dairy qualities you have been aiming at, so that there will be no going backward. Stick to the dairy breed at first selected, and do not mix the blood of different breeds. A few years of careful work with a definite purpose, will give you a herd equal to purebreds for all practical dairy purposes.

James Hay, of West Laurens, New York, has a herd of grade and purebred Guernseys from the milk of which he makes butter at the rate of a pound for every 16.66 pounds of milk. He feeds, in the morning, as a grain ration, two or three pounds of a mixture made up of 100 pounds corn meal, 125 of cotton seed meal, and 150 pounds wheat shorts. Cotton seed meal has not yet been introduced in the Northwest, and it will be some time before it becomes popular here, as there is a wise disposition to find out what we can grow at home which is just as good or better, but those who wish to make butter to the full capacity of cows must feed grain, in some form.

DOLLAR WHEAT.

The Great West.

There is an invisible, inexpressible something in the air which says wheat is worth a dollar a bushel. No one has ever formulated a statement, to our knowledge as to why and wherefore this feeling exists. If any one has ever given this sentiment more weight than a passing whim, indistinctly connected with past history, we have never seen it.

But suppose that what comes to us as the breath of a superstition, should prove, on careful examination, to be based upon both "realty" and reality! It is not our purpose to give an analysis of the nature of money—no one would read a seven-column article.

One thing is positive, however, in relation thereto, that gold or silver, or, gold and silver, are not "standards" of value—as they fluctuate according to supply—even though we cannot record the fluctuation. The standard of money is, and always will be, an inexact mortgageable value of every item of property.

That is money. There never was any other. Money is not an entity. It is neither silver nor gold, or printed paper. It is the substantial backing of property given to any element used for convenient transfer.

When the amount of money is based upon the value of what it is used to "exchange," which value is always what the world would give for the property if forced to take it, then there is an equilibrium—and good times have rarely been known except when a government has been forced to thus mortgage its commonwealth by mighty trials. But in every instance when the banker has been forgotten in the emergency of great trial, the people have prospered—then there have been "good times." There never was a reduction of "currency" far below such an inexact point without panics and demoralization.

The history of England, from 1812 to '30 is convincing on this point.

The history of the French assignat is proof.

The records of this country sustain it.

If any one chooses to controvert this proposition we will bring out the seven-columns of intesesting facts.

Now then—when such a monetary condition exists as that "exchange" (currency) equals the mortgageable value of exchangeable material—in other words when "exchange" is equal to exchange, we will find that the breadstuff of the world is the standard—and that the standards of exchange being that dollar, a dollar is the equivalent of one bushel of wheat. The wheat is, of course, wholly based upon land, and yet land-values are based upon wheat-production. And by wheat, breadstuffs are practically meant—as other grains fill the shortages of wheat.

This proposition involves the doubling of our present currency—and the reduction of the number of banks.

That certain "invisible, inexpressible something" that convinces us that the Doctor is right is the fact that the consumer pays a great deal more than that for his bread, enough to pay a reasonable profit to everybody who handles wheat and leave a good round dollar for the producer. If our system was perfect we verily believe this would be the case but you must weed out the option gambling and give the producer an equal chance with the buyer, the miller and the baker.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A. aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest.......80 00

Total yearly payments...$168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest.......$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of....... 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years....... 1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest.......$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00

Total.......$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

THE JOURNAL received a letter last week from T. W. Kelley, a former member of our police force. Tom has a good situation out there and likes the country very much. Says he is laying up many shekels, but from the undertone of the letter, we take it that he would not advise any of his friends here to go unless they have a situation engaged in advance. He says most of our former fellow citizens are doing nicely. One feature in the case seems to please him, the number of days in the year a man can labor comfortably.

A SUDDEN CALL.

On Saturday evening, Jan. 4th, Isidore Fortier arrived from Butte, Montana, and was about the city attending to his business and greeting his friends, apparently in perfect health and excellent spirits. On Wednesday afternoon his brother Remy asked him to go out home with him. He complained of a slight headache and a chilly sensation, but finally concluded to go, and about 5 o'clock they started. Before they had gone far Mr. Fortier complained of being extremely cold and got out to warm up by exercise, but failed to get relief, and when near Mr. E. Lanctot's place, near Gentilly, he got in and told his brother to hurry along as fast as possible. Upon arrival, he received all the attention possible to give, and his brother urged sending for the doctor, but Mr. F. said it was not serious enough to warrant the trouble, he would be all right soon. The next morning he was again urged to call a physician but did not consider it advisable until nearly noon, when he commenced spitting blood. Dr. Dunlop was then hastily summoned. Upon his arrival Mr. Fortier was sitting in an easy chair. After examination he decided that bleeding was necessary, went to the case for the instruments. When he again reached Mr. Fortier's side Mr. F. was dead. It is said that Mr. F. was subject to heart disease, though we are told that the doctor pronounced it a case of pneumonia. A dispatch was at once sent to his wife at Butte, who, with the children started on Friday morning arriving on Saturday night. The funeral services were conducted in this city on Monday, when a large concourse assembled to pay their last respects to an old friend and an upright citizen. Mr. Fortier was born in Beauharnais, Canada, was about 42 years of age and leaves a mother and father, one brother, a wife and three little daughters to mourn his loss. He came to this city in its infancy and has been identified with its history as one of its leading citizens. He built the Fortier Block, on the corner of Broadway and Robert, and was here negotiating for its sale. His sudden death was a great shock to his many friends who saw him around during the first of the week apparently in such perfect health.

Herman Helgeson, the genial postmaster from Ovetia was in the city last week.

The court room was filled to overflowing on Monday by an earnest lot of farmers, anxious to listen to the able address by Prof. Allison, and all were immensely pleased with the remarks of the speaker. A strong alliance was formed and the farmers seem to be determined to do all in their power to protect their rights in the matter of markets. If this spirit is carried out they will be successful.

J. H. Herbert, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in the city this week looking after affairs on the old Payne-Corrigan farm that has just been sold to a Brooklyn party for $90,000. Mr. Herbert will be the manager of the farm and is now enroute for Brooklyn to make preparations for coming out next spring. Mr. H. is owner of one of the noted trotters of the world. The animal has recently been shipped from California and he may be sent here next spring. Mr. H. is very much pleased with what he has seen of Crookston and believes we have a bright future before us. He expects to return some time in March.

The annual meeting of the Scandia-American bank, Crookston, was held at their banking room, Tuesday afternoon, the following were elected directors: O. Hendrickson, Louis Ellington, A. G. Gallasch, A. D. Stephens, J. H. Locken, O. H. Lucken, Max Ericsson, E. P. Pierce, C. O. Christianson, Halvor Steenerson and A. E. Johnson, St Paul. The new board of directors met in the evening and elected O. Hendrickson, President; A. G. Gallasch, Vice President; C. O. Christianson, 2d Vice President. A. G. Gallasch, the cashier since the organization, declined a re-election and Mr. Ellington the efficient assistant cashier was elected cashier. On motion a committee was appointed to draw up a resolution, signed by the directors and president to A. G. Gallasch expressing their appreciation for the successful and very satisfactory managment of the bank since its organization.

IT IS A BIRD.

The Farmers' Meeting met pursuant to adjournment at the court house at two o'clock on Monday Jan. 13th. The chairman, Andrew Steenerson briefly stated the object of the meeting, and on motion appointed, J. J. Ide, J. E. Chilback, Ole K. Laknes, F. Bivins and H. E. Cooke, a committee on resolutions. The chair then introduced the speaker of the day, Prof. John Allison, who gave an earnest and eloquent address upon the situation of farmers of the present day, showing by the depletion of farms east, the depreciation in value of farms elsewhere, and the methods of capitalists in other lines of business whereby they absorb an undue portion of the profits of the producer the necessity for organization. He said: "Farmers rights? Why of course you have rights! You have the right to buy wild railroad lands at from $8 to $15 per acre, acquire title and mortgage yourself for all you are worth, to buy horses and machinery wherewith to improve that wild land and give it the only value it ever had, and to buy seed wherewith to sow it; to work incessantly until the crop is made, take all the chances on making crop and then, when you have threshed you have the right to take your wheat to the elevator—but there your rights end. There all you have to do is to humbly take off your hat and say to the great presiding mogul! Please sir, what will you grade my wheat! What will you dock my wheat, and there you learn that if you get the cost of production you are extremely lucky. All trades control their prices. Why don't you? The alliance proposes to help you to do this very thing! What does your wheat average in this market?" (Voices, "55 cents," "60 cents," "40 cents," "48 cents" and various other prices were named.) Continuing the speaker said: "Well we will say it averages 60 cents. What do I pay for it as a consumer? $1.50. Yes, sir, one dollar and fifty cents per bushel for wheat that costs the buyer in this market from 35 to 60 cents. Why I can prove that the railroad makes 50 per cent, the elevator 50 per cent and the miller 50 per cent. That's 150 per cent ain't it? Well I can prove it just the same! The alliance aims to change all this, and will surely do it if you are true to the sacred trusts imposed upon you. Within the shadow of the church spire of old Trinity church, on Wall street are five men who control millions of money. What do they do they do with it? Buy legislators, courts etc., to the end that capital may control the country. The alliance aims to check that end, now you have a chance to do it but I cannot say how long you will have that chance. You must not expect a Moses made to order to lead you out of bondage. Things are not done that way any more, but you must take hold of the work yourselves. Do your children rejoice that they are the children of farmers? No, they want to get away, to live in cities, to accumulate money faster than they see you doing it—they do if they are ambitious to get ahead in the world. Now this is all wrong and the alliance seeks to right it. The alliance is simply an organization of farmers, conducted by farmers in the interest of farmers without regard to politics. How does it benefit you? I will give you one instance. One alliance determined to ship its own produce and hired a man to attend to it. In six months they saved to the producer $30 per car on wheat and made 40 per cent on lumber shipped in. At a certain town an alliance elevator paid for itself in the savings of one season. At a certain village only 120 miles from Minneapolis the difference in the price of wheat was 17 cents. The alliance signed a protest, sent it to me and I sent it to John L. Gibbs who went to that railroad company with it. What was the result? In very short order freight took a tumble of seven cents. Where the road would doubtless have ignored the complaint from one man it was a different thing when the alliance took hold of it and it will prove so in the majority of cases." Time and space forbid us presenting the many excellent points the speaker made. Suffice it to say that he talked about two hours and then the business of securing charter members to Crookston Alliance began. Meanwhile the committee on resolutions returned and presented the following resolutions:

WHEREAS—The Farmers' Alliance of Minnesota is an organization of the farmers, for the purpose of protecting and furthering the interests of agriculture, and does not require any political or religious test as a condition of membership, we, the farmers of Polk County as represented in this meeting have RESOLVED 1ST, That we will not countenance any movements on the part of the officers of the alliance to fraternize with any political party. That any attempts on the part of the Executive Board of the Alliance to commit the farmers composing the membership of the alliance to any definite action regarding the existing political parties in this state, without the deliberate consultation and vote of the assembled delegates of the alliance in the Annual Meeting of that body, must be considered as an infringment upon the rights of the members.

RESOLVED 2D, That while we endorse the work of our Executive Board as far as that work has had for its object the increase of the membership of local alliances we assert strongly that no executive officer has any right to assume the office of dictator, and we will not consent to any action of our officers beyond the limits of our constitution.

RESOLVED 3D, That the conflict in which we are now engaged and which promises a decided victory in the near future, should not be imperilled by petty jealousies, nor by the ambitions of men who may hope to advance their personal political interests by means of the alliance. The struggle now going on, at great cost to those who are fighting at front is too important to admit the "fine Italian hand" of the political manipulator. That the farmers' alliance having come to stay; that being the farmers organization; organized by the farmers, of the farmers and for the farmers will not surrender its inherent rights and privileges until its work is done, and "Justice to All" is proclaimed throughout the land.

RESOLVED 4TH That, recognizing the fact known to all, that the farmer is robbed of the profits of his business by combinations, trusts and corporations sustained by large capital which dominates and keeps in subjection producers and laborers and also believing that the best and only means of securing our liberties and maintaining our priviliges is to organize as a body, we believe The Farmers Alliance to be one of the most efficient means to liberate ourselves and procure for us and our children the blessings of American citizenship.

RESOLVED 5TH, That it is the sense of this committee that a vote of thanks by this meeting is due to Prof. John Allison for the clear and succinct manner in which he has presented the benefits to be derived through the alliance, as well as for his noble and untiring efforts to benefit the farmers of Minnesota.

Signed,
J. J. IDE, Chairman.
J. E. CHILBACK,
OLE K. LAKNESS,
F. BIVINS,
H. E. COOKE.

On motion the report of the committee was accepted and adopted unanimously. Forty-nine names having been enrolled Crookston Alliance organized by electing Frank Bivins, President, J. J. Ide, Vice President, A. N. Hixson, Secretary, H. A. Wyand, Treasurer.

On motion the following delegates were elected to the State convention to be held in St. Paul sometime in March, viz: H. E. Cooke, A. N. Hixson and Peter Cornelius.

Moved that we adjourn to meet on Monday Jan. 27th 1890, at 2 p. m., at the city hall.

MERCHANTS ORGANIZATION.

On Monday evening the merchants of this city met in the city hall and listend to the explanation of Mr. Geo. H. Estabrooke, of the advantages offered by organizing under the protective system, represented by "The Merchants Retail Commercial Agency, of Chicago, Ills." The organization of Crookston Branch was perfected and the following elected officers:—A. M. Stowart, President; A. M. Childs, Vice-President; W. E. McKenzie, Secretary; O. J. Barnes, Treasurer. Executive Board—E. W. Wile, chairman, Louis Fontaine, W. S. Gervais, A. Holmboe and J. E. O'Brien.

A fine is provided as a penalty for a violation of the clause in such constitution, which provides that no member of the Crookston branch of "The Merchants' Retail Commercial Agency" shall give credit so a person who does not in some honorable manner adjust his indebtedness with another member of "The Merchants Retail Commercial Agency." No person shall be referred to the members of this or any other branch as owing a member of "The Merchants Retail Commercial Agency," until such person has been given a full and fair opportunity to go to the merchant he owes and in some way settle up his indebtedness. This system cannot work a hardship on any person who is disposed to do the SQUARE thing. Any person, no matter how poor, how unfortunate his circumstances in life, if he is honest, he need have no fear, because he can and will make known his circumstances in such a way as will be satisfactory to the person he owes. No merchant will ever crowd a poor man who is honest; but that class of persons who do not care for their promises to pay; who go from one store to another, from one town to another, contracting a debt wherever they can get the chance to open an account; who go it blind, never stopping to consider how they can pay; never trying to pay—paying their honest debts being the last thing they ever think of—it is to such persons that this system pays attention. It is no hardship to ask men to be honest in their deals with a merchant who trusts them. Every farmer, every mechanic, every person in the community in which we reside who pays his honest debts is interested in the success of a system which seeks to make those who can pay, and won't pay, pay their honest debts, because it is those who pay cash or pay their debts promptly, who furnish the money which enables the merchant to successfully conduct his business and carry on his books that class of people styled slow payers and "dead beats." Every dollar lost by the merchant by reason of bad debts in indirectly loaded onto the shoulders of those who do pay, and any system that forces payment by slow payers and "dead beats," or compels them to pay spot cash or secure for everything they purchase, unloads the percentage from off the shoulders of the honest paying classes. A man cannot exist in this world and pay nothing without proving a direct burden on those who supply themselves with the necessities of life by honest purchase. The do-nothing, pay-nothing class are what this agency is after. The merchants have no law for their protection; they must be a law unto themselves by combination for the protection of each other. They owe it not only to themselves, but to their cash-paying, prompt-paying customers, to combine together and drive to settlement or cash that class of persons which infests every community, who do nothing, live well and contribute nothing. This system is being adopted by all the leading merchants throughout the west. It deals honorably with both debtor and creditor and should have the support not only of merchants but honest consumers.

We do not wish to be understood as being organized for the purpose of oppressing or crowding any worthy workingman and those on salaries, but that they in common with all merchants and manufacturers must understand the necessity of paying their just and honest debts, that with them their promises to pay should be met with the same promptness as all those engaged in business must honor their obligations.

Pay up. Settle up or pay cash is the motto of this branch and of the agency.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

Congressman Hansborough, of North Dakota, is trying to interest the government in a scheme for irrigation. Some time in the dim future this may be necessary but the need of to-day is not for more land to cultivate but for a system that will render what we have profitable. If he would urge the construction of a canal from Duluth to the Red River Valley, that would be a project of immense benefit to his constituents in the Northwest.

Our Duluth correspondent makes one good point in his communication published elsewhere in this issue, a point that THE JOURNAL has previously called attention to, viz., the necessity for inspection before the grain leaves the hands of the producer. Under the present system this seems impracticable as it would require too large a State Inspection force but it would be perfectly practical under a system of a State Elevator line. A line owned and operated by the State would do more to remedy existing evils than any we know of. Of course all who are interested in the present system would at once commence to wage bitter war against it and advance all kinds of arguments to down it, but so they would against any system calculated to leave the profits of wheat raising where they belong—in the hands of the producer.

We claim to be the "Land of the FREE!" "The Land where the downtrodden serf of other lands finds relief from the iron heel of the oppressor," and we come as near being it as any land under the sun to-day, but the fact exists that farmers are fast being reduced to the position of serfs which shows that Uncle Sam better take a look over his farm and see what the trouble is so that he can apply the remedy. He has an immense surplus on hand which the farmers need. Why could he not loan it out to them at low rates, taking security on the lands? This would enable the farmer to live and pay his interest when due. Should any land be forfeited, why the government would own it and could readily dispose of it or keep it. Then Uncle Sam would be somewhat more interested in the success of the farmers and he would see it to his interest to extend the water ways into this great wheat region. It costs nine cents to put wheat down in Liverpool from Duluth—less than our freight to Duluth. If we had a canal to Duluth one cent a bushel would be an enormous freight compared with the rates beyond, but if we had a cent rate even that would mean immense fortunes to the producers in the Red River Valley. A canal system to the valley would be no more of an undertaking in this day than was the Erie canal when it was constructed. The government is supposed to look after the interests of the people and just now agriculture is in need of earnest, serious attention.

Wheat One Dollar.

That looks tempting don't it? But can any one give us a good reason why wheat should not bring the producer one good round dollar per bushel when No. 2 Northern wheat is quoted in the English market at $1.28 per bushel? It costs nine cents per bushel to ship from Duluth to the English market—less than from any point in the Red River Valley to Duluth. No. 2 Northern is quoted in this market at 59 cents. Difference between this point and England only 66 cents. Farmers do you wonder where those fortunes in wheat that you read about are made? Don't you think it is about time to organize and look into this matter a little? Do you think that the only duty of your calling is to plow and to sow and to reap and to mow and nothing else? If you do you are mistaken for all these are only the commencement. By the conditions of trade at present those who handle your wheat after it leaves your hands reap a rich harvest and you? Well, you have to live the life of a slave and get nothing for it. When will you arouse in your might and make things so uncomfortably hot for the oppressors that they will be glad to "drap dat kaliker?" Do you know of anybody so vitally interested as you who will undertake the work for you? Do you wonder that milling and elevator property sells so high in the English markets while your farms depreciate in like ratio? Hadn't you better adopt "a higher plan of cultivation," raise nothing but No. 1 Hard Scotch Fife wheat" cultivate a patch of fig leaves and wooden shoes so that your families may be "comfortably clad" withal? If you do all of these it makes just so much more profit for the speculator, you don't gain a cent. When you begin to organize you will begin to do something.

DULUTH, Minn., Jan. 8, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: Are you not mistaken in your diagnosis of the farmers' wheat troubles? It seems to me that you are. The country buyers are the men that skin the farmers—some in grades, a good deal in dockage, and more in an outrageous margin. I mean by country buyers, men who own the country elevators, furnish the money and handle the grain. Now, this first deal that the farmer makes is where all of the trouble is, and this is all outside of the Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners jurisdiction. Now, if the farmers would band together and ship their own wheat, they would get every cent there is in it. I know this by personal knowledge. The grades are kept up here just as high as the grain will permit. If a farmer ships his grain here to a commission man, that man keeps some one on track all of the time to watch every car that is inspected and get just as good grade as possible. As for dockage, it cannot be excessive, for the elevators are all the time kicking for more. Our Inspectors, well, there are none better in the state. Mr. Cross and Mr. Barncard, who do the inspecting, are men that can't be bought, both farmers from the country, and would give a farmer just as good grade as they would A. J. Sawyer or any other man. I could get you some averages on grades and dockage if you wanted.

A. N. HOPKINS.

We do not think that we are mistaken in our diagnosis of the case, and our correspondent appears to confirm our views rather than otherwise. Our "diagnosis" is that the system is wrong and our correspondent tells us that in order to get what little good there is in it, "farmers should band together and ship their wheat." In other words, pay others for doing the work and do it themselves, which in very many cases is wholly impracticable, even should they desire to ship their own grain, which they do not. The trouble originated in the combination of railway and elevator men to insure a certain per cent. of profit, regardless of consequences to the producer; the Board was created by the farmers in the hope of breaking up the combination and the system by which one set of capitalists are ensured a certain percentage of gain, to the exclusion of all others. Has it done it? You say the Board has not the power to help the producer. Then it is high time, after all these months and years of its existence, to find out wherein they are powerless, and give them that power, is it not? You do not mean to say that the producer obtains a rightful share of the profits of his wheat, even in Duluth so favored as you say it is, do you? If so, how do you account for the immense fortunes of the Pillsburys and men of like ilk, made out of our wheat every year. How is it that they are rolling in wealth while the wheat producer is losing money every year? How is it that their property, mills, elevators, &c., sells at such fabulous rates while our farms are deprecating every year in like ratio? How is it that they assured the British capitalists a dead sure margin of 22, 27 and 30 per cent. and ALWAYS a difference of from four to five cents between the country elevators and the terminals? Do you mean to tell us that we are not paying immense tolls on the watered stock of railways, and that the Board are powerless to prevent that? Do you mean to tell us that diligent efforts have been put forth to solve that problem? What's the matter with Iowa? Have our Commissioners ever tried that plan? Why not? Have they not power enough to do it? Your claim that the Board has not jurisdiction proves our diagnosis "that the system is defective," a correct diagnosis. Now, the question is, where is the defect and what is the remedy? We have lived in hopes that time would reveal these to an active, earnest, working Board, and that they would suggest these things themselves, but has this been done? How long can this country endure this drain upon it? We believe the people have a right to criticise the actions of public servants, and if the Board was created for anything it was created by the farmers to serve their interests. Among the things prejudicial to the interests of the producer may be noted principally, watered stock, protection to elevators and option gambling. We believe that a dose of Iowa medicine firmly administered by our Board would immensely relieve the patient in the first instance and a little fatherly supervision of the elevator system by our Board would do lots toward doctoring that evil, and as to the option gambling the strong arm of the law should take hold of that. It is true that the Board does not have the full powers that we should like to see it possess, but we fail to see how you are going to obtain that until you remove this business from the arena of politics. The reasons for this are too obvious to need discussion. We should be pleased to see those averages on grades and dockage, as our object is to benefit the producers in this country, and we wish to know all of the ins and outs of the system as the only means of arriving at perfection.

State Elevators.

As it seems impossible under the present elevator system for the producer to obtain his rightful share of the proceeds of his toil because of the claim that the inspection should be had before the wheat leaves the farmer's possession why would it not be wise for the State to build and operate a line of elevators? Since England, envious of the great fortunes made in our wheat has purchased a line, and calculates on perpetuating the system this would seem to be a very reasonable solution of the vexed problem. The railroads set up the claim that the elevator is an actual necessity in the handling of wheat, and this they allege in excuse of their favoring elevators as they have done. Remove the Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners from the arena of politics and let them have full charge of the matter, subject to removal at any moment for incompetency, neglect or any good cause of that nature. Let the elevator charges be fixed upon a basis covering cost, running expenses and reasonable rate of interest to reimburse the State. The State has already paid out enough to build and equip a line sufficient to give this method a trial and the tax payers have not had value received for that money. In addition to this the producers have every year been robbed of enough to build and equip an elevator in every locality where it is needed. By this system the money we are now forced to give to speculators would more than make our warehouse and railroad system self-supporting and the producer would pocket the large fortunes that now go to swell the fortunes of the sharks who fatten on the toils of the producer. It seems to us that a move of this kind is the most practicable one that could be made giving more promise of success than any we have ever seen suggested, because everybody concedes that the producer does not get justice and are willing to help him and the very money the producer is now losing would build, equip and maintain the line and leave the producer the margin the speculator now gets. Everybody now advises the farmer to "ship his own wheat." Those who are interested in making all they can out of him know how thoroughly impracticable this is as a general rule, and many urge it honestly knowing that it is the best for him, but not appreciating the obstacles in the way. Conceding that it is best for farmers to ship their own grain a line of State Elevators seems to us to furnish him a practical way to do it.

Gambling.

The laws of the United States are very strict against all games of chance. Let a man open a gambling room in any city and commence to carry on his games of chance and how long would it be before he was snatched baldheaded by the outraged majesty of the law? Let a man, or a set of men open up a wheat-gambling house and he can pursue the even tenor of his way unmolested by the minions of the law. In the first instance the practice is less harmful (if there is any difference) to the community or to the individual for you can watch the game all you like without losing, you unless you want to. In the latter case you do have to. If you are a producer you have to sell on a market ruled by wheat-gamblers, and the loss to the producer affects the general interests of the whole country. Why don't our good Uncle Sam include wheat options under the gambling law? Why don't the Farmers Alliance take hold of the matter, stick a pin into him and wake the old gentleman up to a realizing sense of his duty? Why don't every farmer who is suffering from the effects of wheat-gambling join the alliance and work for this end? The laws against gambling are just, are wise, are effective, but why discriminate in favor of a species far more injurious to the business interests of the country than could be the games of chance that all can refuse to engage in if they choose? When the farmers begin to fully realize their position in the deal and unite to demand those things they will get them and never before.

DON'T HAVE TO GAMBLE

Early in the field, and among the very best of the month's magazines, comes "Peterson" for February. Every lady should see its beautiful steel and wood engraving and its colored fashion plate, which is really an artistic picture. "Rescued by Custer's Men," by Anna Latham, is a thrilling incident of the dashing general and his brave band, told in a very dramatic fashion. The serial by Howard Seely is full of action, and it is interesting to compare its descriptions of American frontier life with the accounts of Parisian society in Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper's admirable novelet, "A Magnificient Marriage." The short stories, miscellaneous articles and poems are all worthy of the highest praise. No household should be without "Peterson" for it always offers a varied and attractive table of contents, and at a price which brings it within everybody's reach. Terms, $2.00 a year. Address, Peterson's Magazine, Philadelphia.

All Purpose Cows.

N. B. Dudley, in Holstein-Friesian Register.

Some men are deterred from buying fine stock because they think they want to buy the finest, or none. They see the finest, or at least those having the highest reputation, selling for a great deal of money, therefore they wait awhile longer. It is not every man who should buy a high priced cow with a long pedigree and a big milk and butter record, ever thought he had money and wished to invest it that way.

It is only those who have the time, skill, patience, and even the taste to attend to these costly pets, who should buy them. The man who is full of other work should only buy the cow that is useful for all the things for which a cow is made, and buy her at a moderate price. I am not depreciating those phenomenal yields, where cows, through much skill of herdsmen and long training, have been made to milk 100 lbs., per day, or those whose milk per day has made four or more pounds of butter.

The work of men who have spent their money and labor in this field is valuable, and I am glad they have, and are still, being paid therefor. It is interesting from a scientific standpoint, showing the possibility of the cow. I will not say extreme possibility, for we can not fix a limit to the amount of milk and butter a cow can be made to yield. The work of these men is also valuable as showing us breeds and families of breeds that have the power of transmitting their qualities, in some degree to their posterity. I say in some degree, for it must not be supposed that if a cow is pushed into an abnormal yield of dairy product that her heifer calf can also be pushed there. In the natural yield there is more hereditary qualities. I would say that a practical man, who has other things to attend to, besides cows, would wish a cow or even a herd that would yield in the flush of milk flow about six gallons of good milk from which could be made 1½ lbs. of butter per day. That this amount would taper down to two gallons eight or ten weeks before next calving; from which time it is best to dry the cow and give her a little rest. This rest is best for the calf and makes the cow give more milk after calving than she would without the rest. The yield of this good average cow, that I am writing about, with good average attention, would yield 10,000 lbs. of milk per year, and though this looks small when compared with a milker that has given three times that amount, still the practical man would rather have the smaller milker at the smaller price. There is much less danger of milk-fever, spoiled udder and garget.

This cow will pay for her feed and in a very reasonable time will pay her cost price, but if she dies before she does it, her owner will not have sent a round sum into a cow's grave. I am writing to such readers of this paper as want help to support their families, and I say that money invested in a good all-round cow will give more profit for her cost than the same sum invested in any other way.

The practical man don't wish to invest a large sum, for he don't expect to be a fancy breeder. He don't wish to buy a pedigree unless he also gets a cow that has intrinsic merit. Don't wish to buy a cow whose family has been specialized to yield a very large quantity of very poor milk, nor does he want one that has been bred to give milk rich in one quality to the neglect of others, as well as to quantity. As he expects to convert his male calves, barren and old cows into beef, he would be glad for his cattle to be good beef stock, but not so good that a cow with a calf two months old would fatten herself instead of increasing her milk when her milk was increased. He don't expect to get one cow that has all the best qualities of all other cows. He simply expects to get a good cow with a good average of all those qualities for which cattle were made. He don't care what may be the color of her hair, for he knows that has no more to do with her dairy product than does the color of any other cow. He don't care in what herd book her pedigree may be recorded, for he expects to feed her on something more substantial than genealogy.

As much as specialists may argue against the phrase, there is such an animal as a "common purpose cow," and when the practical man finds her, he will buy her and carry her home, and she will be to him a "pearl of great price."

Winter Feeding of Cows and Calves.

American Agriculturist.

Feeding in winter is costly because of the expense of harvesting the crops used for the feeding, and the larger consumption of food to sustain the animal heat, so largely spent to overcome the cold of the season. It is often made more costly by neglect to feed liberally at the beginning; the stock quickly running down for want of adequate nutriment, and gaining what has been lost with much difficulty on account of the cold weather. Hence, feeding in the winter requires, for the best results, a generous supply at the start, and a wise selection of food through the season. Moreover, for the sake of profit, the cows should be kept in a productive condition all through the season, and the young stock should be kept growing. By judicious feeding, the yield of the cows can be sustained, and quite as good a quality of butter can be made; and this is a most important point in dairy management. In using this term, it is meant to include every farm where cows are kept, if it is only one for the domestic supply. It is a great loss to feed dry cows on hay and grain, merely to carry them through the winter for the sake of making twenty-five or thirty dollars per head through the summer. This used to be the custom, but circumstances have changed of late, and it is now necessary, in the close competition in all kinds of business, to make every thing count, and to make the farm and stock pay their way every day in the year. At least twenty-five dollars is now required to feed a cow through the winter so that profit can be made in the summer; and, as the winter feeding is the most expensive, cows should be made profitable then as far as may be possible; or, at any rate, a certain number of cows should be in profit through the winter to pay for the feeding of the others, which are depended upon for keeping up the supply through the summer.

It has been proved beyond question that cows can be kept through the winter most cheaply on ensilage; but those farmers who have been wise enough to adopt the silo do not need advice in regard to feeding their stock. "By their works we know them" to be sufficiently informed as to their business in this respect, but the great majority of farmers have not reached this point yet, and need advice and instruction. Cows can be kept fully productive on dry fodder, with a sufficient supply of grain food. Many profitable winter dairies have been kept upon dry feeding, and profit may yet be made in this way under good management. This good management includes full feeding from the start, to avoid any loss which might be difficult to overcome, and now that the out-door feeding is not sufficient, the winter feeding should be begun at one.

Full daily feed for an average cow should consist of twenty to thirty pounds of cut corn-fodder, or clover hay, with at least four or five pounds of mixed corn and bran ground together; or fifteen pounds of fodder with ten pounds of the mixed feed. An addition of two pounds of cotton-seed meal for milking cows may be made with benefit. This food may be divided into three rations; a heaped bushel basketful of mixed feed—made up of corn-fodder or hay, or both, cut and wetted with hot water, and sprinkled over in the feed box with one half the grain feed—should be given night and morning, and a feed of dry hay will serve at noon. The slight warmth of the feed thus mixed will be grateful to the cows, and will secure a full yield of milk. With each feed a sufficient quantity of salt should be given; one ounce with each ration will not be to much. At noon, before the cows are fed, they should be watered from a well at the ordinary temperature. A tight barn, with no more than sufficient space for healthful ventilation, will keep the cows warm enough, and the brisk fresh air will be more healthful and invigorating than an atmosphere artificially warmed. To keep the air pure by cleanliness in the stable is more conducive to comfort and health than to make it warm by artificial heat.

Calves and yearlings should be fed precisely as the cows are, the quantity, of course, being regulated according to their size and necessities; but good feeding is indispensable to make good cows.

Cheap for Cash.

Farmers' Alliance.

Pay cash for what you get and you will get it cheaper. When you buy on credit you have to pay not only your own debt, but all the bad debts of your merchant. He tells you frankly that if he did not lose so much he could sell cheaper to you. By the credit system the retail merchant is forced to buy on credit, the jobber must do the same, and the wholesale merchant the same. Nine times out of ten the retail merchant gets hard pressed; he sells everything he can, pockets the money, puts his hands in the armholes of his vest, and coolly offers his creditors 33⅓ cents on the dollar. Throw off the burden of credit and adopt the cash system.

The Low Price of Meats.

The Western Rural.

We never pass a butcher shop or think of the Union Stock Yards that we are not filled with indignation. The Swifts and the Armours and the Stock Yards company are getting richer every moment of their lives. The butchers are selling steaks and roasts at just as high prices as they ever asked for them, and the Stock Yards are feeding stock with grain that they sell for three or four times greater price than it is worth. But the man who breeds and feeds the cattle that consume this high priced grain and makes Armour and Swift richer and furnishes the beef for which the consumer pays a higher price, is not making one red cent upon his stock. He sends his cattle to market because he must, and though he gets for it an insufficient sum to cover expenses, the consumer is not benefitted. It is a cut throat scheme, it is commercial brigandage and it is the most outrageous system of despotism that the world has ever seen, for a gang of men, conscienceless and merciless, to get between the producer and consumer, and rob both with the glee of a midnight plunderer.

Talk of injustice! When and where in all the history of the world can be found the record of a more flagrant wrong? We admit that the supply of cattle has been much too great; we admit that it is too great now; we admit that partly in consequence of the contraction of our currency business generally is depressed and that there is under-consumption. But none of these conditions explain why the packers and the stock yards make plenty of money off the product on which the farmer does not make a cent. There is but one explanation and that is the conditions are artificial and that they have been made by men who intend to rob the farmer, who intend to make of him in this free, beautiful and fertile country, a pack horse, as the farmer in Ireland is. Talk of injustice to the Irish farmer! That injustice has developed under a monstrous system of governmental favoritism which grew out of the old time belief that a few owned the world and had better blood coursing in their veins than the present had. The injustice, the cruel, concienceless wrongs that are being inflicted upon our farmers have developed under government that is based upon the doctrine of equal rights and a fair show for everybody. They are the result of a deliberate, infernal conspiracy of wealth, and conspiracy of wealth, and considering the fact that agriculture is the foundation of the nation's prosperity and that we are all freemen, each just as good as the other before the law, the injustice that our producers are now suffering is the most fiendish that man has ever suffered since time began.

How long shall it continue? Just as long as we quietly submit to the wrong of being compelled to breed and fatten cattle at a loss, to make other people rich, the wrong will be inflicted. When we come close together and stand together for our rights; when with one mighty voice we demand of the legislature of Illinois and the congress of the United States protection; when we demand that rings and combines of commercial thieves shall not be permitted by government to stand upon the highways and in the public market places to rob us of our substance, we shall emancipate ourselves from the rule of greed and shall get our rights. When shall we do it? When shall the farmers all get together and demand their freedom from the present sovereignty of criminal capital? It is for you, reader, individually to answer that question.

Brought Him in Debt.

Live Stock Gazette.

Mr. Jones sold a bullock to Mr. Lazarus for $16, to be taken and paid for when fat. When Mr. Lazarus came for the animal, Jones said he would like to have a fore-quarter for his own use. Mr. Lazarus willingly accepted the order, and after the bullock was slaughtered, delivered the meat. A few days later Jones went to town, called on Lazarus, and as preliminary to a settlement asked for his bill. "Dot's all right Mr. Jones; I haf the bill already made out. Here you are." Mr. Jones read:

Mr. Jones, Dr., to Jacob Lazarus—

To one quarter of beef, 185 lbs. at 10c	$18 50
By credit, one bullock	16 00
Balance due	$2 50

"Good heavens, Lazarus, you get three quarters of the beef, the hide, tallow and offal, and bring me in debt $2 50! How's that, old man?"

"Ah, Mr. Jones, that beef was sheap at 10c a pound."

"But, Lazarus, you only gave me $16 for the whole bullock."

"Ah, but Jones, dot's pizniss, pizniss, don't you see?"

"Well, Lazarus, next time I have a fat bullock I'll kill it myself, use one quarter and throw away the rest, and then I will save $2.50. You see?"

"Ah! ah! but dot's not pizniss; farmers should not be butchers—dot's bad!

The State Agricultural Society.

Farm, Stock and Home.

The board of managers of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society has done for the society and for the people of the state at large a work which entitles it to a unanimous vote of thanks. It is in condition to submit a correct report of the society's financial affairs to its next annual meeting. At all events, the report will be as nearly correct as the loose methods practiced by its executive officers make possible. There may yet some liabilities materialize which the industry and thoroughness of the managers have failed to find, for the methods referred to make it impossible to know the exact indebtedness of the society until bills stop coming in. The following analysis of the report is submitted:

The annual report for 1887 showed an unquestioned surplus at the close of that year of $4,193.23. To this was added the state annual appropriation of $4,000, making a surplus for 1888 of $8,193.23. The report for 1888, to the correctness of which the state auditing board solemnly attested, showed a surplus of resources over liabilities of $3,886.40. This was shown by Farm, Stock and Home at the time to be erroneous to the extent of $4,000 at least. The report to be submitted to the next annual meeting will show that the deficiency for 1888 was $5,279.02, and that the last official report of the secretary of the society came within $9,165.42 of the truth! At the beginning of 1889 the society was $5,279.02 in debt; it is now in that condition to the tune of $17,031.02! showing an apparent loss for the year of $12,752 00. The total receipts of the society for 1889 were $46,708.31. Of this sum $2,436.51 was in the hands of the treasurer at the beginning of the year; $4,000 was given by the state, and $2,182.75 was realized from rentals of grounds and stables, and sales of property, making the actual earnings of the fair $38,089.05. The expenses for the year reach the enormous total of $55,023.60. Therefore, while the apparent loss for the year was $12,752.00, the real loss to the society and the people was $21,363.26. There was charged to permanent improvements, however, $5,010.93; but that only served to make wear and tear good, it added nothing to former value of property.

The aggravating feature of this unfortunate outcome lies in the fact that there was no natural nor unfavorable reasons for it. It would be impossible to conceive of better weather for a fair than prevailed while the one under consideration was being held, and the preceding season had been unusually productive of farm crops of all kinds; therefore neither weather nor crop-failure can be held responsible.

There was paid for premiums, including plate, medals, etc., $9,157.13; showing that it took about $5.00 to pay a $1.00 premium on a farm product, manifestly too much. Entrance fees to the races yielded $2,889 50; but the stakes amounted to $6,951 50, which may well raise reasonable doubts as to the gain in revenue from horse racing. It cost for advertising, bill posting, etc., $9,310.29, while the receipts from sale of tickets, including grand stand tickets, were but $30,210.00, showing that considerably less than 60,000 paying visitors were in attendance during the eight days of the fair, or say an average of 7,000 a day. In view of the fact that within a radius of ten miles of the grounds probably 500,000 people live, the conclusion is forced that the money devoted to advertising was not judiciously nor intelligently expended, or that the attractions offered did not warrant such an expenditure. The military display, which it is safe to say did not influence the sale of $10 worth of tickets, cost the society nearly $4,000. Police service cost $2,176.63, at least five times more than was necessary. The machinery department is said to have cost nearly $4,000, besides 800 deadhead tickets, though not a dollar is paid by it for premiums. But we must stop particularizing.

Suffice it to say that never before were the society's affairs so loosely, so recklessly run. The fears that were freely expressed by careful, conservative men when the present president was elected, that he would swamp the society by mismanagement and extravagance, have been more than realized! Fifty-six thousand dollars expended to provide for the entertainment of about that number of people, at 50 cents a head, is a bit of managerial incompetency absolutely unparalleled, and would hopelessly bankrupt a Barnum or a Forepaugh in much less than a single season.

Equipped as the Minnesota state fair grounds are, with ample and substantial buildings, $40,000 is certainly enough to run a state fair; some level headed members of the society say that $30,000 is enough; then who will attempt to justify an expenditure of over $50,000, exclusive of the sum charged to permanent improvements? It is simply sickening to contemplate. Mr. Bushnell cannot escape responsibility for the society's enormous loss of the past year. No preceding president ever put so much of his individuality into the work as did the present one; none to the same extent ever usurped the powers and duties of his associate officials. He evidently was playing for glory; if he won, his was to be the glory, to be shared by none. Hence he was impatient of advice, deaf to counsel, and stubbornly self-opinionated. But no matter; the record is made; it needs no elaboration.

At considerable length we have given the present financial condition of the society, and a few of the causes which produced it. Our object is to excite such an interest in the state's local agricultural societies that they will send reliable, earnest delegates to the next annual meeting of the society. If there is not sufficient motive in the figures herewith presented to induce a large attendance from the country, inspired with a determination to put the society into the hands of competent, faithful men; men who have some idea of our agricultural needs, tastes and forces; men who possess the respect of the agriculturists of the state, and who will be likely to lift the society out of the slough it is now in, then we may as well confess that we have no need of a state agricultural society, and steps should be taken at once to disband it. The next annual meeting is to be held at St. Paul, in connection with a farmers' institute, January 14th, 15th and 16th. But the 14th, or the second Tuesday in the month, is the legal business day, including the election of officers, etc. Therefore delegates must be on hand on the first day of the session.

Letter From An Engineer.

The Great West.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 20th, 1889.

DR. E. W. FISH:

Sir:—"Your figuring on railroad building is not very clear. I think it is off, and you don't I presume. But you must figure rolling stock and right of way. This is the big item, and suppose you try on that." * * *

ENGINEER.

All right, suppose we do. "Engineer" asks a fair and proper thing, and we shall be glad to do a little figuring. If he takes down the report of the railways to the commissioners he will find that cheap roads lay out about $2,000 per mile for equipment. Some use less, though not much less. Let us see. This will figure up for a 200 mile road $400,000. Some branch roads of from 75 to 100 miles have four light engines, 75 freight cars, five coaches, a few flats and say three cabooses, and 25 hand cars. Here is a lay out much less than $2,000 to a mile. Other roads put on an equipment of $5,000 a mile, and there are few—a very few—which run up to $10,000. But these are east lines doing an enormous business. $3,000 a mile is a reasonable estimate.

Right of way is generally secured by appraisement and purchase, by gift, or by stock in the road. A road requires about eight acres to the mile. The western land will not average $8 to the acre—call it 15. This calls for the enormous outlay of $120 to the mile. Damages amount to something, but gifts and frauds will balance that account. So it seems very difficult, in our calculations, taking the contracts now in our desk, to find a place for $10,000 to the mile for building an ordinary western road.

Now, about the station buildings Suppose a road had a station every eight miles and was two hundred miles long. This would be twenty-five buildings, and at an average of $1,500 each—a large estimate—and we have an expense of $188 to the mille. Make it $250 to the mile and with an insignificant mileage cost, you have a station of an average cost of $2,000.

No, sir, Mr. Engineer, figure as you will, you cannot make a western road, with an average lay of three foot rise and three foot fall, with nine foot rise and fall every fourth mile, cost over $10,000 to the mile. We expect you to refer to bridges. By bridges we mean really "trestles," as few roads have bridges (in the west) which are not built by companies. It takes a huge trestle to be a technical "bridge." The average cost of trestles, from 20 to 150 feet long, is $1,000, and if a road have one to every five miles, the average cost is but $200 to the mile. So you see we are still within the $10,000 a mile limit.

Ask us some more questions. It is this spirit of investigation that gets at the truth of things.

Maine Farmer: "The Register may just as well own up to facts. It never knew a Holstein cow, or a cow of any other breed giving a flow of milk remarkable above its kind that was a rich milk. No hundred-pounds-a-day Holstien ever gave rich milk, and the Register knows it.

The Register delights to own up to facts. That is what it is published for. Nothing suits it better. It simply does not propose to own up to notions of jockies and theorists, old or new. The facts are these: First, cows of the same breed, in the same condition, fed in the same manner, vary in quantity and quality of milk; second, those giving the largest quantity are quite apt to give the richest quality. Or, in the words of our former note, which the Farmer criticises: "The quality of milk depends on breed, feed, health, treatment, period of milking, etc. but so far as our observations have extended, never on the quantity given." "Hundred-pounds-a-day" Holstein-Friesians, as a rule, are fed and trained for quantity of milk, but if fed and trained for quality they are quite apt to succeed in that line. We call the Farmer's attention to the great cow, Clothilde, that in her time exceeded all others for quantity, and after a very brief period of training, carried away the great butter prize at that extraordinary trial of the breeds, a few years ago, at the Dairy Show in New York City. We might refer to many other examples equally striking, and no doubt we could find them in every breed, had we time for research. Long enough have our dairymen been taught the falsehood, that a cow that gives a small quantity of milk necessarily gives rich milk, or that a cow that gives a large quantity necessarily gives a poor quality. We repeat. "It is an old jockey chestnut." and the reason why it has been accepted and taught, is because men have assumed that a cow cannot be good for two purposes. Theorists draw their conclusions after this fashion: "A draft horse cannot be a trotting horse, a dump cart cannot be a trotting sulky," therefore a good milker cannot be a great butter maker or a good beef animal. It i time practical observers hooted such logic out of the world.

Red Lake Falls News: Telesphore St. John went to Tacoma a month ago intending to settle there, and send for his family. Yesterday he returned very much disgusted with the country. Reports even a lack of employment. Ten men for every job, he says. He has now decided to remain in Red Lake Falls, as he prefers this country. It is strange how many are of the same opinion after trying both. Telesphore saw Adam Crist there. Adam is flourishing on the start he got of Dunc Terry and is lounging away the time, enjoying the luxuries of life.

Le Sueur Sentinel: Minneapolis men are now working up a project to build a ship canal from that city to Duluth; but, of course, they will ask large Government aid. It is a gigantic enterprise, but one that ought to be carried to completion. It would aid other parts of the State than Minneaplis.

Build it to the Red River! And still come the schemes to build up and aggrandise the cities—but the poor farmer can "fish or cut bait." The farmer's sweat has been crystalized into two great cities. Now let the farmers have a chance.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, —with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A. aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Death of Arthur Yvernault.

On Sunday afternoon, at about four o'clock, Mr. Arthur Yvernault died at his residence on Main street, aged about 43 years. Mr. Yvernault was one of Crookston's oldest inhabitants, coming in the summer of 1872. He was for awhile, we believe, a clerk for Leo. Peugnet, with whom he soon formed a partnership which continued until the death of Mr. Peugnet, which occurred Sept. 26th, 1878. Mr. Yvernault filled the office of county auditor several terms, as well as the office of county treasurer. He built up a large mercantile business and conducted it up to within a few years when he went into the wholesale liquor business, in which business he was engaged at the time of his death. His mother died in France last September, we are told, and we believe he had no other relatives living. The funeral obsequies were conducted at St. Ann's church on Tuesday, and all that is earthly of Arthur Yvernault were consigned to the grave. The days of his early manhood were spent in the upbuilding of this city, and now, in his prime, he is called to go, and those who have known him so long and well will know him no more forever.

John Cromb has been appointed administrator of the Yvernault estate.

Dr. DeMars, of Hallock, was in attendance on the funeral of his old friend, A. Yvernault, on Tuesday.

Attorney P. G. Falardeau was down from Red Lake Falls on Saturday last, greeting his many friends in the city.

Mrs. J. B. Copeland contemplates a visit to friends in the east soon. Expects, if nothing occurs to prevent, to start on Saturday.

The Executive committee of the Farmers' Alliance met in St. Paul on Tuesday, and fixed upon Thursday, March 4th, as the day for the next annual meeting of the Alliance.

Geo. McManus went up to McIntosh last Thursday with Dr. Dunlop to see his mother who was sick. George found his mother able to travel and brought her to this city for continued medical treatment.

The Committee Report.

CROOKSTON, Jan. 21, 1890.

GENTLEMEN:—We, the committee appointed at a former meeting to confer with Mr. John W. Perley with regard to building a saw mill in the city of Crookston, respectfully report that we have conferred with Mr. Perley and have received from him a written proposition, which we herewith submit for your consideration and recommend.

Very respectfully yours,
M. R. BROWN.
JOHN R. MCKINNON.

The following is Mr. Perley's proposition, viz:

ST. PAUL, Jan. 16, 1890.

To the Mayor and Common Council of the city of Crookston, Minn.:

GENTLEMEN:—Having learned that you desire the erection of a saw mill in your city, respectfully make the following proposition for your consideration: I propose to erect a saw mill in your city, provided with all the necessary equipments for cutting and preparing for market one hundred thousand feet of lumber per day, such mill to be provided substantially with the following machinery: The power is to comprise four boilers of a nominal rating of one hundred and sixty horse power, two engines of sufficient capacity to run all the machinery in the mill; the machinery to comprise one double circular saw with band saw, edgers, trimmers, cut-off saw, shingle and lath mill, and such other machinery as may be needed to properly and economically work up the lumber refuse for market. The mill to be ready for work by the first day of September, 1890. A planing mill is to be put in at a later date but, as soon as necessary for the use of the mill. The boilers and engines are to be set in a good nice building, with metal roof. The mill proper to be of wood, all to be erected on good substantial foundations and made complete in all respects.

And I further propose that the mill shall be run after the year 1890, to cut ten million feet of lumber each year, when logs can be procured at such rate as to leave a fair margin of profit to the owners of the mill.

This proposition is upon the condition, first, the city of Crookston, or such parties as may be interested in the construction of the mill, shall donate to myself or to the mill company, the sum of twenty thousand dollars in cash, or in good and negotiable bonds of the city of Crookston, which can be negotiated at par. In addition to such donation there shall be provided for the company a suitable mill site, having sufficient ground for the storage of logs and piling of lumber, and convenient of access to railroads; such site to be provided at a cost to the company not to exceed the sum of three thousand dollars.

The company shall also be provided with shore rights within five miles of the mill site, to the amount of one and one-half miles in a continuous line, such shore rights to be provided at a cost to the company not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars. I further propose that any reliable citizens of your city are to be allowed to hold stock in the mill company to the amount of ten to twenty thousand dollars, and would respectfully request that your citizens may take this amount of stock in order to give a more substantial home interest in the enterprise, as well as to give the public assurance that the mill will be run in the interest of your city and not as an outside monopoly.

Very respectfully,
JOHN W. PERLEY.

The report of the committee and the proposition of Mr. Perley were adopted by the meeting unanimously, without a single dissenting voice. The secretary was instructed to notify Mr. Perley of the acceptance of his proposition. H. Steenerson, Wm. Watts and John McLean were appinted as a committee to draft memorials to congress for the speedy and immediate ratification by congress of the treaty negotiated with the Chippewa Indians, for opening the Red Lake Indian Reservation, and to ask congress, through Congressman Comstock, for an appropriation to build a dam at the mouth of Red Lake, for the purpose of aiding navigation on the lower Red River.

ROCKSBURY, Jan. 15, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I am very much pleased with the interest you take in the organization of the farmers of this county. I also notice with pleasure that you have turned your County Relief Association into a County Alliance, under the regulations of the State Alliance. I have great faith in organization. I feel confident that if the farmers will only take hold in dead earnest and try to help themselves, which they can only do through thorough organization, the time is not far distant when farmers can say: "This cost me so much and I must have some profits, or I can't live. I will sell it for so much!" If the farmers of the United States had only the "cheek" to ask it and the grit and spirit of tenacity to stick to it, they could have a dollar per bushel for their next crop of wheat, and their own price for everything else that they had to sell. This idea that the world's market establishes a price on all of our farm produce below the actual cost of production is, to say the least, somewhat strange. But I suppose it is because WE, the farmers, buy at protective prices and sell at free trade prices, not being organized for self-protection.

It is a fact, however, that according to our recording offices for real and personal property, delinquent taxes, &c., we are in a quagmire plum up to our ears, and it will take vigorous kicking on our part (we have had others to kick for us long enough) to get out. We organized a few township alliances about here some years ago, but they have sank into the abyss of despair. If we could get a speaker to St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls it might be possible to revive them.

We had a great time in selling our wheat here this fall, most of us having either to ship or haul it ten miles beyond our own market place (St. Hilaire) to Red Lake Falls. Some of my neighbors could only get 35 cents per bushel for their wheat at St. Hilaire, took it to Red Lake Falls and got 60 cents for it. I hauled my wheat to Red Lake Falls, making only about six cents above St. Hilaire prices, but most of those who hauled their wheat to Red Lake Falls made from eight to fifteen cents above St. Hilaire prices. Those who shipped to Duluth claim to have made from twelve to twenty-one cents per bushel above the St. Hilaire prices. As to grade, well, the State has fixed that, and done it nobly, robbing the half-naked, half-starved farmers of the Northwest of at least $100,000 on one crop, and stuck it into the already over-full pockets of the elevator companies.

Well, to conclude, I regret I could not be present at the farmers' meetings in Crookston, but—well, "I couldn't have helped you any; you got along just as well without me!" There it is again; one of the very worst stumbling blocks in the way of farmers organization. "Well, it is of no use!" "It won't help me any!" "I can't do anything anyway!" It is about time for farmers to know that they can't do anything single handed, but be a contemptible slave, to be looked down upon and disrespected by every one. Seems to me they do not need the experience of another thousand years to teach them that.

KILLED OR FROZEN.

LUDVIG ANDERSON MEETS DEATH IN A MYSTERIOUS MANNER.

Thief River Falls Press.

A farmer by the name of Ludvig Anderson, living about four miles this side of St. Hilaire, is reported to us as being found dead Friday morning. It appears that he had been ill for a number of days and had gone to St. Hilaire for some medicine and then started for home. This was the last seen of him when alive. His wife was expecting him home but as he had not returned at a late hour, concluded that he had stopped over at some house on the way home for the night. The next morning on arising she was horrified to find the dead body of her husband by the side of the hay stack where the oxen were also. Upon investigation it was found that the reins were twisted around the body of the unfortunate man in such a manner as would go to show that he had been dragged to death, but it is not known, positively, whether this was the manner in which he met his death, or whether he was frozen, or died with the disease of which he had been ailing.

Drowned in a Well.

Red Lake Falls Gazette, Jan. 18.

Yesterday morning there was a sad fatality out in the Black River neighborhood, which leaves several children and a father to mourn the untimely and cruel taking away of the mother. Tuesday morning Mr. Hennesy went away to his day's labor, leaving his wife and seven children at home. Early in the afternoon Mrs. Hennesy went to the well—which was a shallow one, two barrels placed one over the other for curbing—to draw a pail of water, and it is supposed dropped the bucket and in endevoring to regain it, lost her balance and was precipitated head first into the well. The eldest child, noticing the lengthy absence of the mother, went in search of her and soon made the frightful discovery. A neighbor was immediately called but the body could not be extricated for some time as it was still and cold and much bloated and was tightly wedged in the ice cased well.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

The Duluth Evening Herald, one of the brightest of our exchanges, has secured the services of Dwight E. Woodbridge as managing editor. Mr. W. is one of the old time citizens of Duluth and has had much experience in the troublous sea of journalism in the Zenith city—howbeit he always rides the top-most wave. Herald is an excellent paper and is now in good hands.

We are frequently asked by Alliance men "What shall we do to keep up the interest of our meetings?" Well, in order to be the most successful we should say that you should keep posted on what is going on in the State and National Alliance work. We will do all that a local paper can do to keep our readers posted but every Alliance should have at least one copy of the new Alliance paper published at St. Paul, the Great West. There is also published at Chicago a grand Alliance paper, the Western Rural, which is full of live suggestions that every farmer should know. A copy of each of the above papers and a good reader in every Alliance would furnish abundant topics for discussion even though your Alliance should meet every week, and right here we would suggest the advisability of a weekly meeting during the winter months wherever practicable, as there is plenty of work to do. The subscription price of the Great West is $1 a year We will furnish it with The Journal for $2. The regular price of the Rural is $1.50. We will furnish it with The Journal for $2 50. In reality every farmer should have these papers, but one or two in every Alliance is better than to have none. In this war the farmer must keep himself posted on current events, for in no other way can he cope with an enemy who keeps fully advised of every movement of the farmer. The two papers we mention make a specialty of these matters, and hence are invaluable to the farmer, for they are in a position to see and understand what is transpiring against the interests of farming, and are are not a bit backward in exposing every fraud they see. We can see no better means for keeping up the interest.

An article in the last issue of that staunch farmers friend the Kittson County Enterprise, show how very easy it is for men, even though actuated by the very best of motives to make mistakes. Editor Love quotes portions of the article on the Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners in our issue of Jan. 9th and then accuses us of "upholding the commission;" there is absolutely nothing in our article warranting such a conclusion as his reaches, as he could plainly see had he done us the justice to publish our article in full. We have never claimed that the affairs have been so well administered as to give the benefits which the originators sought, and we have repeatedly ridiculed the idea of expecting it under the system, because the manner of creating it precludes the possibility. The creation of the Board was intended to provide a friend at court for the farmer, but after having done well enough, as far as they went, the originators closed the door of hope against the farmer by putting the matter entirely into the hands of politicians—expecting to see a business board created in that way! What better results could you wish to see attained than has been secured by the Iowa Board? Was it not the efforts of that Board that brought the railroads to time in the matter of freights and was that not beneficial to the people? Could not our Board do the same thing, and would not that be of benefit to the people of the Red River Valley? How can you expect to accomplish anything when the originators were afraid to make a business board in the outset, but had to make it composed of two members of the party which should be in power when the Board should be appointed and one from the opposite party? Can you tell us any good reason why the creation of that Board should be a political question? Its end and aim is to help the farmers, but after you have created it at great expense you go to work and handicap it in the start,—in fact render it utterly impossible to do us any good by placing it in the hands of politicians to construct to suit their own political ambitions. If you devise a better plan, all right, we'll join you heartily, but we believe the experiment of sweeping it entirely out of existence, as poor as it is, without providing any substitute whatever, would cause such a weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth as never was heard before in the land. We have got to have some friend at court to look out for our interests or we might just as well quit at once, and better and it seems to us that instead of going recklessly to work to cut the throats of friends and foes regardless, we should use discrimination, using all that is good and rejecting the evil. We have been drawn into this work through the conditions which exist, with malice toward no one, with no foes to punish, and with hopes of no reward, except to see that day when the producer in this country can obtain his just rights. We believe this is perfectly feasible but in order to be successful we believe that the friends of the movement must act in unison, allowing no discords to mar its harmony and destroy its usefulness. We do not believe the abolition of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission is what we need, but that it needs a thorough and effective overhauling seems too apparent to need further discussion.

O. H. Lucken Defeated.

The President has sent the name of Marcus Johnson, a wealthy young bachelor residing near St. Paul, to the Senate for confirmation as collector of customs for Minnesota, while Ole H. Lucken, the faithful old soldier, who offered his life in the defense of this government, gets left! Mr. Lucken is a representative man of the Fifth District, a district that has always been solidly republican, and his defeat is a personal affront to every republican in his district. He is a capable, honest and efficient man and the salary of the collector would have been a grand help to the worthy old soldier, whereas the receipient, being a very wealthy man does not need it. Where is the promises of the government "to care for the old soldier and his family?" Where is our boasted principle of giving those offices to our faithful old soldiers everything else being equal? The more we reflect upon these things the more we are impressed with the idea that President Harrison, if he has the interest of the country at stake might well take heed to the letters from the people which may come up to the throne. He has made several grand mistakes all of which he might have been spared, if he was not apparently so afraid some plebian member of the "common people" would dictate to him. Joel Heatwole's letter was sound to the core, was timely and well-meant and stated the exact facts in every particular, and the party leaders, who now so flippantly ridicule his "presumption in daring to address the throne" and tell the truth will find this out some day.

The February Wide Awake opens with a good Persian ballad, "Abu Said," by Mary E. Bradley, followed by a stirring episode of Western military life by Lieutenant Fremont, entitled "Snowshoe Thompson." There is an inspiring story of Greek boy-life, by Mrs. Knight, "A Boyhood in Athens," showing the effect of keeping a good ideal before a young lad's eyes. G. Hamlen tells a bright instance of a young girl's presence of mind in her story of "The Frogsleigh Mikado," and Mrs. Fremont will interest all readers with her account of "Kit Carson," in the second of her "Will and Way Stories." Grant Allen concludes his serial, "Wednesday the Tenth," in triumph; Mr. Stoddard in his serial of "A Rough Boy" is proving that young Gid Granger is "no slouch." The Norse serial by Boyesen comes to a close with the escape of the "Vikings' sons" from the grip of a real bear. Miss McLeod's second Acadian story is finished. One of the very best of John Brownjohn's stories is given in the School Series, "The Wicked Waterbury Clock." Mrs. White gives artistic girls a good business hint in her article on Dressmaking in the "Business Openings" series. Mrs. Claflin's Margaret-Patty letter is full of subtle social wisdom. Alexander Black's "Confessions of an Amateur Photographer" is piquant reading. "Men and Things" abounds with good original anecdotes and curious lore. The poems of the number are by Mrs. Whiton-Stone, Mary E. Bradley, Mrs. M. F. Butts, Clinton Scollard and Martha Young; "A Sad Case," one of the best of the long poems, is very amusing in text and pictures by Gordon Browne, the popular English artist.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

Last week The Journal called attention to the evils of option gambling, suggesting that steps be taken to put a stop to it. We have just received from Secretary Haigh the following petition, which is being circulated among the Alliances for signatures. Every Alliance in the county should at once make a copy on legal cap, get all the signatures possible, and forward it to Senator C. K. Davis, Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C. The following is the PETITION.

To Senator C. K. Davis,
Washington, D. C.

We, farmers, respectfully demand from Congress in session that they prohibit boards of trade, bucket shops and other mercantile bodies and individuals from fixing the value on the raw or manufactured produce of American farms by sales of promises of future deliveries of anything but the actual produce or manufacture. This will limit the amount sold to the amount of actual stuff being offered for sale, and if necessary those bodies shall see that each sale is covered by warehouse receipts, and that that is not used for more than one sale at one time. We respectfully ask that this short selling of stuff be prohibited or taxed out of existence, so as to permit us to obtain the value that we might get for our stuff as it alone may be offered for sale, or desired by purchasers or consumers; in this way enabling us to get something near the maximum price, without affecting consumption at home and abroad, and we most respectfully ask that all less important business be put aside until this most important question is righted, probably benefitting the greatest number of any bill before you, as our purchasing power will be largely increased, and we hope that you will have the nerve to promptly give us this prayed for relief.

MONY TO LOAN.

St. Paul News: "The Governor was a "one term" man when he sought the place but he is now for two terms and a Senatorial term thrown in." In another column Mr. Hall says: "Apparently the Governor looks to the liquor element for re-election on account of his opposition to temperance legislation as embodied in the high license law."

At this distance it looks as though, in his efforts to down Governor Merriam, Mr. Hall is largely overdoing the matter. Only a few days ago he republished a lot of stuff from the democratic Globe showing that Governor Merriam would not be a candidate for re-election. Almost in the same breath he gives utterance to the above to prove that the Governor is as fierce as a little wagon for re-election. We would like to know how he figures it that the "Governor was a one-term man when he sought the nomination." Governor Merriam never said or did anything to give that impression certainly. Early in the spring, preceeding the nomination, he was asked whether he was a candidate for Governor and his reply was that it depended upon circumstances. That if it was impossible to re-elect Governor McGill he saw no reason why he should not enter the lists and take his chances with other aspirants. He was persistently urged to enter the race by those who were bound to down McGill's backers, as he was known to be chuck full of energy, and it was thought that he was the man best calculated to lay out the McGill crowd. He did it so effectually that the old mossbacks havn't got over feeling sore about it yet. But there was nothing in that campaign to warrant the statement that it was necessarily a one-term campaign, if there was we would like to have it pointed out. If Mr. Hall was trying to work up a large-sized Merriam boom he could not do it more effectually than he has been doing all summer.

NO FARMERS' CANDIDATE.

President Sprague, of the Farmers' Alliance, Does not Think the Alliance Will put up a Candidate for Governor Next Year.

St. Paul Dispatch.

George W. Sprague, of Prosper, Minn., president of the Farmers' Alliance, was in the city Monday in attendance on the meeting of the State Agricultural Society. Mr. Sprague organized a Farmers' Alliance at Excelsior last evening. He says that the executive committee of that body will meet at the Clarendon on the 21st and make arrangements for their annual meeting. He does not anticipate that the Alliance will have any candidate for the governorship at the next election. Politics are very quiet with him.

Well, that's clever to say the least! To have a man who knows all about what the Alliance will do before that body has taken action upon the question. Is it possible that the Alliance is a jumping jack, with a string through its body to dance when one man plays on the string? It may be possible that the Alliance may not put forward a man as candidate for governor but we should think that a question for the Alliance itself to decide.

Horses Get too Much Hay.

Rural World: When a boy on a farm, I remember it was a standing rule to take down a little hay into the horses' rack every time anyone went into the stable. The result was the horses would keep their grinders going nearly all the time, and become potbellied, unsightly animals. Horses fed in this way become mere machines, or hay-cutters; the nutrition of the hay is not assimilated, and a large portion of it is wasted. By such stuffing, every organ in the body is interfered with and when put on the road or to work on the farm a horse so fed cannot move with any comfort until relieved of the superabundance of feed. The disease known as heaves is generally due to overdriving when the stomach is full of hay. Bulk in feeding is necessary, but when the food is nearly all bulk an extreme has been reached, and it is time to change. Hay should be fed with as much care as grain is fed. Different horses require different quantities, and in feeding a new horse it becomes a matter of experiment until his wants are sustained.

A Woodside Dream.

While your worthy correspondent sat in his office chair pondering over the past, present and future; now and then casting a solemn glance out the office window, through which he could easily behold the cool, clear sky, studded with innumerable stars, he fell into a heavy sleep, and had

A WONDERFUL DREAM.

Methought I was suspended midway between the earth and starry heavens—and lo, what sights I saw. First, methought as I cast a glance back a little to the southwest upon a limbo large and broad (about six miles square) called by Woodsiders "The Paradise of Fools," which is to few unknown, methought I saw the monarch of this region. He in the form of stentor of the brazen voice, whose shout was as the shout of fifty men, did, by thundering nonsensical word pictures, stir up all his subjects to try to enlarge his blessed monarchy.

"Rain, added to a river that is rank, perforce will force the overflow of its banks."

Methought the poor, credulent fools thought they could accomplish their monarch's plan if they coul only gaind the aid of a feminine spy, whose very appearance methought was like the witch of Endor. Ah! methought I saw her! She had two faces; each was ornamented with a pair of watery eyes and garnished with a weeping nose; her tongue was like unto a serpent's; her gaze like that of the baseless; full many things she knew, and ill she knew them all. Throughout all the world she will see no friendly eye, and all the people will shudder as they pass her by. Oh, she will wish that "the day her mother gave her birth, some storm had on the mountains cast her forth!" As I beheld her she gazed at me earnest like. I said to myself, woe unto hypocrisy and malice. Then, methought, I awoke, and behold, it was a dream.

A Dakota Letter.

The following letter was written to the Dakota Ruralist, but we have stolen it bodily:

"What on earth are the farmers of North Dakota going to do, or what do elevator companies and other combinations take us for? Do those sharks suppose that we are going to carry this burden for a life time?

I see by the Interior of August 22, the elevator companies of North Dakota have formed a combination to do away with competition in purchasing grain from farmers. It says:

"Hereafter grain-raisers will have to take the prices offered, or keep their grain."

I would like to know what the people who threshed grain last fall are going to do, who could not sell one bushel of wheat, from the effects of frost and drouth, and went in debt for threshing the same? They had to run store bills for the summer previous, and could not pay one dollar of this out of their wheat. I would like to have any fair-minded man consider how those mortals passed last fall and winter—also up to this very day.

The present prospects of our crop, and the outlook of our prices quoted in the Bathgate Democrat of August 21st, 1889—wheat, No. 1 hard, 65c; No. 1 northern, 59c; No. 2, 47c.,—shows the way we are situated, even with home buyers and millers.

All we ask for is justice—we don't want one cent for nothing. Sixty-five cents a bushel for No. 1 hard wheat! Suppose the county produced all No. 1 hard. How far will this go towards expenses—or what is left us after we pay hired help, twine, threshing, and our groceries, we may say for two years, also our last fall's threshing, saying nothing of our mortgaged farms, the interest of which we must pay or else be kicked out doors—along with our wives and little children.

Again, how is our 65c. No. 1 hard going to pay this note of mine, due this fall, given by me in June on the following basis.

Received $100 in cash, between the 25th of June and the 1st of July, due November the 1st. Gave my note for $125, bearing 12 per cent interest, and it must be paid when due.

This is only one or two of the thousands of wounds that are inflicted upon us yearly—commencing at our little town sharks, and extending even to Minneapolis boodlers. Again, how are we going to get out? My own farm is mortgaged for $1,150, 8 per cent—supposed to be straight. My five head of horses are also mortgaged—some of them once and some twice. My crop is also mortgaged twice; also some notes I happened to get from parties in trading, so that I have nothing that I can call my own—except ten or twelve hogs—all my machinery and my two cows have gone with the rest. Somebody else owns them—and I feed them, and pay taxes on them. Down to the barley I have soaked in barrels for my hogs—everything—is tied up as security!

Are they not generous? Their farm, their horses and machinery—also the feed they allow me to use for my own benefit—just simply to pay them from 10 to 100 per cent out of 65c. No. 1 hard!

Do you suppose that we do not sometimes feel rebellious? Would it be surprising if we "bundled up" and walk back to whence we came—or cross over to the dominion—or take up arms against our oppressors, as in Ireland, for justice?

Is there no means by which we can secure better prices than what are offered by those legalized robbers—held up by our legislators, and backed by the same in any act they may perpetrate to rob us?

I guess not, for the money—whiskey—office seekers and blind-folded fools are all theirs!

I know our leader, H. L. Loucks, is working for the desired end; but it seems to me we are gaining ground too slow for this generation to secure much benefit from it. Yet, meeting with many obstacles, he has succeeded wonderfully.

I sincerely hope that the laboring classes, farmers and mechanics, will open their eyes and peep through the wool drawn over them by the cunning hand of trusts."

Grain Law Discussed.

Correspondence Farm, Stock and Home.

The articles in the editorial columns of the January 1st issue of Farm, Stock and Home, entitled "Wheat Weights and Grades," and "Railroads and Wheat," should have the careful study and consideration of all farmers tributary to Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul, and especially those residing in Minnesota. That an earnest effort will soon be made to repeal that disgrace to the State of Minnesota, the grain law of 1885, may well be anticipated, and the wonder is that so long a time has lapsed without such a movement coming to the front.

I call that law a disgrace to the state, and more, a fraud, because it assumes to do what by no possibility it can do, i. e., regulate grading and marketing of grain, for it does not assume to regulate and control at any point in Minnesota save Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. By reference to a map of Minnesota one can easily see what a large part of Minnesota is not, and never will be tributary to those points in the marketing of grain; consequently all the farmers of that large, thickly settled region are "left out in the cold," so far as the grain law is concerned. It is true, the railroad law gives them the right to ship their grain to the points where the grain law has jurisdiction, but not ten per cent. of the farmers have been able to avail themselves of the benefits, if any, to be derived from that privilege; consequently the great mass of farmers—the very class most needing protection—have been left to suffer from all the sharp practices that the ingenuity and cupidity of wheat buyers could use in purchase of wheat at local points, where the average farmer is, and will be, obliged to sell.

"It is unfortunate, but probably unavoidable," says Farm, Stock and Home, "that the state supervision of weights and grades does not extend to the country markets." That it is "unfortunate" goes without saying; but that it is unavoidable may justly be questioned. To say that it is unavoidable, is to say that the grain buying and elevator interest is sufficiently powerful to prevent the enactments of simple provisions that would afford farmers ample protection, even if they are not able to ship by the carload to the terminal points, where state supervision is in force.

Had the provisions of the law of 1885 been drawn in the interest of the farmers instead of local wheat buyers, all present complications would have been avoided, besides every farmer who sold a bushel of wheat in his local markets would have received just protection, and at the same time the storage in country elevators could be used—as it should be—to hold back a part of the vast volume of wheat that farmers are obliged to put upon the market in October and November. This would in part relieve the railroads from the embarrassing demands of Tom, Dick and Harry for cars at a time when it is well nigh impossible to comply with the demand.

The remedy proposed by "reformed elevator men" is impracticable—"requiring railroads to give a receipt for a given quantity of grain in a car"—for the reason that elevator men, not railroad men, load the cars, and, so far as the railroad employee knows, the quantity alleged to be in a car may be correct or not. Neither do railroad men unload the cars, so they cannot of their own knowledge know whether there is a shortage or not; this being the case, such a receipt would be valueless.

The remedy for all the robbery and abuse now practiced is simple, and were it not for the opposition of men whose interest is in the continuance of present methods, it could be easily procured. If the state has the right to regulate grading and weighing in Duluth, it has the right to do like work in every hamlet in the state, at every mill where grain is purchased, and at every railroad station. The remedy is this: Require every one that buys for commercial purposes to take out a license, at a cost of $2.00, and be sworn to comply with the regulations established by the railroad and warehouse commission. Then require all buyers to place their grain cleaning apparatus in front of the weighing hopper, and clean the grain ready for the world's market before they weigh it, at a cost to the farmer of one-half cent a bushel, if he takes away the refuse, or if he leaves it to the wheat-buyer, free of charge. This forever settles the dirt, dockage and grade question, leaving no room for stealage, except in weighing.

Next, require the buyer to procure samples of grades and post them where all men can examine them, and post in a conspicuous place the printed rules sent out by the railroad and warehouse commission.

Next, make the present state weighing law, operative; it is now a dead letter.

Next, make all violations of the rules and provisions regulating the traffic in grain, actionable before a justice of the peace or other court in the county where the offence is committed, as other offences of like nature are prosecuted. After this is done, there would need to be only a chief inspector, and one deputy at each important terminal point to arbitrate in disputed cases. Farmers would then be able to protect themselves; railroads would then be relieved of much of the annoyance and extra labor involved in complying with the present law, and terminal elevators would be likely to have a much smaller surplus than they now have.

To repeal the present law, bad as it is, without enacting provisions that would secure the results I have indicated, would be a grave mistake. Farmers must not consent to any repeal of the law, but must—now that they know how simple the remedy is—earnestly work for such amendments as will correct existing abuses. Probably every elevator man and wheat buyer, whether "independent" or otherwise, will oppose the amendments I have indicated, by influence and the use of money, if necessary. Farmers must agree on something and stand together; and, if they can find them (which I fear they cannot), elect men to the next legislature who have judgment, integrity and manly courage enough to resist the influence that will be brought to bear to secure the will of the powerful grain dealing interest, now centered in elevator companies and jobbers, and pass the needed amendments to our grain law.

Grain Inspection.

The Great West.

The present system of grain inspection in this state has recently received a boom from the chief of that department has been published all over the state, as is right and proper. This office has recently been visited by a member of the inspection force, whose name we do not give on account of his supposed Alliance relations, and as a result we feel called upon to give our views of the system in general and of Mr. Clausen's statement.

The deputy inspector made the broad statement that, "If the present inspection system did not remedy the evils oppressing the farmers then nothing would."

On the basis of that broad statement, and of the evident drift of the Clausen publication, our understanding of the inspection system is that it is a fraud immeasurable in extent.

If either one of two conditions were present in the state, no fault could be found with the system:

1st.—If there were no farmer in the state but what raised enough wheat to ship himself and by himself—so that there were no elevators and no need for them. It will not do to say farmers COULD combine. They "could" combine—but a system which "compels" a reaching out for escape from it, is an evil system.

2d.—If the inspection system related to the buyer at both ends of the deals—if it protected wheat as wheat, anywhere and everywhere, instead of protecting only terminal dealers and warehousemen.

Any man who says the inspection system protects the farmer, as a farmer or seller of wheat, does not understand it, or he is standing in with the knaves who are putting from 55 to 60c. between the farmer and Liverpool. But this severe expression applies only to those who maintain that it protects the farmer "as a farmer"—even though he sells to an elevator! Hundreds believe in the system because they do not understand it.

Note what we say: Any man who says that the present inspection bears any relation WHATEVER to the farmer-seller states an untruth.

We put this thus strongly because that no man in the country is affected in any way by the grade given in Minneapolis. The local buyer is instructed to keep his grades down—by the elevator bosses. Then he is put under bonds to see that he does it—and he does do it.

Then he is instructed as to the weights—to keep them on the safe side—and he does do it.

Then he is instructed to grade no No. 1 hard "under any circumstances." And he obeys.

"But this is not a part of the inspection system!"

Certainly not—but that is where the farmer is robbed. That is why the system affords protection to Minneapolis, but positively none to the country.

"But the farmers can ship their own wheat."

Certainly, but an escape from the evils of the law does not render the laws any the better. Besides, the farmers cannot always combine—not in one case out of a hundred. The law is to protect the farmer from sharks—it does so by the farmer escaping from the sharks!

Now let us apply the screws, and know the facts:

What is the average cost rate for selling wheat? Why the Board men sell for each other for one-fourth of a cent a bushel. Milwaukee and Chicago houses sell for farmers for one-half cent and take care of it—or sell for one-fourth cent on the open board. If a county raises one million bushels (a small county of twenty townships)—certainly $10,000 ought to pay enough for taking that wheat in at the elevators. It would pay ten men $1,000 a year at the elevators—more men and more pay than is used in any county per one million crop—on SQUARE deals. And a $10,000 income net per year from a single county of that small extent ought to satisfy the elevator man.

Very well, this is two cents a bushel. Now, we defy any living man to show us a station where the difference between the price of wheat sold at Minneapolis and bought at an elevator 50 miles from there is within THREE cents of the freight charges.

Any man who takes up this challenge must look out—for we shall demand that the wheat so-sold shall go before the Board of Railway Commissioners before witnesses with the grade at BOTH ENDS of the transaction, and absolute prevention of connivance.

Why so particular? Simply because for years there has been a difference of from five to SIXTEEN cents in the two ends of the route OVER AND ABOVE THE FREIGHT.

If called upon to prove these statements we are prepared to do it—with the expense of the testimony provided for.

Again, and still more severe on Clausen's statements, we can show by a cloud of witnesses, the following facts:

1st.—That when the difference on a 120-mile freightage was from 23 to 27c. a bushel, a farmers alliance wrote—and wrote again for remedial help from the commission and John L. Gibbs assures us that the correspondence was turned over to Clausen.

2d.—That at last a letter came, after a well-known political wreck had examined the letter in that county, and O. K'd it, stating that the local dealer had stolen any difference over nine cents!—which of course was a rank misrepresentation.

As a remedy for the farmers difficulties the inspection system is a vacuity—an emptiness.

Awakening Sense.

The Western Rural.

The people at large, or the thinking portion of them, are becoming alarmed at the unfortunate condition of our agriculture. It would be evidence of sheer idiocy if they were not. With the ruin of agriculture, down comes the whole commercial fabric in a chaotic heap. Farmers will not cultivate the land at a constant loss. They will leave it as the farmers of Ireland have left their farms. What will they do, do you ask? Perhaps they will come to the city and learn the art of preying upon others, until society itself is anarchy. While the rural districts of Ireland have been becoming less and less populated, the cities have steadily increased in population. But no class of men will continue to work hard and get nothing for it. The prosperity of the United States is in an exceedingly critical condition. We are upon the eve of a crisis from which we cannot be saved unless our agriculture is given its rights and assured a legitimate prosperity. Will it be given these? Of course it will. The people of this country are not stark mad. They will stop before utter ruin overtakes them; and led by the farmers themselves will insist upon the relegation of the thieves and wealth absorbers to the rear. We have implicit faith in the ultimate establishment of justice.

There is no line so handsomely equipped for Through Passenger Service as "The Northwestern Line"—C. St. P., M. & O. R'y—and the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago trains over this line have a better record for reaching either end of their run "on time" than those of any other line in the country.

Battle Lake Review.

Dr. E. W. Fish, editor of the Great West, was in Otter Tail county last week talking to the farmers and organizing alliances. From the reports received of his work we should judge he is doing good. At Luce Station an alliance was organized, with Wm. McGran president, P. J. Murphy secretary, and James Henry treasurer; in District 116, Hobert township, with John E. Seal president, Elick Bangle secretary, and A. S. Seal treasurer, and still another in District 147, town of Gorman, with John I. Emerson president, S. Rassmusson secretary, and L. Weiss treasurer. In addition to the Dr's address in District 147, Hon. Henry Plowman gave his brother farmers a short speech. We are sorry the Dr. did not find it convenient to visit this section of the country, as different alliances here are in need of a revival. The only way to down the enemy is to organize and fight, and we hope to see the alliances in this neighborhood take new life and assist in the warfare. Let the Review give you a pointer, farmers. While you are at home minding your own business, your enemies are at work strengthening the already powerful cord that binds you. You can break it if you will but try, and the way to do it is to organize. The Review believes in organization, and it wants to see the rank and file of the farming element put their shoulders to the wheel and assist those who have thus far been carrying the entire load. Farmers your cause is just and your power is great, and if you will but move as a unit it can not be long before you will have the enemy wollowing in the mire.

Progress.

The Western Rural.

It is a satisfaction to know that continued agitation always bears fruit. It always has and always will. Some of our reforms have been inaugurated against obstacles which it seemed impossible at the time to overcome. The anti-slavery cause was a conspicuous illustration. It required an exceedingly hopeful spirit to expect emancipation, in the early days of the anti-slavery question. The temperance cause is another illustration. When that was commenced the use of liquor by all classes was common and perhaps might have been called fashionable. The early temperence reformers were obscure men, without influence or the common means of securing influence. But the work thus humbly commenced has gone forward until it is no longer fashionable to drink. Classes which once drank intoxicating liquor would no more drink them now than they would swallow poison. Agitation has done this work. Agitation has accomplished great things, too, with the farmer. Looking over the record for the past dozen or fourteen years, the progress that has been made toward forcing a recognition of the people's rights and of the people themselves, is wonderful considering the difficulties that have been encountered. Starting from the time when the farmer was literally regarded by political parties, society and the metropolitian as a slave whose mission was to labor to feed the nation, but who had no more right to raise his voice in public affairs than a slave in the South before emancipation, had his temper and intentions are closely studied to day by the very classes who once despised him. It is true that he is still abused and cheated and conspired against, but those who thus treat him, study the situation before they act and do not proceed as they once did, as if the farmer was not in existence. As he has made himself heard, and joined hands with his brother farmer, for selfprotection, it has become dangerous to tread upon him, and the fact is universally recognized.

Gambling in Wheat.

Farm, Stock and Home is glad to note the beginning of a crusade against gambling in wheat. It is undeniable that the worst foes to the wheat growers of the United States are the gamblers in the cerial. Something like eight years ago the wheat gamblers of Chicago boasted that henceforth they proposed to name the price the world should pay for its bread, and the surface indications were that they could make the boast good. At all events sufficient heed was given to it by European states to set them to developing the production of wheat in other countries; so that instead of Chicago, or the United states, dictating the price of the world's bread, the world is dictating the price of our wheat. Last fall's experience but agrivated the situation. It was a temporary advantage to some wheat growers here, it is true, but the effect of it is now being seriously felt, and will be still more seriously felt with succeeding years. Wheat gamblers took an advantage they supposed they possessed last year to convince Europe of the absolute necessity of depending upon some country other than this for its supply of wheat. Influenced by the argument of our wheat gamblers, Europe is now less dependent upon this country for wheat, and is more indifferent concerning our crop than ever before. A law making it a penal offence to sell wheat or any other staple article of human food which the seller does not own should have been enacted years ago. Such a law cannot now be enacted too soon, though such legislation now would be much like locking the stable door after all the horses are stolen.

THE JOURNAL received an invitation to attend Tom Morris marriage—too late to attend. Sorry but here's lots of joy and prosperity to you and yours, Tom.

J. H. Locken has been wrestling with the grip and finds it hard work to be sick or well. He says it is a very peculiar disease, one is not entitled to be called a sick man yet he is far from being well.

Much wood comes in from the Maple Lake country. THE JOURNAL man this week received a nice carload of dry maple and oak from H. G. Mitchel of Woodside. We can recommend him to our readers for a square deal.

Rariton Chinchilla over coats $3.50 at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

Two lumber mills will more than double the sales of lumber in our city, from the fact that it is natural for buyers to prefer to go where there is more than one mill whether that is an advantage or not. When we get three or more we have an established market. By all means let us have that mill.

$100,000 to loan.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Hamery died on Tuesday after a short illness. Mrs. H. has also been very ill and is not yet out of danger. Mr. and Mrs. H. have the spmpathy of many friends. C. O. D. CLOTHING HOUSE.

The grip is a peculiar animal—seeming to affect the mind as well as the body. The victims complain of experiencing very gloomy sensations and life don't seem to be worth the effort to live. In the east many cases of suicide have been reported but none in healthy Minnesota as yet. The victim here seems to be all tired out and is cross enough to strike his dad most of the time. There has been very few fatal cases here.

That Cold Storage House.

If those gentlemen who last fall informed THE JOURNAL that they were all ready to put in a $10,000 cold storage house and establish a butter and egg market will now step to the front we are assured that their $2,000 will be forthcoming as soon as they give good evidence of their good faith and ability. Heretofore, upon request, THE JOURNAL has advocated this cause and took a good deal of abuse upon its own shoulders that did not belong there. Now is your time, gentlemen, if you mean business, come to the front and verify your promises and THE JOURNAL will still continue to champion your cause; but we can see no good reason for hanging back, now while the iron is hot. The people will never be in better mood nor better prepared to act and now or never is the time. Let us hear from you.

A Gala Time at the Rink.

On Friday night of last week an excursion train from Grand Forks came over to enjoy the picnic at the rink. The train was met at the depot by the band and the excursionists were escorted to the ice rink where the races were the chief attraction. The first race was a half mile contest backward, skated by Geo. Scott, A. Halvorson and W. Gilbraith. Won by Scott. The entries in the five mile race for a gold medal were: Lew Griggs and a Mr. Eddy, of Grand Forks and Wm. Misgen, Ed. Greenhalgh and Geo. Scott, of this city. Scott and Greenhalgh were the only ones on deck at the finish but a foul was claimed and the race declared a draw. The quarter mile dash was contested by Griggs, Shanahan, Rutledge, Davis and McMasters. Won by Griggs. Shanahan, O'Connor, Woods, Bergh, Turner and Halvorson entered for the three mile dash. O'Connor won the prize a silver whisk broom holder. Halvorson, Woods, Weed, Walker and Shanahan entered for the mile and a half race; prize one doz. photo cabinets. Won by Shanahan. Woods won the grand free for all easy, ten contesting. The race which was declared a draw is to be tried at Grand Forks.

Dinna Ye Hear The Slogan?

From all over the county comes the cheering news of organizing alliances. There are now in the state over 650 sub-alliances and at the present rate of increase there will be 800 by the time of the meeting of the Farmers Alliance on March 4th. This is encouraging but yet not complete until every farmer in the state joins the band. Catch on and help to make it a grand success.

WE WANT.

We want three or four more saw mills; we want a good reliable butter and egg market; we want a potato starch factory; we want a twine factory; we want a tannery; we want a paper mill; we want a grist mill; we want a boot and shoe factory to work up the leather made in our tannery; we want a dozen more merchant flouring mills to save freighting out so much wheat in bulk; we want a large four story hotel—these things we want, and we want anybody to give a good reason why we should not have them. We have railroad facilities for shipping to every point of the compass and intermediate points, we have the best soil on earth, the best water and every facility needed and why should we not take hold and build up these manufactories that would enable us to grow in spite of circumstances? If anybody knows, let him shout it out right now, or forever after shut up.

Dr. Dampier is reported to be improving encouragingly.

Remy Fortier has gone to Butte, Montana, to settle up the estate of his brother Isidore.

Dunc Morris was in the city from Devils Lake, renewing old acquaintance on Tuesday.

Mrs. J. B. Copeland left on Tuesday evening for a two weeks' visit with her parents in Chicago. J. B. escorted her as far as St. Paul.

Oh never mind. Don't mention it. If you have the grip and want to discribe how it feels you don't have to—everybody has it and knows how it is myself.

Don't you suppose Grand Forks would snap up Mr. Perley's offer quicker than you could say Jack Robinson? You bet she would and may if we don't.

I. U. Jennings took the grip immediately upon arrival at Tacoma and has been gripping so much that he has been unable to get around much to see what kind of a country they have. Says he is confident that one thing is very much overdone—namely the grip. By the way, I. U., as soon as you lose your grip, (as it were) suppose you write us your opinions for the benefit of JOURNAL readers.

Prof. Salie, magician and ventriloquist who has been exhibiting the phonograph in this city and vicinity for three weeks, has been secured to give a benefit entertainment at the Congregational church on Monday evening next. The Prof. has been traveling as a magician and ventriloquist for twenty-two years and comes well recommended. This will be a good chance for all who have not seen the phonograph. The Prof. will also introduce his laughable farce entitled "Lamb or Pork." This should be seen to be appreciated, as it never fails to please. Remember the date, next Monday evening, February 3d. Admission 25 cents; children 10 cents.

Hay seems to be plentiful at from $6 to $8 per ton.

Alderman & Sylvester received a fine carload of birch, maple and oak from the Maple Lake country.

Holmboe & Larson have dissolved and A. Holmboe will take the stock to the new store on Robert street.

A. Holmboe has bought the stock of goods of J. H. & A. Locken, and may be found on deck at the new stand.

Plenty of wood on the market at from $2.50 for soft, to $3.50 and $4 for oak and maple. Elm sells at from $2.75 to $3.50 as you can catch the chance.

Monday was one of those bright, warm sunshiny days for which Minnesota is noted, and Tuesday was its counterpart. Looks like the backbone of winter is broken.

The body of Wm. Lanahan was brought to this city for burial yesterday morning. Mr. Lanahan was sent to the hospital at St. Paul last fall. He had been in poor health for some time.

Dr. M. Leguee is recovering from a severe attack of the grip. He has been confined to the house for two weeks, unable to attend to his many calls, but hopes to be on deck again in a few days.

M. E. Kirsch has purchased Mayor Lilly's interest in the loaning and real estate business of Paterson & Lilly. This firm has been doing an excellent business and Mike has struck a bonanza.

The Chronicle speaks of a "snide show coming soon." If the writer refers to the Red Lake Falls company that is a very ungenerous way to refer to a company that does not pretend to anything beyond amatuers. They are said to be very good.

Writing from Spokane Falls, under date of January 24th, E. F. Smith, says: "We are having quite a severe winter. It set in about the 15th of December and has snowed every few days ever since. The snow is over three feet deep on a level and is drifted very deep in places. The coldest weather we have had was 23 degrees below zero. Stock is suffering on the ranges and dying off by the hundreds."

Charlie Rapp came down from St. Hilaire on Monday evening and took occasion to laugh at the poor victims of the grip—but we took sweet vengeance later, for after supper he had to go to bed and very soon a physician was summoned to attend to Charlie, who was cramping fearfully. "He who laughs last laughs best," they say, and the poor victims whom Charlie laughed at are smiling all over their countenance.

The Union Farmers Alliance, of Andover, consists of 25 members—all workers. The President is O. H. Richardson, one of Polk County's stalwart farmers who will come to the front some day; Vice-President G. W. Eastman. L. H. Judson is the stirring Secretary; W. G. Lytle, well known in this community is the honored Treasurer. Verily so officered and manned the sturdy ship ought to outride any ordinary gale and she will, you see.

John Durkee died at his home at Devils Lake on Friday Jan. 24th of what might be called a complication of diseases. He had been an invalid for three years, suffering from asthma, neuralgia, bronchitis, and consumption of the throat and at last a paralytic stroke from which he never rallied. For three years his faithful wife has had to care for him and support the two children besides, and right nobly has she performed her duty. The body was brought to this city for interment on Friday evening and buried on Sunday. The funeral services were held at the the Baptist church where many who had known "Jack," as he was familiarly called, took their last look upon the poor, worn disease-wasted features of their friend. Mrs. Durkee and the children returned to their lonesome home on Monday's train. Mrs. D. intends to dispose of her interests there and return to Crookston where much of her girlhood was spent. Their married life was of brief duration about six years.

Last week THE JOURNAL gave the report of the committee sent to interview Mr. Perley together with his proposition. It was resolved to accept that proposition, and when one or two more projects are made ready to ask the council to take action necessary to the issue of bonds. The location of another saw mill here can hardly be over-estimated as it would be liable to form the nucleus around which would gather other mills, and thus a vast and important lumber trade spring up. This would attract other business interests which would very soon make of Crookston an important manufacturing city. The energy displayed by a few of our citizens is truly commendable and should be emulated by all. We have now that long sought opportunity that we have longed for to build up our city, and sad indeed will it be and to our everlasting shame if we now neglect to do it. Twenty thousand dollars is indeed a great sum, but if it returns to us a four fold value it is well invested, is it not? We believe there is not a citizen who has the interest of the city at heart who will refuse to vote for this enterprise, and the others that will be coupled with it. Let us all take hold of this matter unitedly, press and people and forgetting for once every petty jealousy let us for once labor together for the public good. What say you good people?

An Old Citizen Gone.

THE JOURNAL is pained to announce the death of an old resident of Polk Co., that of Charles H. Bruce who died on Jan. 20th at his residence in Andover, of a trouble contracted in the army and agravated by a long and faithful service in his country's cause. THE JOURNAL has no means of knowing the year he came to Polk County; his name appeared upon our list April 1st 1880, and he has been a true and faithful friend ever since. He made his home with his parents and, we are told was never married. Two brothers survive him to comfort the grief stricken parents, one of whom, we are told, will leave his Dakota home to live with the old folks. He was a man whom we should judge to be about 45 years of age quiet and somewhat reserved, a man whose innate modesty prevented many from knowing all there really was to him, but a strong and true friend always, as those who best knew him have best reason to know. The funeral took place on Wednesday Jan. 22d.

Report Your Progress.

It has been suggested that the secretary of each sub-alliance give THE JOURNAL a brief report of each meeting, giving the number of new recruits at each meeting, the subjects discussed, and any and all items of general interest, thus every alliance may know what is going on and a bond of brotherhood established, which otherwise might not obtain. We think this a good idea, and would gladly undertake the work necessary to accomplish that end. Send in your reports.

Crookston Alliance No. 648.

The Farmers' Alliance met on Monday at the City Hall, at 2 o'clock p. m., to complete the organization of Crookston Alliance No. 648. The temporary officers were made permanent, then applications for membership were received. Twenty-one applicants signed a request for admission, then the members present engaged in a discussion of the benefits to be derived from the Alliance. The hall was well filled and great interest manifested.

The Governor Lends a Helping Hand.

Cases of destitution having been reported to Governor Merriam from Kittson County, the Governor went down into his wallet for a nice little sum to head a subscription list, handed the list around among his friends and raised the handsome sum of $1,000 in very short order. This money he caused to be judiciously invested in groceries and such necessaries of life as had been applied for. He then appointed Rev. Appleby, H. W. Donaldson and W. G. Deacon, a committee to investigate and distribute among the deserving.

Motley Register: John G. Nelson says he was in the army three years, and during that time never came so near losing his life as he did in Motley last Tuesday. He has been toting baled hay to his lumber camp. On the day mentioned he was in a car loading his sleds when a freight train backed down and struck the car with such force that he was knocked out on the ground and fell with his legs across the rail. The team started up and he lay hold of the sled and was drawn out just in time to escape being crushed by the wheels. He was bruised by the fall, and Dr. Barnard feared he might be injured internally. He was put to bed and next day was able to ride out to camp. He says he will sue the railroad company.

Patronize Home Industry.

If our merchants and business men see farmers sending their money to outside concerns, patronizing cheap John humbugs, and drummers for snide grocery houses from other cities, they naturally kick, and they are right, for the fact that the way to build up a country is to keep as much of our money at home as is possible. But this is a principle that works both ways and when the farmer sees the merchant and business man sending their money to foreign parts for coal, while they have plenty of wood to sell at very reasonable figures, they naturally feel like giving them a chunk of their own wisdom in reply. And they are right too. "Turn about is fair play" and each should help the other. Hundreds of dollars are sent out of the country annually for fuel, are paid out in exhorbitant freights that belong here in the country, and should be left here where they would do a vast amount of good, to such of our farmers as have wood for sale, and who depend on us for a market for it.

MONY TO LOAN.

I. U. Jennings is prepared to loan money on city and farm property.
[15tf]

Thirteen Towns: Wm. Kelly, a young man 28 years of age, employed in the lumbering camps of Contractor S. C. Bagley, was killed there late on Tuesday afternoon January 21st 1890. He was engaged in loading logs on the top of the load when, by over lifting or the slipping of a cant-hook he lost his balance and fell from the load, the log he was lifting rolling off of the load on top of him, breaking his back, crushing his hips, breaking and crushing one of his legs. He was carried back to the camp where he survived his injuries two hours and a half. The remains were brought to the undertaking rooms of Lommen & Brandt yesterday. The funeral services took place this morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. A. A. Davis, of the Congregational church, officiating. The remains were interred in Tyndall's Cemetery. The deceased was a single man and had no relatives in this vicinity. He left his home in Buffalo, New York, thirteen years ago, where his parents were then living, he has never written or heard anything from his relatives since he left there, and he did not know whether they still lived there or not, or whether his parents were alive or dead. The chief of police of Buffalo has been notified of his death and requested to investigate and find out if his parents are still there.

And So It Goes.

Writing from Fosston under date of January 27th, S. Kjolhaug says: "We had our first meeting on Saturday last and started an Alliance with 42 members." And so the good work goes on all over the county.

Thirteen Towns: A. J. McIntosh was down from his lumbering camps on Walker Brook yesterday. He says that logging is progressing finely and no one could ask for a better logging season and that they are hauling logs to the landing at the rate of 50,000 feet daily at each of his camps and that he will surely get in 5,000,000 feet. He hired a number more teams for hauling purposes. Mc is one of the townsite proprietors of McIntosh, and says that he knows little about the threatened heavy suit for damages against the townsite owners by the business men of that place and isn't worrying much about the matter being too busy with his logging operations. He says that when the papers are served on him he will probably know what the trouble is about and what action to pursue, but until then he shall spend no sleepless nights over the matter.

Woodside Notes.

WOODSIDE, Minn., Jan. 27, 1890.

They are organizing. Who are? Why the farmers of Polk County. What for? in order to protect themselves against monopolies and trusts of all kinds, and for protecting and furthering the interests of agriculture.

On Wednesday Jan. 8th, a meeting was held at Winger, at which there were about twenty-five present, M. Galasew, of Knute, was moderator, and H. Engemoen, of Winger, clerk. They decided that they would join the club which met near Erskine, on Saturday Jan. 11th, at the residence of Ole Branda, about forty were present, most of them from the town of Knute. Lars Nilson was elected moderator, and P. Langie, clerk. Very little business was transacted, but there will be another meeting on Saturday, January 25th, when it is expected the organization will be completed.

There was a meeting at Mentor the same date of which we did not learn the particulars.

Miss Sandli entertained her many young friends very pleasantly on Friday evening.

Jos. Tagley, one of our handsome young bachelors, spent Sunday, in Fertile.

La grippe has been an unwelcome guest at many a fireside the past three weeks.

January has almost lost its grip. We hope this is true in every sense of the word.

"They say" that February will be a stormy month. We can tell you better on March 1st.

Hereafter we shall always have more sympathy for the drummer, who always has to carry his grip. Poor fellow, if his grip bothers him all the time as ours does, we pity him from the bottom of our heart.

Mr. Haskell, right of way agent for the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad was a caller at THE JOURNAL office on Wednesday. In relation to the rumor that D. & W. was surveying a route that would run to the east of us Mr. H. says that there are no surveyors in the field yet but they have crusers out and the route finally selected will depend very much upon the character of their report.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette writes us to ask why Crookston does not move in the matter of the Red Lake Indian Reservation. The Gazette is informed that Crookston took the lead in that matter and has long since requested Mr. Comstock to secure the early opening of that tract if possible.

The executive committee which fixed the time of the meeting of the State Alliance also fixed the number of delegates to which each sub-alliance is entitled. Some have an idea that each sub-alliance is entitled to three delegates This is wrong. The committee allows only one delegate to each alliance. This, if each alliance is represented, would give a convention of over 700 delegates.

All this talk against Senator Buckman is the veriest bosh if indulged in by men who believe in the caucus system, for if Senator Buckman did wrong the system is to blame for it. After agreeing to go into the caucus and abide the result no honorable man could do otherwise, than the senator did. All who are familiar with his actions will vouch for this and all who know the genial senator well know that no more honorable man exists than he.

A question which is often asked—and which is quite pertinent, by the way, is: "What can the Farmers' Alliance accomplish?" Well, that depends so absolutely upon the farmers themselves that we can better answer it when we see what steps they will take. The Alliance aims to better the condition of the farmers by every practical means—and that is a wide field, covering in its scope every good you can imagine. The Farmers' Alliance can promote the highest interests of the farmers if they will all take hold of the work together. If there was a stone as large as a mountain to be removed bodily it would look ridiculous to see one farmer tackle it by main strength alone. What would he do? Go and ask one neighbor to help him roll that stone over? No, but he knows that there are farmers enough to do it if they will only take hold with him. So there are enough farmers to roll the old stone of monopoly into the everlasting ditch of oblivion if they will all take hold together; they can destroy every trust in the world if they will unite their strength upon the task. They can control the Government if they will unite. Isn't that significant? Could they reasonably ask more? You cannot imagine anything practicable to be done for your welfare, farmers, that you cannot do if you will act in harmony with the great army of your brethren already in the field. You know there were men who used to say to you: "What's the use to try? You never can put down the rebellion!" That was a pretty big job to do, but it was done, wasn't it? And how was it done? By united, earnest effort and a determination to "fight it out on that line if it takes all summer." You remember those grand, ringing words; how significant they were then. There was a noble army of men fighting hard, their work made harder by some who should have been in the ranks, standing shoulder to shoulder with them. If they had been it would not have taken so long, but it is just as true to-day as it was then, that where all are united the farmers will be invincible. Their cause is right, and will triumph sooner or later, sooner if all thake hold of the good work, and later if they do not. "We must fight it out on this line if it takes all summer!"

THE SENATE BILL.

The National Tribune.

The Senate Committee on Pensions has decided upon a bill, and instructed the Chairman—Senator C. K. Davis, of Minnesota—to report it, which he has done. The first clause is as follows:

That in considering the pension claims of dependent parents, under the provisions of this act, the fact of the death of the soldier or sailor, and the fact that he left no widow or minor child or children, having been shown as required by law, it shall be necessary only to show by competent and sufficient evidence that such parent or parents are without other means of support than their own labor or the contributions of others not legally bound for their support: Provided. That all pensions allowed to dependent parents under this act shall commence from the date of the filing of the application hereunder, and shall continue no longer than the existence of their dependence.

The changes in this from the same clause in the bill passed by the Senate of the 50th Congress are mainly verbal. The most important is the striking out of "manual" before "labor."

The second clause reads:

SEC. 2. That all persons who served three months or more in the military or naval service of the United States during the late war of the rebellion, and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, and who are now or who may hereafter be suffering from mental or physical disability, not the result of their own vicious habits, which incapacitates them from the performances of labor in such a degree as to render them unable to earn a support, and who are dependant upon their daily labor for support, shall, upon making due proof of the fact, according to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may provide, be placed upon the list of invalid pensioners of the United States, and be entitled to receive $12 per month; and such pension shall commence from the date of the filing of the application in the pension office, after the passage of this act upon proof that the disability then existed, and shall continue during the existence of the same. Provided, That persons who are now receiving pensions under existing laws, or whose claims are pending in the pension office, may, by application to the commissioner of pensions, in such form as he may prescribe, showing themselves entitled thereto, receive the benefits of this act; and nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to prevent any pensioner thereunder from prosecuting his claim and receiving his pension under any other general or special act. Provided, however, That no person shall receive more than one pension for the same period. And provided further, That rank in the service shall not be considered in applications filed under this act.

The main changes in this from the bill passed by the Senate of the 50th Congress are: Striking out "totally" before "incapacitates," "manual" before "labor," and adding after "labor"—"in such a degree as to render them unable to earn a support, and who are dependent upon their daily labor."

The third section reads:

SEC. 3. That if any officer or enlisted man who served three months or more in the army or navy of the United States during the late war of the rebellion, and who was honorably discharged has died, or shall hereafter die, leaving a widow, minor child, or children under 18 years of age, or in case there be no widow or minor child or children, a dependent mother or father, as such dependency is defined under section one of this act, such widow, minor child or children, or mother, or father, shall be placed upon the pension roll at the rates established for them by law without regard to the cause of death of such officer or enlisted man: Provided, That the cause of death of such officer or enlisted man was not or is not due to a violation of the civil or military laws, or the result of vicious habits, and that said widow was married to the deceased pensioner prior to the passage of this act. All pensions granted to widows under this act shall take effect from the date of the death of the husband of of such widows, but not dating back of the passage of this act.

The changes in this are the prescribing that the pensioner shall have served at least three months; have been honorably discharged, and that his death was not due to violation of law or vicious habits.

Section four reads:

SEC. 4. That from the date of the passage of this act the increase of pensions for minor children shall be at the rate of $4 per month instead of $2 per month, as now provided by law, and in case a minor child is insane, idiotic, or otherwise helpless, the pension shall continue during the life of said child, or during the period of such disability.

This is the same as in the former bill, except that the rate of increase is made $4 instead of $2.

Section 5 of the former bill, which modified Section 4716 revised statutes—which prohibits the granting of pensions to anyone who voluntarily served in the rebel army—so as to prevent its applying to this act, has been stricken out, and consequently all who voluntarily served in the rebellion are excluded from its benefits.

The bill will now have to undergo discussion in the senate, and possibly considerable modification.

The Inter-State Commerce Law.

The Western Rural.

Congress should promptly move to strengthen the Inter-State Commerce law and tighten the grip of the government upon the railroads. The imperfections of the law have been many and serious, but the people have patiently borne with them, because they have regarded the present law as only the beginning of a complete reform. The railroad is still a plundering institution. It is still carrying its loads of watered stock, and compelling the farmer and the public generally to pay dividends upon it. It is still demanding remunerative freight rates from producers of grain and meat producing animals, although every shipment that they may make represents a clear loss. The patience of the American people is greater than that of any people on earth. They are willing to give Congress even unreasonable time to remedy such wrongs, but they will insist that the law making power shall give constant evidence of its appreciation of the absolute necessity of legislative action. It may be a fact that government supervision of our transportation companies will fail to give the people full relief. The railroad corporations are inveterate violators of law and their resources for illegitimate doings seem to be almost exhaustless. It is possible that relief will come only from government ownership of the roads. Time will solve that. The purchase of the roads at their real value would be one way to wipe out the infamous watered stock swindle. The Western Rural—while determined that the great wrong which railroad management has inflicted, and is still inflicting upon the producers of this country shall be stopped if constant and aggressive agitation of the evil can produce that result—and it can—has always been really conservative; but it frankly admits that it does not care a farthing how the remedy is secured, whether by a strong, supervisory grip by the government upon the corporations, or depriving them of the control of their property, paying them, of course, what it is worth. Congress must act in some direction, for our farmers must have relief from every unjust condition of society and commerce.

The Great West.

When wheat is worth $1.28 in Liverpool we would naturally conclude that a just price in Minnesota would be that price less the proper cost of transportation, and the necessary profit to the shipper. The latter item should not be more than two cents a bushel, and all Board of Trade transactions are for ¼ of one cent. No matter who owns the railroads the shipping should cost nothing but freight. The intervention of the elevator system is a robbery—it is for that purpose, and the "system" pays a bonus to the companies to carry on the robberies.

Freight on wheat across the ocean is from two to 2½c. per bushel. From Duluth or Chicago to New York, via Lakes Michigan, Huron and Erie and connecting rivers, the Erie canal and Hudson River towing, is six cents a bushel, (1,900 miles). Freight from the Red River or Southern Minnesota, etc., to Duluth or Chicago should be at the rate of one-tenth of a cent per ton-mile by means of canals, or say an averge of two cents a bushel.

But says the farmer. "We have no canals.

Well, that's your lookout. You could have canals if you wanted them. The Ohio canals cost $16,000 to the mile—and God made Minnesota purposely for canals. If the farmers have put their trust in the Washburns and defied their God, it is their own doing. It's been their money that has been squandered. The above natural course of trade figuring on proper R. R. charges from the farm to Duluth or Chicago would make wheat worth in Minnesota—at $1,28 in Liverpool, about $1.16 a bushel—allowing two cents for shippers profits. Adding four cents more for terminals, which ought not exist except canal reloading; and you would have $1.12. You do get 60 to 75c.

But, practically, Liverpool does not set the price. Liverpool is a buyer. It cannot, and never did dictate the price of wheat. Chicago fluctuations were never governed by Liverpool quotations—are not, and never were. The dial over across from the Grand Pacific sympathises solely with the stroke of the Bears' paw or the hoist of the Bulls' horns, and the buyer nation tags on behind. Three thousand gamblers in Chicago will deny this. Three thousand gamblers will lie like sin.

TWO DOLLARS AND SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS

WAHPETON, N. D., Jan. 19, 1890.

FRIEND COOKE:—After reading a copy of THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, sent to friend Mitton, it occurred to me that a word of confidential commendation, from a man many years in the same profession with yourself, might serve to smooth the rough places, just a little—especially as I have no ax that needs a grind. The position you take and advocate so consistently is worthy of praise from every well wisher of his country. You remember it is more than ten years past since I said to "our" little circle about Fisher the same as you are saying to-day; and every year demonstrates its truth. "There is a revolution on." The producers will not always patiently suffer. They have the power in their own hands and will some day—soon, too—say to the Shylocks: You have taken more than your pound of flesh, now suffer the penalty of your fraud! Your paper is better and stronger every year, and I wish you prosperity and fortune. Accept this as intended as an expression of my appreciation of your labors at Crookston. You deserve more than you are receiving. Yours, A. DEWEY.

FERTILE, Minn., Jan. 23, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I see through your valuable paper that the farmers are awakening at last to the fact that they are being wronged and robbed, and are organizing to see if they can remedy the existing evils. I am in hopes that they can. Here, in the town of Garfield, we had a meeting on the 3d of January to see if we were ripe for organization. The Norwegian is slow in such matters, but when he does see that he is being wronged, he kicks like a steer. We had a large meeting, more being present than I expected to see, and it was aged to organize, thirteen signing the application for a charter, which has been received. This Alliance is called "Garfield Farmers Alliance, No. 650." Our next meeting will be held January 25th, at 1 o'clock p. m. Will let you hear from us again.

T. H. NESSETH.

GARDEN CITY, Miss., Jan. 8, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I believe I promised I would write you a few letters giving you my views of this country for publication, but I observed in your issue of the 2d inst. a comment on the letter I wrote you, that will take at least one letter to place aright. First, I would like to let the merits of this country have the preference over prejudice in the minds of northern people, and I will try to give both sides, the dark as well as the light, as I see it. (You need not have the nigger if you don't want him.) You say I have not found an earthly paradise. I do not remember to have mentioned any such place; but I will say I have found more real enjoyment in nature and climate in the last two months, here in the south, than I have in the past fifteen years in the north. So far as the good things of life are concerned, this is not the time of the year for anything better than lettuce fresh from the garden; also cabbage, turnips, sweet potatoes, celery, etc., although it will not be many days before we expect to have something better in the fruit line, strawberries, blackberries and other small fruits mature very early, in April and May, and grow in great abundance here. They are just through with the cotton harvest, now. The cotton industry of this country compares favorably with the wheat industry of your country, and I find just about the same state of things here as with you in the north,—the producers are kept down by the monopolists and capitalists. I am glad you have the nerve to stand up and publish a paper according to your honest convictions in behalf of the producers. There are but few men that dare to take that side of the question. J. D. B.

Caught by Cupid.

St. Paul Daily News.

A quiet wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee, 800 Carroll street, when J. G. Hart, of the firm of Anderson & Co., Crookston, was united in wedlock with Miss Henrietta Lee, a belle of that district. The groom is a bright young business man who stands well commercially and has many friends in this city. After a brief Eastern tour the happy couple will make their home in Crookston.

The Heatwole Correspondence.

Dakota County Tribune.

After reading them (the Heatwole-Halford letters) carefully we are constrained to think that they reflect more credit upon Mr. Heatwole than they do upon either the President or his private secretary. The insinuation in the first reply that a common citizen of the country has no right to address the President upon any matter of public importance is an insult to every independent citizen of this nation. The replies would indicate that the President's private secretary is lacking, not only in good judgment, but also in good manners.

Another Inquiry.

The Great West.

We have another letter this week from a man who is not satisfied with our strictures on the western railroads. We cannot give his whole letter, (we refer to the note of C. J. S.,) but will state his proposition in condensed form:

"There may be a steal by elevator men—we all admit it, or we do admit it for sake of argument. But you (we) admit that the freight from some western county (100 miles) was but 7½c a bushel, and the difference in price, for that 100 miles, 23c. 'Now then the steal is on the buyers of grain ain't?'"

Our answer will be direct, to the last question. No, the steal is not on the elevators. The elevator companies pay for the privilege of robbing. The railroads stand in with the them. But that is not the worst of it "by a long shot." The freight of 11c. a hundred, or 7½c. a bushel is an outrage. The pool against Duluth is another fraud. But about that freight of 7½c. a bushel:

It costs about seven cents a bushel to take wheat from Minneapolis to Chicago—over 400 miles. Why should it be 7½c. for 100 miles? It costs 13c. to take wheat from Chicago to New York, over 1,000 miles (by rail) on costly roads; why should it cost one-half as much for less than one-tenth the distance, on a cheap road?

It costs by water to take wheat 1,900 miles from Chicago, only 6c. Yet to get wheat 420 miles to Chicago from the producer, it costs 15c.

Coal gets to Chicago, from 600 miles east for $1.50 a ton. But to get it the first 400 miles west of Chicago it costs $4.00 a ton!

Shall we give you more figures? Don't answer by saying that the eastern road does a larger business—because it don't.

DO YOU WANT MONEY?

I can save you money by making you an axe that will last four times as long as any you can buy, or I can repair your old one so that it will do good work. New work warranted. Give me a trial. GEO. O. BUHN, City Blacksmith, corner of Main and Fletcher streets. [38-tf]

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication Jan. 23d, 1890.]

WHEREAS OZIAS LEVECK AND EMIRE Leveck, his wife, as mortgagors did on the ninth day of July A. Railroads and Wheat.

Farm, Stock and Home: An ex-elevator man,—it might be proper to call him a reformed elevator man,—recently suggested to Farm, Stock and Home that the entire controversy between grain growers and elevators concerning weights could be settled by requiring railroads to receipt for a given quantity of grain in a car, as they do for all other kind of freight, and then compelling them to deliver that quantity to the consignee. It is claimed that the farmer can look after the weight of his grain at home, but has no protection after it passes into the hands of the railroad, which is paid for safely transporting and faithfully delivering all freight committed to its care. If a farmer ships 100 hogs to a certain point on railroad thinks of delivering but 90, and at the same time satisfying the shipper; but if a carload of wheat shrinks any number of bushels the shipper is supposed to stand it without a word of protest. In view of the fact that elevators at terminal points, "clean up" an average of any where from 25,000 to 50,000 bushels once to twice a year, some system of weighing and handling grain should be devised which will prevent such wholesale stealing. The suggestion herewith noted will bear thinking of.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication Jan. 30th 1890.]

WHEREAS CHRISTIAN N. SATHRE AND Ragnhild Elizabeth Sathre, his wife, as mortgagors, did on the second day of November A. D. 1885 duly execute and deliver to the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, a corporation, as mortgagee, their mortgage bearing date on the second day of November A. D. 1885 whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described land situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The west half of the southeast quarter, and the north half of the northeast quarter, and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of Section fifteen (15,) in township one hundred and forty-nine (149,) of range forty-six (46) and containing two hundred acres, to secure the payment of two hundred and sixty-three and 35-100 dollars according to the conditions of one certain promissory note payable in ten semi-annual installments, said note bearing even date with said mortgage and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the third day of November A. D. 1885, at four o'clock and fifteen minutes p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said Polk County, in book "W" of mortgages, on pages 469, 470 and 471.

And whereas, the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, did for value received on the tenth day of April A. D. 1889, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to Halvor Steenerson and George J. McManus, partners as Steenerson and McManus, of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing, under seal and duly acknowledged, and was thereafter on the 22d day of April A. D. 1889, at two o'clock and twenty minutes p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said Polk County, in book "46" of mortgages, on pages 166 and 167.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of twenty-five and 50-100 dollars ($25.50-100) due as the sixth installment of said note on the first day of January A. D. 1889, and of the sum of twenty five and 50-100 dollars ($25.50-100,) due as the seventh installment of said note, on the first day of July A. D. 1889, and of the sum of twenty-five and 50-100 dollars ($25.50-100) due as the eighth installment of said note on the first day of January A. D. 1890, and all of said sums are still due and unpaid, and whereas it was stipulated and agreed, by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained, on the part of the mortgagors to be kept and performed, then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for said mortgagee and its assigns to consider the whole sum thereby secured to be immediately due and payable, without notice to said mortgagors or any other party.

And whereas, Halvor Steenerson and George J. McManus assignees of said mortgagee have exercised their option to consider and declare, and do hereby declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage, and still unpaid, to be due and payable.

And whereas, there is now due, and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of one hundred and thirty-one and 85-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted by law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statutes in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county on the fifteenth day of March A. D. 1890, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with the taxes, if any, on said premises and twenty five dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest.......... 80 00
Total yearly payments...$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest..........$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of.......... 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years.......... 1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest..........$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00
Total..........$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

THE BLAIR SUNDAY BILL.

ED. JOURNAL:—It has evidently been a difficult task to invent an excuse for such needless legislation as the Blair Sunday Bill. As first introduced it was entitled: "A bill to secure to the people the enjoyment of the first day of the week, commonly known as the Lord's day, as a day of rest, and to promote its observance as a day of religious worship." Then the American Sabbath Union asked that it might be modified so as to read: "A bill to secure to the people the enjoyment of the Lord's day, commonly known as Sunday, as a day of rest, and to protect its observance as a day of religious worship." As re-introduced in the Senate, Dec. 9th, 1889, it reads: "A bill to secure to the people the privileges of rest and religious worship, free from disturbance by others, on the first day of the week." Why was it necessary to make all these attempts to sugar-coat the bill with an innocent looking title? It is because they recognized the fact that there exists in the minds of the people a well founded and deep rooted fear of the evil effects of religious legislation. The fact is the peoble already have in peacable possession and full enjoyment all that this title proposes to secure to them. No citizen is deprived of his right and privilege to rest and worship undisturbed by others on the first day of the week. There is not a state or organized territory of this government but what affords ample protection to religious assemblies, and their statutes on this subject are held in such high estimation and are so well supported by public sentiment, that prosecutions under them are very rare indeed. Those who are inclined to be lawless would as soon think of disturbing the session of a court of justice as of a religious assembly, whether held on Sunday, or any other day of the week. This is just as it should be, and our government is now the brightest beacon light of liberty in the world. We have reason to prize it very highly and to be suspicious of any attempt to change it.

The title of this bill is evidently a deliberate fraud, the result of a conspiracy to deceive the people with regard to the real object of the bill, and to induce them to support it under the misapprehension that they are in some manner deprived of their inalienable rights, and such evident fraud in its title should lead us to examine the bill with great care. The following is the full text of the bill;

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

That no person, or corporation, or agent, servant or employe of any person, or corporation, or in the service of the United States in time of peace, except in the necessary enforcement of the laws, shall perform, or authorize to be performed, any secular work, labor or business to the disturbance of others, works of necessity and mercy and humanity excepted; nor shall any person engage in any play, game or amusement or recreation, to the disturbance of others, on the first day of the week, commonly known as Sunday, or during any part thereof, in any Territory, District, vessel, or place subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States; nor shall it be lawful for any person or corporation to receive pay for labor or service performed or rendered in violation of this section.

SEC. 2. That no mails or mail matter shall hereafter be transported in time of peace over any land postal route, nor shall any mail matter be collected, assorted, handled or delivered during any part of the first day of the week; provided, that whenever any letter shall relate to a work of necessity or mercy, or shall concern the health, life or decease of any person, and the fact shall be plainly stated upon the face of the envelope containing the same, the Postmaster General shall provide for the transportation of such letter or letters in packages separate from other mail matter, and shall make regulations for the delivery thereof, the same having been received at its place of destination before the said first day of the week, during such limited portion of the day as shall best suit the public convenience and least interfere with the due observance of the day as one of worship and rest; and, provided further, that when there shall have been an interruption in the due and regular transmission of the mails, it shall be lawful to so far examine the same when delivered as to ascertain if there be such matter therein for lawful delivery on the first day of the week.

SEC. 3. That the prosecution of commerce between the states and with the Indian tribes, the same not being work of necessity, mercy or humanity, by the transportation of persons or property by land or water in such way as to interfere with, or disturb the people in the enjoyment of the first day of the week, or any portion thereof, as a day of rest from labor, the same not being labor of necessity, mercy or humanity, or its observance as a day of religious worship, is hereby prohibited, and any person or corporation, or the agent, servant or employe of any person or corporation who shall wilfully violate this section shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten, or more than one thousand dollars, and no service performed in the prosecution of such prohibited commerce shall be lawful, nor shall any compensation be recoverable or be paid for the same.

SEC. 4. That all military and naval drills, musters and parades, not in time of active service or immediate preparation therefor, of soldiers, sailors, marines or cadets of the United States on the first day of the week, except assemblies for the due and orderly observance of religious worship, are hereby prohibited; nor shall any unnecessary labor be performed or permitted in the military or naval service of the United States on the first day of the week.

SEC. 5 That it shall be unlawful to pay, or to receive payment or wages in any manner for services rendered or for labor performed, or for the transportation of persons or of property in violation of the provisions of this act, nor shall any action lie for the recovery thereof, and when so paid, whether in advance, or otherwise, the same may be recovered back by whoever shall first sue for the same.

SEC. 6. That labor or service performed and rendered on the first day of the week in consequence of accident, disaster, or unavoidable delays in making the regular connections upon postal routes and routes of travel and transportation, the preservation of perishable and exposed property, and the regular and necessary transportation and delivery of articles of food in condition for healthy use, and such transportation for short distances from one State, District or Territory as by local laws shall be declared to be necessary for the public good, shall not be deemed violations of this act, nor shall the provisions of this act be construed to prohibit or to sanction labor on Sunday by individuals who consciencniously believe in and observe any other day than Sunday as the Sabbath as a day of religious worship, provided such labor be not done to the disturbance of others."

So reads the bill after the most strenuous efforts of its sponsors to make it appear harmless and civil, but changing its name has not changed its character. It is religious legislation still, and just as dangerous as ever. It forbids the performance of any secular work, labor or business, to the disturbance of others, works of necessity and mercy and humanity excepted; and also forbids engaging in any play, game or amusement or recreation to the disturbance of others, on the first day of the week, commonly known as Sunday, or during any part thereof, in any place subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, and makes it illegal to receive pay for work done in violation of this section.

It proposes to prohibit the doing of any secular work, i. e. any work pertaining to the present world, or to the body, or that is at all worldly, and permits only such exercises as pertain to another world and concern the soul, and pertain to a future life. (See Webster.) No legislation could be more positively religious in its nature. Can any one fail to see that the enforcement of such a law would at once deprive every person under its jurisdiction of his right to decide for himself in what manner he will spend the first day of the week? That it would force him to submit to being robbed of his inalienable right to the independent exercise and expression of his own religious convictions, and compel him to submit to and adopt such formal observance of the day as these conspirators have prescribed, or may hereafter prescribe, as its proper observance?

Wherein are the people to be protected or secured in the enjoyment of any right by such a law, when its only possible effect will be to rob them of rights they now possess?

We have a right to know upon what authority Sunday observance rests, and why it is made a test of fidelity to the Christian religion. Father Enright, in a sermon in the Catholic church at Harlan, Iowa, on Dec. 15th, as published in the Industrial American of that place in its issue of Dec. 19th 1889, said the following on this subject:

"Take, for example, the day we celebrate—Sunday. What right have Protestant churches to observe that day? None whatever. You say it is to obey the commandment, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." But Sunday is not the Sabbath according to the Bible and the record of time. Every one knows that Sunday is the first day of the week, Saturday is the seventh day and the Sabbath, the day consecrated as a day of rest. It is so recognized in all civilized nations I have repeatedly offered $1,000 to any one who will furnish any proof from the Bible that Sunday is the day we are bound to keep, and no one has called for the money. If any berson in this town will show me any scripture for it, I will tomorrow evening publicly acknowledge it, and thank him for it.

It was the Holy Catholic church that changed the day of rest from Saturday to Sunday, the first day of the week. And it not only compelled all to keep Sunday, but at the Council of Laodicea, A. D. 364, anathematized those who kept the Sabbath, and urged all persons to labor on the seventh day under penalty of anathema. Which church does the whole civilized world obey?

Protestants call it every horrible name they can think of—antichrist, the scarlet colored beast, Babylon, etc., and at the same time profess great reverence for the Bible; and yet by this solemn act of keeping Sunday, they acknowledge the power of the Catholic church. The Bible says: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," but the Cathalic church says no, keep the first day of the week; and the whole world bows in obedience."

The following is from a protestant source, and is the type of protestanism which still protests and insists upon applying to the papacy those "horrible names" referred to by Mr. Enright;

"There are many, even of those engaged in this movement for Sunday enforcement, who are blinded to the results which will follow this action. They do not see that they are striking directly against religious liberty. There are many who have never understood the claims of the Bible Sabbath and the false foundation upon which the Sunday institution rests. Any movement in favor of religious legislation is really an act of concession to the papacy, which for so many ages has steadily warred against liberty of conscience. Sunday observance owes its existence as a so-called Christian institution to the 'mystery of iniquity,' and its enforcement will be a virtual recognition of the principles which are the very corner-stone of Romanism. When our nation shall so abjure the principles of its government as to enact a Sunday law, Protestanism will in that act join hands with popery; it will be nothing else than giving life to the tyranny which has long been watching its opportunity to spring again into active despotism." Testimony 33, pp. 239, 240.

The climax of hypocracy and perfidity of the prime movers in this business, however, is shown in the pretended exemption of their brethren and fellow-christians who differ from them. With a great show of magnanimity they propose to exempt those "who conscientiously believe in and observe any other day than Sunday as a day of rest and religious worship," which involves all there is in the religious observance of the day. So it is the religious observance of Sunday they intend to enforce, after all their attempts to deny it, and nothing short of conscientious religious observance of another day will secure exemption from such enforcement. But who of all the readers of the bill will fail to see their perfidty and treachery when, after making this fine looking proposition, they add a proviso which positively and absolutely nullifies the terms of exemption and places those who observe another day on precisely the same footing as those who do not. What can be done in opposition to these manifestly hypocritical and treasonable attempts to induce Congress to force everybody to submit to their dictation as to what day they shall keep, and how they shall keep it!

In the political discussion of these measures facts will be expressed in plain English, and the character and aims of these religio-political demagogues will be exposed regardless of the sheep's clothing they have assumed, and it is hoped that those who appreciate liberty of conscience will protest in unmistakable terms against being robbed of their dearest rights and highest privileges.

WINNIPEG TO DULUTH.

The New Line Expected to be in Running Order This Year.

WINNIPEG, Telegram, to Pioneer Press, Jan. 28.—Mr. Wright, president of the Winnipeg & Duluth, and Mr. Fisher, general manager, are in the city. They came here to confer with Winnipeg & Southeastern people, with whom they have been carrying on negotiations, as they expect to reach this city over the line which the latter have a charter for building from here to the boundary. They also desired to look over Winnipeg and size up its importance as a railway town, and as a result of their visit they are more than ever impressed with the desirability of locating in this city and through it the great Northwest for trade for their new road. There is said to be an agreement between the two companies that the Winnipeg & Duluth is to be at the international boundary as soon as the Winnipeg & Southeastern is there. A director of the latter enterprise said that before the present year is out they hoped to have the railway running from here to Duluth. Work on the Southeastern will be resumed as soon as spring comes.

The Western Rural, Chicago.

We call the attention of our readers to The Western Rural and American Stockman, one of the oldest and best known of our agricultural and family newspapers. Upon questions of political economy and reform The Rural is one of the ablest exponents of agriculture and a faithful worker in behalf of the farmer and his best interests. The single subscription price of The Rural and Stockman is $1.50 per year, of fifty-two issues. For free sample copies address MILTON GEORGE, Chicago, Ill.

War on the Sugar Trust.

The Western Rural.

Trusts have been so rapidly organized during the last few years, "cornering" nearly every necessary and many of the more commonly used luxuries of life—the undisguised object being to extort money from the consumer—that the people have become exceedingly irritated and restless. Never in the history of this country has a greater degree of unrest been manifested among the people; and whenever such a feeling develops the conclusion may be at once reached—without the slightest fear of indulging an error—that there is grievous injustice somewhere. People in the full enjoyment of their rights do not, as a people, complain. The history of rebellions—with only enough exceptions to make the rule—is a history of oppression and outrage, finally ripening into an effort of some kind to throw off the yoke. Ours is a prosperous country. A more rapid accumulation of wealth has never been seen during the same length of time, in any nation during the entire history of the world; and even now while farmers are selling grain and stock at a positive loss, middlemen are making money in handling the farmer's products. The profits are sufficient even now but they are diverted from the pockets into which they should go. The millions of producers are not being remunerated for creating that which is making somebody rich.

Under such circumstances it would be marvelous if the American people, whose life-training has been in the direction of the belief that impartial justice is the chief corner stone of our system of government, should not become restless and resort to unusual and somewhat heroic means of self-protection. The notion of boycotting sugar for the purpose of crippling the sugar trust, is a resort of this character, and whatever anybody may think of its practicability, the idea clearly shows that the people are agitated and that the public mind is working in a direction that will ultimately overwhelm all such injustices as are represented by the plundering trusts; and it is a consummation devoutly to be wished. For a long time the consumer has been paying three or four cents a pound more for sugar than it was squarely worth in the market, simply because a body of men had combined to rob the consumer of that excess. It requires but little computation to show what an enormous aggregate this extortion has taken from the consumers of the United States, and with something of a conception of that large amount, there will be little wonder in any unprejudiced mind that the idea of giving up the use of sugar until it can be had at a reasonable price, should be entertained by many of the most thoughtful people in the country. But although this course may be open to objectionn upon the grounds that it is not the best course or indeed that it is not practical, our people when sufficiently aroused will sometimes accomplish their purposes through very extraordinary means. They are descendants of the people who landed on Plymouth Rock, and the birth of American civilization at the landing of the Pilgrims, was about the last thing that men and women would have expected. The destruction of the tea in Boston harbor, the declaration of independence on the part of a few weak colonies and the armed resistance of these colonies to the authority of a powerful nation, seemed wild and reckless. But it was an unconquerable spirit of manhood that suggested them, and that spirit is still alive among the American people. Whatever course may be determined upon to crush the sugar and other trusts, there need be little fear of failure if the people are united. It is probably true, however, that our emancipation from such evils, if permanent, will come through a closer union of the masses, and efficient anti trust legislation as a consequence.

Relief for Settlers on N. P. Lands.

WASHINGTON, Telegram, to St. Paul, News, Jan. 28.—Congressman Comstock has introduced a bill for the relief of settlers on the second indemnity belt on the line of the Northern Pacific road, opened to settlement in 1887 by the then Secretary of the Interior. Several hundred people filed claims on this tract and a large number made final proofs. They spent a large amount of money and time in making the customary improvements. These lands were afterwards withdrawn by the Secretary of the Interior, and the courts held that the belt was within the Northern Pacific grant. The settlers lost everything. The bill introduced provides that the dislodged settlers may take up other lands and make final proof on the same without the usual expense of improvements. They, of course, lose all the improvements on their old claims. The measure, however, will prove a great relief to them.

Absorbed New Capital.

DULUTH, Telegram, to Pioneer Press, Jan. 27.—A deed of trust from the Duluth & Winnipeg to the Guarantee Loan and Trust Company of Philadelphia for $7,000,000 was filed to-day in the register of deeds office here. It covers the line right of way, rolling stock, etc., of the road, as well as moneys advanced for construction purposes. R. S. Munger, one of the directors of the road, returned from the east to-day noon bringing the news that the company has absorbed much new capital, and is now on a splendid financial basis. Work will begin on the extension to the Canadian border just as soon as the weather will permit of grading, and it will be completed this year. Surveyors are now out running the lines for the extension. The company has decided to give orders for locomotives and passenger and freight equipment at once.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before U. S. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Gulbran Pederson Branten, Joan Olson Seeter, Torr Johnson and Andrew A. Bakken, all of Dugdale, Polk Co., Minn. Any person who desires to protest against the allowance of such proof, or who knows of any substantial reason, under the law and the regulations of the Interior Department, why such proof should not be allowed, will be given an opportunity at the above mentioned time and place to cross-examine the witnesses of said claimant, and to offer evidence in rebuttal of that submitted by claimant.

Money to loan in large or small sums on good farms. Choice farms and city property for sale. CHAS. M. LOWE, [17-tf] Broadway, Crookston.

The town of Roome comes to the front this week with a new alliance containing 16 members. President, J. J. Ide; vice-president, Ole Knudson; secretary, P. B. Anderson, and treasurer, Martin Finseth. On Monday evening the secretary, Mr. Anderson, came into THE JOURNAL office, made out and forwarded the application for charter on blanks which we have for the purpose. They expect to more than double their membership at their first regular meeting.

Our subscription list is growing encouragingly, and we wish to return our thanks to those of our friends who have spoken a good word for THE JOURNAL, which has been one cause of this increase in the list. Very often we are told: "So and so, who takes THE JOURNAL, told me about the paper and advised me to try it. Here's your money, put my name down on your list." Thanks, friends, that's just what we want. The larger our list the more good we shall be able to do our patrons. Every farmer in the county should have THE JOURNAL.

Evaporated peaches, apricots, raspberries, blackberries, silver prunes, California prunes, prunes and fine raisins in large variety, just received at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

Theo. Greenhalgh has returned from his western trip and says he did not see a day of pleasant weather while away from Minnesota. Saw many of the old-time Crookston people at Tacoma: W. H. Jennings is doing well in his mill business. Expects to move his mill soon to a more eligible site. Our old friend W. F. Zwickey was dept. sheriff in charge of a bankrupt stock of merchandise (it seems they have such things out there,) Wm. Box, Sr., is doing very well as was the others whom he saw. Robert Houston has a townsite called Puget City—we suppose "Bob" cares less for the "Pu" than what he can "get" out of it. Theodore thinks a man can do well enough out there if he has plenty of money and knows how to handle it, but it is no place for a laboring man as there are about 40 men to every job.

At Last!

Wm. Dawley's commission arrived on Tuesday and he took possession of the post-office in the evening of that day. THE JOURNAL adds its blessing.

The Great Northern R. R.

The officials of the old Manitoba are nearly all retained.

Oppose Religious Legislation.

Every person who has not already signed petitions to Congress, should do so at once. Those who have signed petitions favoring the passage of the Blair Sunday Bill, but who now see, that, in the light of Christ's Golden Rule of conduct for his followers, "Do unto others as ye would that they should do to you." No Christian can, consistently, help to force others who differ from him, into an unwilling observance of Sunday, should also sign them. Blanks for this purpose have been left at Herb Mason's News Stand. Each person should sign both petitions, one being to the Senate, and the other to the House of Representatives. They are just alike and read as follows:

"We the undersigned, adult residents of the United States, 21 years of age or more, hereby respectfully, but earnestly, petition your Honorable Body not to pass any bill in regard to the observance of the Sabbath, or Lord's day, or any other religious or ecclesiastical institution or rite; nor to favor in any way the adoption of any resolution for the amendment of the National Constitution that would in any way give preference to the principles of any one religion above another, or that would in any way sanction legislation upon the subject of religion; but that the total separation between religion and the state, assured by our National Constitution as it now is, may forever remain as our fathers established it."

On Tuesday of last week Gracie, the little nine-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Vannet, died of cholera infantum after a short illness of about 36 hours. Crookston Farmers' Alliance met in the hall on Monday. Twenty-two members joined and seven new applications were received. As the executive committee, at their last meeting, fixed the number of delegates at one for each sub-alliance, and one alternate, our alliance found that its action in electing three at its preliminary meeting was illegal, so, on motion, the vote was re-considered and secretary A. N. Hixson was elected delegate, and president, F. Bivins, alternate. The committee on by-laws reported, and after a slight change the by-laws as reported were adopted. Interesting discussions of topics concerning the welfare of farmers occupied some time, and the meeting adjourned till Monday, Feb. 10th, at 2 p. m., when it is expected an important communication will be received from the Secretary of the State Alliance. Every member of the alliance should be on deck to hear what that communication is, and every one should bring along a new recruit. There are 40 charter members, 82 joined at last meeting and seven new application, 69 in all. So far, each one has done good missionary work, but we should not stop until every farmer is in line. A little good work now will tell in the future. Now is the time to work when the farm work does not crowd.

Woodside Notes.

WOODSIDE, Minn., Feb. 4, 1890.

A few days more of such fine weather will entirely ruin the sleighing.

Nearly every person in this locality has been sick with la grippe.

Mr. Nils Nilson went down to Crookston last Wednesday to make final proof on his place.

Mr. W. J. Nickle the famous pedagogue, who is now teaching in school district No. 190, went to McIntosh last Saturday and returned on Sunday.

Mr. S. W. Fisk has a patent saw for sale, with which one man can do the work of three, its a daisy.

Its a curious fact that anything publiseed, be it good or bad, even if it is intended for none is sure to produce a marked effect, the coat if it has ever so bad a cut seems always to fit some, and will undoubtedly find a wearer. As innocent a thing as the "farmers' dream" was has apparently found an owner, Ha! ha! well what of that? let the galled gade wince our withers are unwrung.

FARMER.

To the Teachers of Polk County.

In order that the teachers may have timely notice of the spring examination and be in readiness to attend, at least one of the examinations which will be held in the county, I call their attention to the following:

All teachers expecting to teach in this county during the present year, must be in attendance at the examination, which will be held sometime about the beginning of March. (The exact date will be given through the press in the near future.)

The following are the studies required for a third grade: Reading, writing, geography, grammar, orthography, hygiene, arithmetic and history of the United States. An average of 65 per cent. will be required, and no branch lower than 50 per cent.

To the above will be added for a second grade, Theory and Practice and Civil Government. An average of 75 per cent. will be required; no branch being lower than 60 per cent.

To obtain a first grade the applicant will be examined in physical geography, physiology, geometry, natural philosophy and algebra, together with all the branches mentioned in the second grade. An average of 80 per cent. will be necessary; no study being lower than 65 per cent.

Certificates given by my predecessors will not be indorsed nor extended after the spring examination.

The object in calling out all the teachers, is not only to test their qualifications, but to give such instruction to them as they will need in carrying out the plan of the school work in the future.

It is our object to establish a regular, systematic grading of the common schools of this county, and with that purpose in view, each school in the county will be furnished with Teachers' Classification Register and the course of study prescribed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and several of the most eminent educators of the state.

There is no valid reason why the common schools cannot be systematically graded and have a well defined course of study, as well as the high schools or normals. By the hearty co-operation of the teachers, we will prove this not only practicable, but that we will avoid that miscellaneous, aimless and unprogressive condition of things which are usual in the common schools.

As an additional incentive for pupils to accomplish the work laid out, every one who completes the regular course of study will be presented with a very elegant and artistic diploma.

THOMAS CASEY,
Supt. of Schools.

The Thirteen Towns: Miss Inez McGrew, of Crookston, was in the city this week making arrangements for a concert to be given at the Opera House in Fosston on Thursday evening, February 13th. The programme is being carefully selected and arranged. Miss McGrew has the reputation of being one of the best musicians in Polk county, being organist in one of the leading Churches in Crookston and has frequently presided at the organ here during public entertainments, and has never failed to delight the audience. Under her management it is safe to say that the entertainment will be first class in all respects and excel anything yet given in Fosston. Its character will certainly merit a crowded house which we confidently expect to see. The programme will be published in our next issue.

Farming Tribune: The United States gave to the Pacific railroads about fifty million dollars worth of land, and also loaned them $130,0000,000, upon which they have never paid any interest. Now with millions of dollars lying idle in the treasury, why should not the government loan a few thousand to the farmers of the west, instead of compelling them to borrow from English syndicates and eastern insurance companies at ruinous rates of interest? The farms of the country are better security than the Pacific railroads, and if the mortgages should have to be foreclosed would it not be better to have the government own the farms than have them pass into the hands of these foreign corporations?

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

They say Ole Hanson is a candidate for deputy collector under Johnson, with good chances of success. That is as it should be. Ole is a rustler from way back and deserves recognition, and if we dared to hope that Crookston could get anything in this deal we would endorse him heartily. But all we seem to be good for is to work and vote for the ticket, and as a reward get—left.

The meeting of the State Alliance on March 4th will be a very important one, and every sub-alliance should send a delegate. Elect a delegate and an alternate, as no proxies will be allowed, and be sure you elect your best men. It is probable that a portion of the expense of your delegate will be met by the State Alliance, and even if it should not, no alliance can afford to be unrepresented. You can thus find out more about what the alliance can do for the farmer than you can in any other way. Be sure and send a good man, one who can tell you all about it on his return.

If you want to buy wheat for seed from the elevators now, we are told, you have to pay 89 cents per bushel for No. 1 HARD. This suggests a question: "Where did they get that No. 1 Hard when their instructions from below all the fall have been to grade no wheat No. 1 Hard?" If our millers want to buy wheat of the elevators they have to pay 80 cents, but if they dared pay a farmer 80 cents for his wheat (same quality as the elevators have) up comes a threat: "Let up on that or down goes your shanty!" And yet we call this a "FREE COUNTRY," and some farmers can't see what good the farmers alliance can do them!

In a recent issue, the Kittson County Enterprise raked THE JOURNAL over the coals for "defending the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners." In an article in its last issue the Enterprise repeats much that we have often said going to show the DEFECTS of the system. He then says: "If the present system is to remain in force, let it be amended so as to provide for its election by the people." Probably that would be an improvement, but would it not be better to take it out of politics entirely, if possible? It was created simply and solely for business, and it seems to us the farther away from politics we can get it, the more business we can expect from it. Some have suggested having the appointment of the board made by the Supreme Judges, of men recommended by the Farmers' Alliance; the board to appoint its inspectors, weighers, &c. It is plain that some change is needed, just how to get at it properly don't seem to be so plain. We are informed that the elevators and railroads would like to see the commission abolished, and we cannot see where the interests of the producer can be best subserved by consenting to that. Before the commission was established the farmer could not even ship his own wheat; now he can, which is much to his advantage, but we want to see the law so adjusted that he can sell his wheat right in his own market to just as good advantage as though he shipped it, and we believe that it can be accomplished.

And So It Goes.

From all over the county the cry is heard: "Come and help us!" We have this week a request from St. Hilaire for an alliance speaker to visit St. Hilaire on Friday, Feb. 14th, and we have arranged to have one there on that date, and we expect a rattling good speaker to go up there on that day and awake the echoes. Let every JOURNAL reader in that vicinity not only turn out and hear what the alliance proposes to do, but tell your neighbors and friends also to come. The meeting, we believe, is called for one o'clock, and let every farmer come prepared to cast in his lot with his brother farmers, now, while the mighty wave is rolling o'er the land. Twelve alliances for Polk County in January looks like something was going to be did—and it is!

MINNESOTA STATE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

St. Paul, Tuesday, March 4th 1890.

A CIRCULAR LETTER TO THE SUBORDINATE ALLIANCES.

MANKATO, Minn., Jan. 22, 1890.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Minnesota State Farmers' Alliance, held on the 21st inst., at St. Paul, I was instructed by resolution to communicate with each Subordinate Alliance in the State, and press upon their attention the following views:

1. The growth of the Farmers' Alliance in Minnesota during the past year has been most gratifying and astonishing, and the promise for the future is such that the Alliance will be able to do great good for the farmers, not only in securing their cheap hail, life and fire insurance, and cheap agricultural machinery, twine, coal, lumber, etc., but also by combining producers together and securing a Legislature next fall that will reform the great abuses of which the people justly complain, and which they suffer at the hands of the railroad companies, elevators millers' rings, etc.

2. The Executive Committee therefore request me to urge upon you the importance of sustaining the Alliance by every means in your power. If your Alliance has become careless and inattentive to its duties, or defunct, we urge you, on receipt of this letter, to at once CALL TOGETHER THE MEMBERS AND OTHER FARMERS, and either revive the old organization, by the election of new officers and providing for the payment of the dues for the year 1889; or by forming a new Alliance with a new charter number; and send in to me $2.00 for a new charter. At the same meeting elect a delegate and alternate to the annual meeting of the State Alliance, which will be held at the Capitol, St. Paul, on the 4th day of March, 1890, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The Executive Committee at the meeting Jan. 22, adopted unanimously the following resolutions:

RESOLVED.—That the Executive Committee will recommend to the State Alliance, at its next meeting, that so much of the dues of each subordinate alliance as is necessary to pay the expenses of the delegate or alternate of such subordinate alliance, to the next annual meeting, shall be repaid to such delegate or alternate for his expenses, to-wit, railroad fare and lodging, while in St. Paul.

This resolution will undoubtedly be adopted by the State Allance. The meaning is as follows: If your Alliance contains, say 25 members, and you pay 30 cents for each member, or in other words $7.50, if the expenses of your delegate to the annual meeting are, we will say $5, then out of the said sum of $7.00 the sum of $5.00 will be repaid by the State Alliance at that meeting to such delegate or alternate. If, on the other hand, the delegate's expenses are $15.00, then he gets back the $7.50 paid by his Alliance, and as much more of the balance as the condition of the Alliance treasury will justify. The object of the resolution is to increase the attendance of delegates at the annual meeting; for we recognize the fact that the larger the annual meeting the greater will be the influence and power of the State Alliance for good. We hope you will see to it that your Alliance is represented at our annual meeting by one of your earnest and intelligent members.

3. I would further state that the Executive Committee have taken steps, and expect to obtain, the usual reduction of railroad rates on all railroads in the state, of one-half the usual fare, or a rate of one full fare and one-fifth for the round trip. The details will be published in the Great West and Farm, Stock and Home, previous to the annual meeting. In the same papers will also be furnished the names of boarding houses and hotels in St. Paul at which lower rates will be given to the members of the Alliance, during the session of the State Alliance.

4. I enclose you a card on which you will insert the names of your delegate and alternate. This card will constitute their credentials; and will, after being shown to the committee on credentials, be retained by delegate or alternate, and used as a ticket of admission to the secret session of the Alliance. It will also be used in obtaining the rebate on the railroad fares home from the Alliance meeting. No proxies will be admitted under any circumstances.

5. It is very important for the future work of the State Alliance that your secretary should carefully fill up the enclosed blanks,—especially giving the name and post-office address of all your members. As the benefits of the low prices of goods, obtained by a Purchasing Department, can only be enjoyed by members of the Alliance, this list of members will become of great importance. We especially desire that you should give the name of the county and township in which your alliance is located. The State Alliance intends that every agricultural township in the state shall be organized. The list of names of leading farmers in such unorganized townships will help us in this work.

This report can be sent me if possible, or brought to our next annual meeting by your delegate or alternate. Remember that the dues must be paid to entitle the delegate to admission.

We hope that as the alliance is fighting your battle, you will come forward and help us. Revive your organization if defunct; if it is alive extend its membership; get up a sentiment of enthusiasm for the work; and remember that those only continue enslaved who have the spirits of slaves. We propose to relieve the farmers of their burdens if the farmers will only stand by us. Work hard to get every farmer in your neighborhood to join the alliance.

Very Respectfully Yours,
GEO. W. HAIGH, Secretary.

A Washington telegram to the Minneapolis Evening Journal says that the rallying cry of Northern Minnesota may be "Col. C. H. Graves for Governor." Yes, and it MAY not. If we read the signs of the times aright the farmers of Minnesota will have something to say on that subject, and we very much mistake them if they will "rally" to any very enthusiastic extent around the of Duluth. The Board of Rrilroad and Warehouse Commissioners was created for the sole purpose of protecting the rights of the producers, and they claimed the right to dictate the appointments under it, and the farmers will not soon forget how Speaker Graves used the weight of the position they had given him to oppose those candidates, claiming that as the business had to be done in Duluth that Duluth (i e the ELEVATOR SYSTEM of Duluth) should dictate the appointments.

Whose Hand is It?

The Great West.

Again we are urged to publish the schemes, if any, which underlie the surface in relation to the Alliance and the coming state meeting March 4th?

Again we state that never was the duty of a paper more clearly outlined than our duty to avoid any entangling disputes or discussions.

At the same time at least four hundred new and revived Alliances, coming upon the battle-field of ideas with a splendid loyalty, demand that they shall know their foes. The powerful sentiment thus exhibited says the alliance-for-farmers is what they are members of, and not an alliance-for-politicians. The insurance scheme which has been rising and falling like a cracked thermometer in a bake-oven, with a broken promise at every flutter, has been practically and quietly laid at rest—and the National organization backed by three million members, and a grand record and large capital, will enter the field as soon as the machinery of organization can be set in motion, and the matter explained at the annual meeting. But the political move was not dropped with Mr. Scheffer's Insurance Co. (Mr. Scheffer will pardon us if we use his name too intimately with this affair. It was, of course, a personal plan of others, to which he gave ear, but it goes by his name.) The wire-pulling is still progressing. Mr. Scheffer and Charley Gilman are constructing a "natatorium" where the Alliance "war horse" may get into the swim. What, Mr. Scheffer up for governor again? No sir—probably not—and yet——.

Men and Brethren: Let us have harmony and peace—on this line, that the Alliance is solely for farmers, and their legislative labors for redemption—that this political monkey-work must cease and cease entirely.

Come out in force. The rule that only delegates and alternates will be admitted to the hall will be enforced during the business or day sessions—so says the Executive committee. Cards will be sent to every Alliance for that purpose.

Send your delegates from the extremest part of the state! The dues paid by sub-alliances into the State Alliance on March 4th, will be divided up pro-rata to pay delegates' expenses.

The Great West is making arrangements with boarding houses close by the capital to take delegates at very low rates.

Arrangements will undoubtedly be made to secure one-and-one-fifth railway fares.

If possible send to the Great West the names of delegates from every alliance. Make a SPECIAL EFFORT to do this—it will be a matter of interest to you to do so.

Come with a clean purpose to stand by no man or set of men. Stand by no political scheme. Be free—and as soon as an official or any other man begins to work the racket of any old political profligates or their sweetly smiling henchmen, give them a wide berth.

Never, in the history of this northwest has a more important meeting been held. It will decide much for the future. Alliances without number will decide for life or burial on its action. The splendid generalship of the lecturers all over the state has marshalled an army of true men and they are not for sale. And we admire the zeal of that man, who in spite of the delinquencies of officials, their broken promises, and misrepresentations, and misfortunes of his own, has as head of the lecture bureau, put this force into the field.

Let but this meeting shake off the political carbuncles who use alliance men as tools, and there will be a glorified resurrection of the buried hopes of the laborer, on all these broad prairies. Like an evangel of grace it will give promises not made to be broken.

A private letter to the editor of THE JOURNAL from Hon. S. G. Comstock says that the President will doubtless issue his proclamation opening the Red Lake Reservation, just as soon as he has had time to examine the papers in the case. Mr. Comstock has worked earnestly and incessantly in the interest of the people in this matter as well as every other affecting their interest in Congress.

The Daily Globe: A Missouri farmer, with a turn for statistics, has furnished a communication to his county paper on the subject of official salaries, in which he states that an official who receives $4,000 per year salary absorbs the price of 26,666 bushels of corn at 15 cents per bushel, or of 6,666 bushels of wheat at 60 cents per bushel, or 33,333 bushels of oats at 12 cents, or the price of fifty good farm horses. He also estimates that a farm hand at $13 per month would have to work the year round for a quarter of a century to earn the same amount, and adds that in 1866-7-68, about 5,000 to 8,000 bushels of corn would have footed the bill, or 5,000 bushels of wheat.

Polk County Journal.

W. G. COOKE, Publisher.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., FEBRUARY 6, 1890.

Defending the Governor.

St. Paul Daily News.

The Polk County Journal, takes the Daily News to task for its statement that Gov. Merriam is a oneterm man. It says, "There was nothing in that (his) campaign to warrant the statement that it was necessarily a one-term campaign. If there was we would like to have it pointed out."

Our cotemporary should recall the history of the Republican party of State in order to more clearly understand the situation. With the single exception of Gov. Davis, who peremptorily declined to be a candidate for the second term, every Governor since the inception of the State has been indorsed by a renomination and re-election.

This has been, too, the party record, as all the Governors have been Republicans except at the outset of the State organization. Gov. McGill has especially carried the party standard, which was high license, at that time, to success. It was largely to his efforts that the law, which all parties cheerfully acquiesce in, was placed upon the statute book.

The party convention which nominated Gov. Merriam passed resolutions eulogizing Gov. McGill and his administration, but repudiated him as a candidate. The only excuse given for this, other than the desire of another candidate to secure the place, was that his majority was so small when elected the party could not afford to run such a risk again.

The injustice of such a comment is, of course, apparent. The majority was small because Gov. McGill so squarely stood upon the high license issue, which was that of the party. At that time there was much opposition to that policy, but like many measures which have been carried to success on a narrow margin, it became popular and by the time of the next convention, when Gov. McGill was entitled to an indorsement, the issue of a previous campaign which had reduced his majority, was decidedly popular.

It would have been no more dangerous to have nominated Gov. McGill, if the party was honest, than it was to indorse his policy, for if they really were sincere in indorsing that, the nomination of another man would not imply that there was to be a change. Consequently the one-term precedent was established purely and simply as an accommodation to Gov. Merriam.

This certainly commits him to the one-term policy. He cannot consistently adopt any other. His breaking the party precedent of over a quarter of a century, established a new one which he is in honor and duty bound to indorse, and the Daily News is one of those who believes he has sufficient political integrity to do so.

Our contemporary and those who take the same view he does, really cast a reflection upon the Governor in assuming that he does not accept the one-term precedent, and it is for the purpose of defending Gov. Merriam and setting him right before the public that the Daily News presents this statement.

Marshall County Leader.

Many of our exchanges are still filling their colums with harrowing instances of rascality and robbery by the elevator companies and their accomplices, the railroads. The evidence is complete and it ought by this time to be fully known to all who have their eyes as much as half open that the farmers of western Minnesota and Dakota received from six to ten cents per bushel less for the wheat crop of 1889, than they were in all justice entitled to. Nearly every producer believes this to be so and an army of them can prove it to a conclusion by evidence of practical results obtained in loading and shipping their own wheat. It is a question of extreme doubt whether the crop as a whole paid the expense of its production, by allowing it did, an added six or eight cents per bushel would have left a very encouraging profit in the farmer's pockets. The manufacturer or man of commerce who discovers a leakage in his business does not hesitate in searching a remedy and applying it. Farmers, you have located without difficulty one of the greatest obstacle to your success. Now what are you going to do about it? Will you stand with your hands in your empty pockets, cursing the condition of affairs which results in your robbery, but waiting for the year to roll round and a repetition of the same outrage to be perpetrated next year and through the succeeding years? Does it not seem an extraordinary thing that farmers who are numerically far more powerful than those engaged in any other occupation, and who are the foundation upon which the superstructure of every other business is reared, should meekly submit to accumulation of burdens which are making them as helpless, and as securely crushing them to the earth, as are the foundation stone of a palace? Several possible future conditions of the agricultural class suggest themselves. By continuing as plastic, inanimate clay in the hands of active and constructive man of other tra es the tillers of the soil will rapidly attain the form and character of tenant or serfs. Indeed, are they far removed from that state now while living upon their mortgaged farms paying interest to their mortgages and exorbitant tributes to those who relieve them of their products? The condition of future independence would not seem improbable of a united and persistent assertion of natural rights were made. Will this apparent drifting towards a condition of serfdom continue, all prove the truth of the ancient theory that one class is born to rule and another to serve, or will it be checked and the theory disproved? The two institutions, the present working of which are of greatest immediate menace to this partictlar section of country are the railroads and the elevators. Both are subjects for legislative control. Minnesota's law-makers have tussled with the subject at every session of the legislature as far back as one cares to look, but as in every other case of legislation which touches the relation of money and muscle, money has won. The next legislature will also face the question, and the character of its members will decide the spirit of the legislation. Not a senator or representative can be elected from western Minnesota without farmer's votes. Farmers, the field of politics is the battle ground upon which you must meet these giant foes if you would emancipate yourselves. Ballots are your weapons. Study the situation well that you are led into no traps by your skilled adversaries, and next fall send from Western Minnesota to the Capitol a solid delegation who are pledged to support your interests. Send men not because they are republicans or democrats, Scandinavians or Americans, but capable men of undoubted faithfulness and integrity to your interests, pledged to exercise their utmost power in your cause.

We are pleased to announce that we have made arrangements with the St. Paul Daily News whereby we can offer that enterprising sheet for only 25 cents advance over our former offer. Thus, for new subscribers and

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted where the paper is published.
4. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid for, is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud.

The United States Treasurer.

The Western Rural.

The biggest man in the United States to-day is the Treasurer of the nation. He is a financial autocrat. He has hold of our pocket-books and has one foot on the throat of our industries. His chief ostensible business, as "Long" John used to say, "is to sit on the 'chist." There is somewhere near a billion dollars in the "chist," and the Treasurer means it shall stay there. The people need money but the treasurer keeps his seat. Once in a while he finds that Wall Street is a little short of money, and that the financial tide is low, when he and the Secretary of the Treasurer get their heads together and buy a few bonds "to ease the money market." The fact is that our money is manipulated, increased or diminished in volume, at the virtual dictation of one man. It is a curious condition of affairs. The people's money—the life-current of trade—certainly ought to be in a condition to ebb and flow according to the demands of trade and not solely at the will of Wall Street. The theory of the advocates of the old inter-convertible bond plan was a good one. That theory was that if money was exchangeable for bonds and bonds exchangeable for money, at the pleasure of the holder, the volume of currency would regulate itself. If money was more valuable in circulation than it was invested in bonds, it would be drawn out of the treasury, and returned when it was not wanted for use.

The postal savings bank system, which this journal has always advocated, would reduce this theory to practice to a very large extent. The government could well afford to pay interest upon the savings of a large class of its people, who do not invest their little surplus now because there is no safe place of investment; and every five dollar bond that the government should issue would make a better patriot of the men who held it. Put such a bond into the hands of an anarchist and he would at once become the supporter of law and government. A public debt in this way might be considered a public blessing. Then the system, as before said, would be something of a regulator of the volume of currency. Something ought to be done and must be done to free the circulation from private manipulation and certainly something should be done to limit the power of the Treasurer of the United States to the end that he may not increase or decrease the volume of money to suit his own sweet will.

The Farmer's Idea of Tariff.

J. Wilson, in Iowa State Register.

We import $25,000,000 worth of hides a year. Put the average duty on hides, or let things the farmer needs in his family come in free also, is the farmer's idea of tariff.

Sixteen million dozen of eggs come here free every year. We can supply them. Put 40 per cent tariff on eggs, or let other things we buy come in free, is the farmer's idea of tariff.

We buy horses for working by tens of thousands duty free. Put as high an average duty on such horses as on other protected imports, or let the others in free also, is the farmer's idea of tariff.

We import $3,000,000 worth of potatoes a year. We can supply them. Put a duty on potatoes as high as on blankets and clothing, or let blankets and clothing come in free, is the farmer's idea of tariff.

Changes Expensive.

Prof. Chamberlain: Change brings expense and loss in all things, especially in farming, and should never be made without clear proof of a net advantage to be gained. It will cost a thrifty farmer far more than $1,000 to move to another State and get starte and get started as well again, and another $1,000 to learn new methods, for soil and climate. Will it pay to change? Take the two States of Ohio and Iowa—grand States. My advice to nearly all the farmers in both States would be to stay right where they are and do the best they can there.

Marion Harland's Appeal to the Women of America.

Marion Harland, the friend and helper of women everywhere, has taken up the work of restoring the ruined monument marking the burial place of Mary the Mother of Washington. She says truly—in her appeal to the mothers and daughters of America to erect a fitting monument to her who gave Our Country a Father—that "the sun shines upon no sadder ruin in the length and breadth of our land, than this unfinished structure."

The publishers of The Home-Maker, of which Marion Harland is the editor, offer, as their contribution to the good cause, seventy-five cents out of every annual subscription of two dollars to the magazine, sent in during the next six months. Every such subscription must be accompanied by the words, "For Mary Washington Monument." The offer is generous, and should meet with an enthusiastic response.

The Age of Greed.

The Western Rural, Chicago.

Never in the whole history of the world has greed been so rampant as it is to day. Yet greed has destroyed some of the most flourishing communities that have ever existed, and it would have utterly destroyed this Republic before now but for exceptional circumstances that have been favorable to the people. Our immense area of cheap lands has been our salvation so far, and as these are taken up, and land becomes more valuable, the condition of the masses grows worse. The spirit of greed grows stronger as it feeds upon its prey, until now it presents in this country, the most revolting picture of depraved humanity that human eye ever rested upon. It makes practical traitors of citizens. There are men in this country who know that their greed is weakening the Republic just as well as Jefferson Davis knew that his course was in the direction of the destruction of the Union. The rich criminal classes—the men whose lives are devoted to money getting by trampling upon the rights of others, know that their love of money is superior to their love of country. They coin both peace and war into dollars. They solidify the sweat in the harvest field and the blood of patriots on the battle field into wealth. They are a living, moving heartless organization of greed.

It remains for the people to say if the age shall not be turned from one of greed into an age of patriotism and humanity. Man is too noble a being, too nobly gifted, and with too grand possibilities to descend to the level of an idol worship. As a people our opportunities to achieve nobly for the human race throughout all time are too great to be thrown away by ourselves, or for to permit a few reckless men of absorbing greed to throw them away. As men, as patriots, and as well wishers of human race, let us come together and assert our power. As matters now promise, in twenty-five years this country will be an Ireland. We not only have men who are native born who would make it so, but European capitalists are coming here to monopolize all our great industries, and to exercise their well trained instincts of oppression. There never will be in the whole future experience of the world, as there never has been in its past history, a time when men can assert the manhood of man and rights of the masses as they can to-day in this United States of America. Come, let us emerge from our lethargy and bid greed stand back and give honesty, decency and patriotism a chance. Posterity will hold us responsible. Our own children will hold us responsible. Let no prejudices, partisan or otherwise, keep the people from standing breast to breast in the demand for legislation to check the rampant spirit of greed that is sapping the life out of our Republic. Good laws and the faithful execution of laws are what we want and what we must have. But we must stand together in order to get either.

Fergus Fall Journal: Senator Washburn has introduced a bill providing for an Indian industrial school in Minnesota, similar to the one at Carlisle, Pa. The bill provides for an appropriation of $50,000, to be expended under the direction of the secretary of the interior in the erection of the necessary buildings. It will be located in the northern part of the state, where it will accommodate the most pupils and in a town with good railroad facilities. The location is left to the discretion of the secretary of the interior, and different towns will be allowed to compete on the locality. The one donating the best tract of land will probably have the best show. Gen. Washburn thinks Brainerd a good location.

Comstock for the Old Soldiers.

The following letter which we find in the Duluth Tribune shows that the heart of our Representative in Congres. Hon. S. G. Comstock, is in the right place and that his sympathy is with the old soldier every time. We feel like shouting "We told you so," for that is just what we have said all along, when the soldier hating press were trying to prejudice the old boys against him:

House of Representatives, U. S., Washington D. C., 1416 K. St., N. W., Jan. 30, 1890.

Major G. H. Holden, Municipal Court, Duluth, Minn.

DEAR SIR: I have your letter of the 25th instant protesting against the removal of Col. Colvill as register of the Duluth land office.

I agree with you as to the impropriety of attempting to remove Col. Colvill. I think he has earned the right to be a democrat if he wishes, and I have not sympathized with, or concurred in, any effort looking to his removal, nor do I expect to. I sympathize with the old soldiers who desire the retention of those who have earned the right to serve out their term without inference to politics.

Yours truly,
S. G. COMSTOCK.

The Farmers Alliance.

Northfield News.

The agricultural interest of this country and particularly of the Northwest frequently finds arraigned against it all the multifarious forms of combination which selfish capital can invent. It is often the victim of every device that can be formulated by the cunning of capital and the greed of avarice. It pays tribute to the government, and is regarded as the plunder-ground of such organizations as the "dressed beef combine." In short, the farming community is the defenceless lamb held in the clutches of the ravenous wolf. But why is it defenceless? Only because it has failed to learn the lesson that capital began to learn years ago—the tremendous power of co-operation. "In union there is strength." Each individual farmer has stood alone for generations, and is today doing the same. And because he stands alone he is singled out and forced to contribute to powerful combines. The Farmers Alliance is an encouraging sign of the times that the agricultural interest has determined to make a specialty of protecting its own household. It has coddled and supported railways, manufactures and commerce until these creatures have become greater than their creator, for agriculture is the formulator and supporter of all of these. The Farmers Alliance is by no means an ideal institution, but it is a step in the right direction. As an organization it lacks many things; but at any rate it is an organization, and has for its purpose the guardianship of the interests of the agriculturalists as a class. Thus far its chief weakness is probably found in the fact that it is not more universally patronized and supported by the farmers themselves. The institution deserves the cordial and combined support of every man in the west who relies directly upon the cultivation of the land for the maintenance of himself and family. The News would be glad to be able to announce that the farmers of Minnesota had formed an alliance as dictatorial and commanding as the Chicago dressed beef combine; that they had established and definitely fixed the exact amount of cereals that should be produced and could thereby determine as autocratically the price of their products as the managers of a railway can fix the terms of transportation. Until the farmers learn thoroughly the lesson of combination and the irresistible strength of perfect union they will be and remain the shuttlecock of chance and the plaything of corporate monopoly. But in perfecting their organization the farmer must expect to stand alone. They will receive neither aid nor comfort from any other vested interests, for by combination for their own good they are emptying into the fire the fat of some other guild—some parasitic growth that has been fed upon profits wrung from the great underlying industry. Minnesota is an agricultural State, and that man or news paper that does not rejoice at the efforts of the agricultural interest to panoply itself against plunder is not true to the real well-being of our noble commonwealth. Success then to the Famers Alliance and the sturdy men who are standing obloquy and misrepresentation determined to fight the good fight until the most ignorant tiller of the soil has learned the very common lesson that "in union there is strength."

Northwestern Agriculturist: With one cross of a son of Jacoba Hertog (Friesian) a New York dairyman has bred from natives a herd of cows that averaged the last season 275 pounds of butter per day, an increase of over fifty per cent on the production of the original herd. As all the heifer calves were raised this is a fair test of the value of such a sire as he selected. Jacoba Hertog was a great butter cow and several of her daughters have produced twenty pounds of butter per week. It is not remarkable that heifers sired by the son of such a cow should prove remarkable milkers.

The Good Farm Manager.

Northwestern Agriculturist: Small crops and low prices test the farmer's capacity as a manager. When prices are high and crops good, a farmer of slovenly habits and even wasteful management can make money, but when prices are low and crops only fair or light, it takes close work to make enough to keep out of debt. This is especially true where much help is hired, as labor is out all proportion to the price of farm products. If labor is $20 per month when wheat is one dollar, it should be $14 per month when wheat is only worth seventy cents, and yet labor has not followed the decline in the price of farm products. If the prices of farm labor do not fall, or the prices of crops advance, the farmers who hire help will have to reduce their acreage to what they can cultivate themselves or go out of business entirely.

Standard Works.

Clements has novels from such standard authors as Dickens, Thackeroy, Scott, Pope, Charlotte Bronte, Cooper etc., etc. Those books are solidly and neatly bound in cloth and are sold at prices that are the lowest ever offered in this city. Alphonse Paradis, a prominent farmer from Poplar River, was in the city on blizzard day—Friday, and called at THE JOURNAL office for instructions as to the organization of a farmers' alliance in that town. Mr. P. is interested with Mr. Laframboise and Mr. Marchand in the cheese factory at Gentilly, and it is the intention to start one in Poplar River also. He is an enthusiast on the subject of the manufacture of potato flour. Says an institution of this kind is thoroughly practical and would be a big thing for farmers in connection with a starch factory.

Mrs. A. W. Mott and two children came up from Fertile on the D., C. & N. R. R., on Saturday and took the evening train on the old Pioneer line for Ada for a visit with relatives and friends before she starts for Spokane Falls to join her husband who is in business there. A. W. was one of the pioneer merchants of Ada moving from there to Beltrami and from there to Fertile. His motto was always "Live and let live" and it is said that he always sold goods very much cheaper than any house in the Northwest. He lost much money through bad debts. He says that while his trade in Spokane Falls is not as extensive as it was while here, it is a strictly cash trade and is teadily growing. That kind of man ought to be encouraged to stay in this country. He expects to return for his family about April 1st.

Rev. S. H. Barteau, who moved in from his farm last week, dropped in for a social chat on Tuesday. He has been farming for several years, raising a number of thousand bushels each year, and he is extremely bitter on the present grading system, claiming to have lost by it at least $800 on the past crop, money that the old man had toiled hard, early and late, to earn—gone to swell the bank accounts of those who fatten by means of an undue proportion of the results of the farmers' toil—cormorants, whose nest must be despoiled before justice can be done to the producer. Mr. B. complains of the inequalities of the grading system; his wheat had been graded everything in the list except 1 Hard or 1 Northern. Only a few days ago he took a load of that same wheat that he sold for rejected and No. 3, in the fall, to Grand Forks and sold it at the mill there for 60 cents per bushel, and the market price now is less than it was then. He thinks that wheat should be graded strictly on its merits as milling wheat, which he is sure was not done in his case, as his wheat makes first quality flour. And yet, with hundreds of such cases as this, Bro. Lamphere would have us believe that the farmer is supremely happy, raising 20 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre—to enrich speculators.

Tabor Alliance No. 657.

On Thursday morning at 6:30 the writer took the north bound train on his way to assist in the organization of a Farmers' Alliance in the town of Tabor. Upon arrival at Angus, about 8 o'clock, we found a furious snow-storm prevailing with the wind blowing great guns from the south, and we concluded that the prospects for a blizzard were so favorable that no meeting would be held that day, but to our surprise we were accosted by a young man a few minutes later who informed us that he came to convey us to the school house. Arriving at the school house, seven miles west of Angus, at 10 o'clock, we found a goodly group assembled, and in about 15 minutes more the house was filled to the extent of its seating capacity. After discussing the benefits hoped for in the Farmers' Alliance for an hour or so, we proceeded to organize an alliance of 26 members. Frank Cernousek was elected president, Frank Wavra, vice president, J. B. Bren, secretary, and John W. Bren, treasurer. Delegate elected to St. Paul, Frank Cernousek, alternate, James Novotny. The storm had prevented many of those living at distance from attending, as the prospects for a first-class blizzard were so promising that the venture would have been risky. The promise of Thursday was verified on Friday in a genuine old norwester, the worst storm of the season. After adjournment, at three o'clock p. m., we were invited to the residence of James Novotny where a royal dinner awaited our arrival, to which we did ample justice. The town of Tabor is settled mostly by Bohemians, a hardy, thrifty lot of farmers they are, too, who, could they have had their just rights in the markets, would to-day be in independent circumstances. That they are an intelligent people in shown in the nice new school house, completed last fall at a cost of about $1,200, fitted up with the latest style of school room furniture. They justly feel proud of their nice school house, than which there are none finer in the county. They are obliged to haul their fire wood from 12 to 13 miles, which is no small job, and yet they would be prosperous and happy could they but obtain the producer's rightful share of the profits of wheat-raising. Mr. Novotny, our host, is one of the leading men of the settlement, owning and conducting one of the largest farms in the settlement. That he has the right principles of the progressive American farmer is shown in the fact that he has given his children every opportunity in his power to procure a liberal education, and he has several sons now in business for themselves. He has gone into the alliance movement heart and soul, with a determination to make it win, and he assured us that every member who joined that day is made of the same material. These people feel that they should have a rightful share of the product of their toil so that they can get the wherewithal to build barns and better houses, and get more trees growing around their dwellings. The lack of trees strikes the stranger very forcibly, but we were told by many that they are glad to be able to get money enough to exist, without such luxuries as trees.

Onstad and Russia, No. 677.

Onstad and Russia Alliance received their charter this week. It is numbered 677. They will organize for work on Monday next. Last fall there was not 600 live alliances in the state. At the present rate of increase there will be 800 by the time the State Alliance meets in St. Paul on March 4th.

Well, yes, Friday was rather dusty. The biggest blizzard of the season prevailed from early dawn till dewey eve.

Don't get it into your head that, because the farmers are not prosperous the country is to blame, for it is not. We have the most fertile soil on the footstool, and if the farmer could obtain his rightful share in the deal they would all be independent as Lords. That state of things the alliance seeks to bring about.

JOHN MCLEAN.

Andrew O. Morvig treasurer of Garfield Alliance, No. 650, was in the city on Friday and made THE JOURNAL a pleasant call. He reports much enthusiasm among the farmers in that town and vicinity on the alliance question. They will send two live men to represent Garfield Alliance in the coming convention at St. Paul.

Heretofore one drawback to the success of the alliance has been the fact that so many of the farmers have kept out of it. The revival now seems to be genuine and hundreds are joining who never took any interest in it before. Remember that this is your own organization and will do for you just what you will it, but you must be true to your own interests and faithful to the last.

East Grand Forks Courier: Wednesday Hans Hanson, of Detroit, Minn., was in the city settling up the affairs of Martin Nelson, a conductor on the N. P. R. R., lately killed. Ole A. Thoreson and F. J. Duffy were appointed appraisers by the court, and reported the dead man's estate to consist of two months' salary as conductor, 40 shares of stock in the American building and Loan Association, of Minneapolis, and a trunk filled with wearing apparel. The deceased was a Swede, and had no relations in this country. His mother resides in Sweden, and to her will be forwarded the property, or rather its equivalent in cash.

Married.

Waupun Times.

MORRIS—HEATH.—At the Congregational Church, Waupun, on Wednesday, Jan. 22d, 1890, by Rev. Geo. Darling, Mr. Thomas Morris, of Crookston, Minn., and Miss Nellie Heath, of this city.

The contracting parties arrived at the church door promptly at four o'clock, the hour fixed for the ceremony, and found there very many guests assembled to witness the happy event. Rev. Geo. Darling performed the marriage ceremony in his usual happy manner, after which the bridal party and a few invited guests repaired to the house of the bride's parents, where all partook of the wedding feast, which it is needless to say was elaborate and very palatable. At 5:46 o'clock the groom and bride took the train for Oshkosh, from which place they went to St. Paul and Minneapolis. After a short visit there they proceeded on their way to their home in Crookston. The bride is one of Waupun's favorite daughters, being young, handsome, amiable and accomplished, and in her the groom has a gem of a wife, deserving of a husband's fondest love and esteem. In parting with her the people of Waupun do so with a feeling of sorrow mingled with joy—in sorrow for the reason that so amiable a person should be parted from them, and in joy, knowing full well that the holy title of wife will be borne by her in a true, noble manner and that she will find in her husband a young man who is truly worthy of the love of one so young and fair. The groom formerly resided here and is a brother of ex-Alderman J. S. Morris. He is now an enterprising business man of Crookston, Minn., and a most genial and worthy young man. Both he and his bride have the sincere good wishes of legions of friends hereabouts for their future well being, and in common with all we express the wish that their happiest ideas of married life may be fully realized. The presents of the bride were many, useful and handsome, fully showing that she is much beloved by her friends.

TABOR, Minn., Feb. 10, 1890.

ED JOURNAL:—Permit me to give an explanation to the following article, which appeared in the East Grand Forks Courier of the 6th:

"Martin Purcell, a resident of the Second ward, this city, went out to Tabor township, better known as the 'Bohemian settlement,' and made complaint before his honor, F. J. Cernousek, justice of the peace, that officer Thomas Murray and citizen Dennis Dwyer, now of Grand Forks, had 'oppressed' him (Purcell), and asked that warrants be issued forthwith for their apprehension. A constable from Tabor arrived in the city on Wednesday last, and arrested officer Murray. As Mr. Dwyer is a citizen of North Dakota, the constable did not cross the Ruby in quest of the genial Dennis, but contented himself by keeping his eye on the DeMers avenue bridge waiting for his man until the electric lights were turned on, which so frightened him that he started back to Tabor. Mr. Murray went before Judge C. A. Brown and gave bonds for his appearance at the next term of court, when the taxpayers will have an opportunity to settle the bills, unless county attorney D. D. Williams, who by the way is a man of good sense, puts a quietus to this dampholishness."

I did not content myself in keeping my eye on the DeMers avenue bridge, but passed over it, and viewing the busy sights of Grand Forks my eye rested on an individual running at a lively pace. I followed, thinking he was a fugitive, but when I got closer to him I found by his appearance that he was a reporter of the Courier, out on a hunt for items, or after a delinquent subscription. I hope he found his man, by the aid of the electric light I found mine and returned home, a distance of 25 miles, after the electric lights were turned on, tired and exhausted, thinking it was about time for some one to "put a quietus to the dampholishness" that is going on in East Grand Forks, and that damphquick, too.

CONSTABLE TOWN OF TABOR.

CARD OF THANKS.

Allow us to express our sincere gratitude to all the people who so kindly extended their sympathy to us in our late bereavement and sorrow. Thanks to all those who sacrificed their time and comfort in assisting us during the illness and death of our beloved daughter, Maria Mathelda. Thanks to all those who so kindly showed their love and sympathy by contributing the numerous wreaths and bouquets of fragrant flowers, and in various ways assisted in preparing the remains for its last resting place, and thanks to you all in general for the great friendship and sympathy you have shown unto us. We can assure you all that amidst our affliction it was a great comfort to find that we were surrounded by a great host of friends. We are unable to find word by which to express our feeling for all the kindness that has been bestowed upon us and ours from the first day that it was our good fortune to be amongst you. No act of ours can ever repay you for all this. But it is all deeply inscribed on our memory with letters of infinite gratitude. May God bless you all for what you have done for us.

Preachers in Politics.

(Communicated.)

When ministers clamor for civil law to effect "moral reforms," their faith in Christ and their connection with him may well be questioned. By the terms of their commission, they are to preach the gospel, to persuade men, not to compel them. Clad in the whole armor of God, and using only the weapons and methods authorized, they are promised the presence of Christ, in whom is all power. They are not ministers of the civil law, nor even of the divine law, but of the gospel. When the church seeks the aid of civil power, she denies her divine Lord, and by accepting such aid she commits spiritual adultery and thereby loses connection with God and becomes apostate, whatever may be her claim to the contrary. Instead of feeding and caring for Christ's sheep, those preachers who have entered the field of politics and engaged in this unseemly scramble after civil power, have deserted their posts and concocted a scheme to induce the government to establish a big corral into which all the sheep and goats in the whole country shall be hustled by government watch-dogs under their direction. But such work is wholly unauthorized, and is subversive of both free government and pure religion. DR. D. BLANCHARD.

Mistakes of Moses.

The St. Vincent New Era, in its last issue, erects a monument to the generosity of Mr. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railway, with the statement that Kittson County owes him a vast debt of gratitude for the distribution of live stock and various other charitable deeds, such as giving money to impecunious farmers, carrying said contributions free, and the like. It is true that Mr. Hill has done all this, but supposing, when the country was new, he had figured the actual cost of construction of the road and actual running expenses, and fixed his freight and passenger traffic on that basis; supposing, instead of encouraging the elevator system, he had given Kittson County a free and open market for their wheat. Would not that have been far more beneficial to the citizens of the county than "all he has so generously done?" Give your farmers the benefit of the foreign markets a few years, less a reasonable carrying rate and a reasonable rate for handling, and where would you find a farmer in all the length and breadth of your fair county

WHO WOULD NEED ALMS?

No one will deny that Mr. Hill is a great financier, one of the greatest, if not the very greatest in the state, but does not your article prove truly that great men can make mistakes, Bro. Deacon? Hadn't you rather have a free and fair wheat market all these years and years, uncontrolled by the elevator influence, than all Mr. Hill has done for you? Honest now, wouldn't you?

Justice, Not Charity!

The Hallock News kicks against that donation of $1,000 made by the Governor and a few of his friends to relieve the pressing wants of a few poor farmers in Kittson County, and intimates that somebody had an ax to grind. Well, now, we have no doubt in the world but that the Governor acted from a sincere desire to benefit the farmers, whatever Rev. Appleby and others may have done. But, Bro. News, did not this charity business never strike you as a peculiar institution all around? Who are these "objects of charity," anyhow? They are FARMERS who have toiled hard to maintain themselves and those dependent upon them. In most cases they are men who have raised good crops from which SOMEBODY has made big money. They are men who, could they always have had the benefit of a free and open market for their wheat, would now be in independent circumstances. They are NOT paupers in the true sense of the word, having EARNED a competency and been defrauded out of it, and this charity business looks a good deal like locking the barn door after the horse is stolen. They do not pose before the people asking charity, at the hands of those whose duty it is to execute the laws, so that they may secure a just profit on what they earn. It strikes us that a just attention to the real question at issue would do away with the necessity for the enactment of the "charity" farce every whip-stitch. If a little more attention was paid to correcting the evils which exist, there would be no calls for relief. If the powers that be don't know how this should be done we would suggest that the farmers' friends be placed in the offices that were created for the benefit of the farmers, and not have them filled by the right bowers of the elevators—the tools of monopoly. If that is not a solution of the problem it will at least furnish abundant food for thought in the right direction.

BUT THEY DEMAND JUSTICE

Our good brother Lamphere, of the Moorhead News goes for State Lecturer Allison, in the daily issue of the 7th. We have neither time nor space this week to give this subject the attention it deserves but we must say that we think he does Mr. A. great injustice, because Mr. A. in one letter to the Great West refers to one locality in Polk County thus: "They haul their scanty crop of wheat—8 bushels per acre and get from 50 to 61 cents per bushel and the most rascally grading." If there is anything wrong with that statement it is in over-estimating both the yield and the price per bushel. That section was affected by drouth and the yield was very light but the quality generally excellent, mostly wheat that would make the first quality of flour, therefore should have been graded No. 1 Hard or at least No. 1 Northern; but was it? Not much. The farmer that got a No. 3 grade given him was a very lucky man. Mr. Allison did not intimate that this was an instance of the yield for the county, but he did say that the producer is not getting justice in the markets. Can Bro. Lamphere show wherein that statement is wrong? He refers to the big crops of former years as an evidence of what the county can produce but fails to say WHO REAPED THE IMMENSE FORTUNES that the farmers had produced. Did the farmers, the merchants, the tradesmen and the various business men of this section get their legitimate share of it? We feel just as great a pride in our county as any man in it, knowing well its great capacity, but we think that when great evils exist that threaten to paralyze every industry we have, it is the part of wisdom to try to remedy those evils if possible. The basis of our wealth and prosperity is agriculture and it is to the business interest of every man in the country to protect our agricultural interests, for it is plain that if the farmer is not prosperous our business interests suffer in proportion. It is about time to throw sickly sentiment to the dogs and grapple earnestly with this question upon the proper solution of which depends the future welfare and prosperity of our country. When the condition of things are such that a few speculators reap the entire benefit of the profits of our produce, it is full time to call a halt and reorganize upon a basis that will give the producer an equal show and however humble the instrument that is trying to accomplish that end may be he is doing a noble work.

Impotant to Alliances.

Notice the instructions from Secretary Haigh in this issue. It seems that there is a general misunderstanding in relation to initiation fees and alliance dues which the secretary makes plain in his communication. All who paid 50 cents last year and have a receipt therefor can join any alliance in the county by paying their dues for 1890, 30 cents. All new members pay 50 cents iniation fee and this covers their obligation to the State Alliance for 1890.

FOR THE FARMER

Senator Pierce's Bill to Appoint an Agricultural Commission.

TO INVESTIGATE HARD TIMES

Look Into Elevator Charges, the Tariff and Other Similiar Grievances.

THIS IS BUSINESS!

Special to Minneapolis Evening Journal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Senator Pierce to-day sent up a bill which is of general interest to the farmers in the entire country. It creates an agricultural commission, and the bill provides that the president shall appoint seven commissioners, at least four of whom shall be practical farmers, whose duty it shall be to take into consideration and thoroughly investigate the causes of the present depressed condition of agricultural interests in the United States, including the laws relating to the inspectors of grain, regulations governing warehouses or elevators used for storage or shipment of farm products, the possibility of providing for interstate inspection of cerials, the relation of railroads and transportation rates to prices of products, the influence of the tariff on the prices of necessaries of life and its effect on the agricultural industry and generally such consideration of the subject matter of this inquiry as in the judgment of the commission shall best secure the object specified in the title to this act. In the course of their investigation they are authorized to visit various portions of the country and are to be paid at the rate of $10 per day, when engaged in active duty, and actual traveling and other necessary expenses.

The farmers have lots of sympathy in this fight they are making. There is not a business man in this country who has a true appreciation of the situation but, what wishes the farmers a hearty "God speed."

What Will the Alliance Do for Us?

This question which farmers always ask when urged to join, was answered by a member of Andover Alliance one day last week, when he said to us: "Our alliance has made arrangements by which I save 50 cents on every 100 pounds of flour I buy. I have bought 200 lbs. already, a saving of one dollar, 50 cents more than it cost me to join, and I shall save up many times the amount during the year, to say nothing of other deals our alliance is arranging for." What Andover alliance has done every other alliance in the country can do. The minute you join the alliance you are entitled to all its rights and privileges. It expects to accomplish far more in changing the deal on the marketing of wheat, and will not stop short of a free and open market all over this state.

WHAT IS HALVOR AFTER?

He Goes to Washington, it is Said, by Senator Davis' Request.

WASHINGTON special to Minneapolis Journal, Feb. 7.—That robust appearing Scandinavian politician, Hon. Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, Minn., bobbed up serenely in Washington last evening. To-day he was found by a Journal correspondent ensconced in an easy chair in Senator Davis' committee room at the capitol building. He was accompanied by J. A. Tarsney, of Winona. Apparently both gentlemen had no regrets over their defeat by Eugene Hay for Minnesota district attorneyship. When asked if his visit had any political significance, Steenerson replied: "Not in the least. I am sight-seeing. This is my first trip east of Chicago since I became a resident of Minnesota, I shall be home again Feb. 20th."

Senator Davis arrived later and there was a lengthy conference between him and the Crookston man. From other sources it is learned that Steenerson is here at the request of Davis.

This afternoon Mr. Steenerson informed The Journal that while here he would urge upon government officials the necessity of opening the Chippewa reservation in northern Minnesota, according to the provisions of the treaty made last summer.

MANKATO, Minn., Feb. 7, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL:—Will you kindly notice in your paper the following on the question of dues to the State Alliance. There seems to be not quite a clear understanding of the question in many portions of the state:

1. All members of the Alliance Hail and Cyclone Insurance Co. that have paid 50 cents membership fee to the State Alliance when they insured are now entitled to become members of the subordinate alliances of the towns where they reside. This applies only to practical and operative farmers. Now, these parties that insured, became members of the alliance in the year 1889, and secured the benefits of the State Alliance for that year, and in duty bound should have organized at their earliest leisure subordinate alliances. January 1st, 1890, begins their second year as members of the Farmers' Alliance, and they pay per capita a tax of 30 cents semi-annually, viz: Fifteen cents June 1st, and fifteen cents December 1st. [See Sec. 2, Art. IV, State Constitution.]

Members joining in the year 1890 pay an initiation fee of 50 cents, and this is all for the year. They are entitled to the benefits of the hail and cyclone insurance without further payment to State Alliance.

This question of state dues is subject to change and modification at the coming state meeting of the alliance, at St. Paul, March 4th, 1890. Everything points to a large gathering of farmers at the state capitol on March 4th, and the representatives from your section, the producers of the best wheat in the known world, should be prepared to define clearly their wishes and experience as to the wheat market, the present state grades, weights, dockage and railroad system of transportation, including the loss by transportation not assumed by the railroads, and falling upon the producers. This is our golden opportunity, and our views on these and other questions should be [illegible], and we present a plan of action that will govern the coming legislature on these questions.

I shall establish my office on Monday, March 3d, at the Clarendon Hotel, St. Paul, and will be pleased to receive calls from all delegates upon their arrival in the city. GEO. W. HAIGH, Sec. State Farmers' Alliance.

Nuts for Farmers to Crack.

Fertile Journal: In a communication to the Ada Index P. S. Olson, of Heiberg, one of Norman county's progressive farmers pertinently inquires.

"Brother farmers, isn't it about time for us to call a halt and consider matters and things before we proceed any further, or is everything satisfactory to you? Are we doing our duty as citizens of a free and independent country? Are we worthy heirs to the fortune left us by our forefathers, who sacrificed life and property to establish a government for the people and by the people, that rich and poor may enjoy equal rights. Are we doing it today? If not, who is to blame? Are we not helping to forge the irons that are hand cuffing ourselves and will handcuff our children?"

"It can," he adds, "be easily remedied yet. Therefore let us throw off the yoke before it gets too heavy." Mr. Olson refers to monopolies, trusts and corporations, that are combining to deprive the farmers of their rights, and that will ultimately result in the ruin of many of them, unless active measure are taken to break asunder the bonds that are being drawn tighter around them year by year.

Fertile Journal: Last week the Journal contained the brief statement that F. A. Shulze, of Twin Valley, had been in the city. Shulze was at the time on the way to Crookston and in the care of an official. It appears that both Shulze and W. C. Howe, another citizen of that place, had in their possession a couple of sightless swine, commonly known as "blind pigs." Last week they were both convicted and each fined $50 and costs and are now living at public expense at Crookston. This is not Shulze's first offense.

Granite Falls Tribune: The deadly mortgage has got in its work in Minnesota this year, as is being experienced by those having the load to tote. Millions of treasure, interest and principal, roll out of the rural districts into the coffers of rich corporations to satisfy a mortgage of ante-diluvian date. New security takes the place of the old with added accumulations, and where will the thing end? All the advice and influence brought to bear on the borrower availeth naught. The fiddler must be paid.

Rochester Union: The farmers of Douglas County are beginning to see that their only salvation from being taxed to death lies in organization and the assertion of their rights, and last week an alliance with 25 members was organized. When, oh, when, will ye farmers of Olmsted County arise and do likewise.

The Union of the Alliances.

The Great West.

There evidently is going to be a question raised at the State Alliance as to our union with the great Industrial Union—and the question is a political difficulty which has been injected.

The president of the Minnesota State Alliance gave the cue to his antagonism when he said "the Southern Allliance was all democrats." Then a question has been raised on the score of the colored people. The colored people of the south have their separate alliances, and the "Southern Farmer's Alliance," with its ten thousand organizations, and the "Agricultural Wheel," had never affiliated with them. The Colored Alliance requested that the two be kept separate.

When great bodies of men unite for work in one line they must "hedge" on lines of difference. There must be an exclusion of political differences to create a commercial union. Masonic, religious, mutual insurance, commercial and a hundred other associations do this—and the alliance of Minnesota must decide whether it will unite with the nation on alliance work—or whether it will force the color question into the issue, and remain outside the organization.

The editor of this paper aided escaping black-men across the river to Canada and freedom when but eight or ten years of age, was seriously crippled (sight) in campaigning for John C. Fremont when a schoolboy, and three times enlisted in the war—and his sympathies for the man who is unfortunately born black are as great as any man's. He will go far in criticising his own party for twenty years of power without giving the black man his rights.

But we say—and say it kindly—that when we go into this alliance work the many-colored-coat of politics is shed at the outer door. The southern alliance has done more than we in this work a hundred fold, and we shall not attempt to dictate their policy in the alliance.

The basis of the union left the colored man at liberty to unite with any alliance where the state chose to so order. Inasmuch as the southern colored people had their own alliance and asked to be separate, the Southern Alliance and Wheel asked that white men be sent to national meetings as delegates.

We wish this matter had never come up. It was brought up—and brought up by politicians. Men went down to St. Louis to create just such difficulties. Men went there purposely to create a row on the democracy issue—hired by politicians! Men went there from at least two states to have a row with Mr. Wardall, the national executive of the insurance interest. Men succeeded in having that row who had violated their own compact in alliance work, a compact made in writing—and on which they had received money from Mr. Wardall—and did this in the interest of a selfish personal combination with politicians by which they were to have salaries by the year and official relations in the combine!

The American Farmers' Lot.

The Great West.

On Pennsylvania Central train a few weeks since, says Henry George in the Standard of Jan. 8, I heard a story which illustrates how the American farmer is being crowded out. A friend of my informant's wife some fifteen or twenty years ago married a young, intelligent and well educated farmer who felt himself comparatively rich, having inherited from his father 240 acres of land on the Illinois Central railroad, about 100 miles from Chicago. The two women had kept up a correspondence, and it had been the intention of the Pennsylvania people to make a long deferred visit to the Illinois people this year. But—the Illinois woman had recently written to say that her husband had lost his farm. Some eight years ago he bought eighty acres of adjoining land and put a mortgage on the whole 320 acres in order to get the purchase money. With the low price for products, he has been steadily running behind on his interest payments and at last he has been forced to give it up, surrendering the whole place to the mortgagee. His stock and implements only brought $1,250 at auction, although one item was a carriage for which, in better days, he paid $600, and had recently had put in good order. The man and his wife are about to remove to Rockford, Ill., where he has a relative in the coopering business, and where he expects, after working for nothing for a sufficient time, to get a knowledge of the trade, to get $9 a week.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., FEBRUARY 13, 1890.

A Blast for the Farmer.

The Western Rural.

The cruel injustice which is represented by the estimate of the farmer's present condition, held by a portion of the press, and by classes generally off the farm, is so palpable as not to admit of a shadow of excuse. An article before us in the columns of a daily paper cannot but arouse the indignation of those who understand the discouragements of agriculture. It is stated in this article that the farmer and his family deem as essential to their comfort many things that our fathers regarded as luxuries and the owners of farms are told that their land is much more valuable than their fathers' was. The organ, the piano, carpets on the floor, etc., are referred to as being common in farm houses now while they were formerly unknown. Well, what would you have the farmer do? Sell the organ and the piano and take the carpets from the floors? Why should he? Probably the man who wrote that article lives in a house whose furnishing as compared to those of the farmer's home are princely in character. The Vanderbilt home, the Armour home, the Gould home and thousands of other homes are furnished with an elegance that would render the farmer speechless, if he were to enter them. Now the farmer's ancestors and the ancestors of the Vanderbilts, of Armour and Gould, began pretty much on the same plane. Their fore-fathers were poor, poorer than poverty itself, and mostly as ignorant as mules. But their children have progressed wonderfully. They wear the finest of broadcloth; live in palatial residences; eat off of tables that cost twenty dollars a foot; sit in chairs that sell for a hundred and fifty dollars apiece; sleep on beds that are as soft as down; have pianos that cost a thousand dollars; ride in equipages that are ornamented with coats of arms, and instead of drinking apple jack and Medford rum they sip the costliest of wines and wash their hands in Florida water. We look at them and their surroundings and ask: "Upon what meat has this our Cæsar fed that he has grown so great?" What have these men done to acquire such elegance in surroundings? How have they outstripped the farmer? Have they been more industrious, more economical, more productive? Neither. They have simply been absorbing what the farmer has been creating. Some of them have been stealing railroads, and then operating them to fleece the farmer; some of them have been stealing the farmer's grain, and others of them have been stealing his cattle, and when the farmer complains of the unjust conditions under which he lives, some apologist for these sharks says to him, "Look here you have got a cheap piano and a cheap organ in your house, and you ought to be satisfied. You have got a carpet on your floor, and although we rich people would not be found dead on such a carpet, it ill becomes you to grumble. Be satisfied, my friend, we are."

Why should not the farmer be rich? Why should he not have all the luxuries that anybody enjoys? He works hard enough, and his work makes the principal part of the wealth of this great nation. Why should his property not increase in value? He has come into these wild prairies and developed them into magnificent farms. He has gone into the woods and chopped down the trees and pulled out the stumps and made gardens in the midst of the forests. He feeds every mother's son of you and clothes you all, and you have the impudence to tell him that because he has carpets on the floor he should be ashamed to grumble. It is true that his land is worth more than it was fifty years ago. The value of his land is shrinking, and it must continue to shrink while trusts and rings absorb all that he produces.

And then to cap the climax the writer of the article quoted affirms that the farmer does not have to work so hard as his fathers did—that he has machinery to do the work of the farm. That is to say that he ought to be satisfied with the privilege of riding on a cultivator, if he is threatened with bankruptcy. The farmer is the hardest worked man in the world to-day. The eight hour day does not bother him any, for it is an absolute necessity for him to work more hours than that. He works beneath hot suns that would kill the editors of our daily papers in sixty minutes. He feeds stock in the Winter's cold which would freeze the cold blood of aristocracy in thirty minutes; and it is no picnic to do farm work even with improved machinery. But if throwing away every improved machine and implement on the farm would restore prosperity to agriculture, the farmer would gladly do it. It is no fun to starve to death in the midst of ease; it is just as disheartening for a man on a cultivator to see the sheriff coming as it would be to the man on foot; it is just as hard for the farmer of to-day to see the mortgage eating up the farm and the children wearing indifferent clothing as it would be if he had the old time sickle in his hand or if the cradle was still doing the work of the binder. The farmer knows whether or not he has reason to complain. He knows what justice is and he knows than he is not getting justice.

FARMERS HARD UP.

They Petition the Governor to Call an Extra Session of the Kansas Legislature to Give Them Relief.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 5.—Petitions emanating from the headquarters of the Farmers' alliance are being circulated throughout the state praying the governor to convene the legislature in extra session. The petition sets forth that there exists among Kansas farmers very great financial embarrassment, and asks that the legislature be called to extend relief to them by the passage of a law providing for the relief of farmers by giving the mortgager of a homestead at least two years in which to occupy and redeem it if possible, after the sale of the mortgaged premises, and to provide also for a stay of execution of all judgments, promissory notes and mortgages, bonds, etc., for a reasonable time after judgment, without bond. Another petition is in circulation asking that a special session be called to amend the railroad laws and compel the companies to lower their transportation rates.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication Jan. 23d, 1890.]

WHEREAS OZIAS LEVECK AND EMIRE Leveck, his wife, as mortgagors did on the ninth day of July A. D. 1888, duly execute and deliver to the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, a corporation, as mortgagee, their mortgage bearing date on the seventh day of July A. D. 1888, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described land situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The southeast quarter of Section nineteen (19,) in Township one hundred and fifty-one (151) north, of Range forty-four (44) west, containing one hundred and sixty acres, to secure the payment of one hundred and ninety-four and forty one hundredths dollars, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note payable in six annual installments, said note bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was on the tenth day of July A. D. 1888, at two o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County in book "36" of mortgages on pages 234 to 236 inclusive.

And whereas, the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company did for value received on the eighth day of October A. McManus, partners as Steenerson & McManus, of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing under seal and duly acknowledged and was thereafter on the 14th day of January A. D. 1890, at 1:10 o'clock p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Polk County in book "45" of mortgages on page 241.

And whereas, Halvor Steenerson and George J. McManus assignees of said mortgagee have exercised their option, to consider and declare, and do hereby declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage, and still unpaid, to be due and payable,

And whereas, there is now due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of one hundred and eighty and twentyfour one hundredths dollars, and no proceedings having been instituted by law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, a corporation, as mortgagee, their mortgage bearing date on the second day of November A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee, the following described land situated in the County of Polk, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The west half of the southeast quarter, and the north half of the northeast quarter, and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of Section fifteen (15,) in township one hundred and forty-nine (149), of range forty-six (46) and containing two hundred acres, to secure the payment of two hundred and sixty-three and 50-100 dollars according to the conditions of one certain promissory note payable in ten semi-annual installments, said note bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order; which said mortgage was on the third day of November A. D. 1885, at four o'clock and fifteen minutes p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said Polk County, in book "W" of mortgages, on pages 169, 470 and 471.

And whereas, the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, did for value received on the tenth day of April A. D. 1889, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby, to Halvor Steenerson and George J. McManus, partners as Steenerson and McManus, of Crookston, Minnesota, which said assignment was in writing, under seal and duly acknowledged, and was thereafter on the 22d day of April A. D. 1889, at two o'clock and twenty minutes p. m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said Polk County, in book "46" of mortgages, on pages 165 and 167.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of twenty-five and 53-100 dollars ($25.53-100) due as the sixth installment of said note on the first day of January A. D. 1889, and of the sum of twenty-five and 53-100 dollars ($25.53-100) due as the seventh installment of said note, on the first day of July A. D. 1889, and of the sum of twenty-five and 53-100 dollars ($25.53-100) due as the eighth installment of said note on the first day of January A. D. 1890, and all of said sums are still due and unpaid, and whereas it was stipulated and agreed, by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained, on the part of the mortgagors to be kept and performed, then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for said mortgagee and its assigns to consider the whole sum thereby secured to be immediately due and payable, without notice to said mortgagors or any other party.

And whereas, Halvor Steenerson and George J. McManus assignees of said mortgage have exercised their option to consider and declare and do hereby declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage, and still unpaid, to be due and payable.

And whereas there is now due, and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of one hundred and thirty-one and 85-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted by law or otherwise, to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statutes in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county on the fifteenth day of March A. Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more fully shown in the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance.......$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest............ 80 00
Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years..........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years, his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest.........$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays, interest in the sum of......... 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years............ 1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest.........$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00
Total.........$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

A Successful Farmer's Meeting.

S. J. H., in Northwestern Agriculturist.

We have been seeking successful farmers to learn from them the secrets of their prosperity. If we want to learn something valuable in farming we must go to those who are making money—who make farming a success. There are thousands of farmers who know all about everything—have theorics without number and are perhaps making a living, but nothing more. We don't care a snap about this "windbag" class when we set out to make money. We found one man, in a certain neighborhood, doing well, while his neighbors, farming the same kind of land, complain about trusts, low prices and thousands of other drawbacks. The successful man was busy at work, and we told him that we came with the express purpose to learn the secrets of his success, and that we were going to pump him dry if it took all day, and he would submit to it. He was an American "from the word go," and said: "Go ahead, sir." "How much land have you got?" "Three quarters." "How long have you been here?" "Five years." "How much corn did you raise last year?" "Fifteen thousand bushels." "When did you plant it?" This began to loosen his tongue. He saw that we meant business and took us to the house and began to tell the story. "I came here from Indiana. When I began plowing the old land I let the plow go down to the beam using three large horses. My neighbors came and told me it was a mistake, but I knew that deep plowing gives roots a chance, brings solid soil to the surface and attracts and retains moisture. When I break the virgin soil my plow has to go down five or six inches. My neighbors' only one and a half to two inches. Last year, in April, we had fine weather and we took out the planter and put in the corn four inches deep, (next year it will go down five inches.) My neighbors came and said, "You won't get any corn. It is too early. It will freeze." I said, "Let her freeze." Of course, I know that corn is an endogens; that is, it grows from the inside, and that as long as the roots were not frozen, the nipping of the tops would do little damage. I always plant early as I can get on the land. My neighbors planted in the latter part of May and got nubbins, or nothing. Of course, they lay it to the peculiar season. I know, too, wheat or oats can't grow in the same place where weeds grow. Plant a field with corn and let it take care of itself. The weeds will choke it and you get next to nothing. You see that field? I plowed it two years ago as deep as the plow could go with three horses. I then let it lie all summer and ran over it once a month with the cultivator and harrow to kill the weeds. Last spring I put in wheat, and how much do you suppose it yielded to the acre? "Twenty bushels." "No, sir, thirty-five bushels." "How many hogs and steers do you fatten?" "O, I keep at it all the time, and make an effort to feed a hundred when the corn is in the milk. That's my time. I bought one hundred from the Indian agent who had picked up several hundred. I gave him a cent and a half for the pick and got some dandies. I just sold them in Chicago for $3.75. I keep three men on an average the year round. I cleared from my farm this present season just $10,000."

We will not worry you with the little details of this gentleman's talk of half a day. You have the secret of the $10,000. We could multiply such cases indefinitely in the southern half of South Dakota, and we are sure that the words of Poor Richard bear repeating and study—

"Then plow deep while sluggards sleep
And you will have corn to sell and keep."

All that reads very nice and pretty—reads just as though it had been written by some monopolist who is fattening on the toil of the farmer for you will notice that the writer is very careful not to touch upon the fact that if his imaginary "successful farmer" could get his just share of the profits of that crop he would be A RICH MAN very shortly. It is well enough to discuss methods of farming when the farmer has his rights in the market. Just now that is the most important question to him. The writer claims that his successful farmer clears a lump sum of $10,000 on 480 acres of land but does not tell us how much corn per acre he gets, nor how many acres he has in wheat nor give any data by which the reader can prove the assertion. While we doubt the truth of the assertion the fact remains that if he did clear $10,000 on these markets he ought to have doubled that and more if he had his rights in the market. Such articles as the above are only intended to blind the eyes of the farmer to the wrongs he suffers and to try to make him content to plod along in the old rut.

MAGNETIC DWIGHT.

The Ex-Senator Talks About Windom, Harrison and Tariff Reform.

Special to Minneapolis Evening Journal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Magnetic Dwight M. Sabin, of Stillwater, has been renewing acquaintances in the national capitol for the past three or four days. The ex-senator is looking as bright as a silver dollar, fresh from the mint. He has done some hobnobbing with Senator Davis and other Minnesota statesmen, but has spent the greater part of his time in visiting with his adopted daughters, who are housed at the fashionable hotel Arno. The Journal correspondent had a lengthy chat with Mr. Sabin at the Arno last evening. The ex-senator was at first disposed to be reticent, but when assured that The Journal would treat any expressions of his with all fairness, the genial Stillwater man talked entertainingly. He still has his own peculiar ideas on tariff reform. He said:

"I still hold to the ideas that I have frequently expressed. There should be a general revision of the tariff. I will say now that I am certain that the lumber tariff should be reduced at least one-half. There are many other necessaries that should come under this general revision, but I shall not dwell upon them now. I want to say to you that the present congress cannot afford to while away the present session without making tariff changes that are a necessity in the northwest. The republicans in congress from the west should take this matter up and see to it that there is an eminently fair and honest revision of the present schedule. They should be neither hoodwinked or bamboozled into the ultra tariff notions of the high protectionists. If they are led about by the eastern leaders, the prospects for the success of the republican party in the great west next fall and in future years will be disastrous. That is my candid opinion upon this important matter in a nutshell."

"What will be the outcome of the political canvass in Minnesota this fall, so far as the state ticket is concerned?"

"Upon this point I can give you little information. My business cares the past year have kept me from thinking of anything political. I have an idea, though, that Gov. Merriam will be renominated without much opposition. He may have competitors, but it looks to me now as though he would be renominated."

"Will he be re-elected?"

"I think so. I can see no reason now for his defeat. It is my idea that if the tariff is revised to suit the northwest by the national congress this session the republican ticket in Minnesota will be re-elected by a woking majority."

"What is your opinion about the probability of the return of a solid delegation to the lower house of the national congress from Minnesota this fall?"

"It will all depend, as I said before, upon what action congress takes this session as to a revision of the tariff that will be beneficial to the northwestern states. It is but just to the agriculturists in the west that there be a general and decided revision of the tariff upon articles that the farmers of the northwest use. We, in that country, depend very greatly upon this element. They must be recognized. We care but little about the demands of the manufacturing east. It is the farmers of the west and their interests that we in Minnesota are interested in. If congress does the farming element justice this winter there is no doubt of the return of a solid delegation to congress next fall. If this justice is not accorded—well, I don't want to predict the outcome."

"Senator, have you heard of the rumor that there was a combination between Secretary Windom and Senator Washburn which has in view the defeat of Senator Davis for re-election when his term expires?"

Mr. Sabin studied the ceiling a moment, took an extra whiff of his havana, then replied laughingly:

"Well, yes, I have heard such rumors. However, it has never impressed me at all forcibly as being a probable combination. If there is any such desire on the part of the secretary and senator, of which I am not advised, I should regard them as gentlemen of too much sagacity to enter into such combination, as I do not believe the people in Minnesota propose to dispense with the brains of their delegation when Senator Davis can be of inestimable value to the interests of not only Minnesota, but the entire northwest. Senator Davis' whole attitude and entire sympathies are with the people in that locality and his remarkable and exhaustive speech upon the "Soo" canal bill has demonstrated a breadth of business sagacity and general grasp of the needs of our northwest country for which he has heretofore not been given the credit due him. I can say that he has deserved this credit. I think his position is fully and keenly appreciated by the people of Minnesota. In my judgment Senator Davis will have no organized or effective opposition in Minnesota if he desires a re-election.

"Does he desire a re-election?"

"I haven't any reason to doubt but that he has an ambition in this direction."

At this point the Stillwater man made a brave attempt to break away from the interviewer. He failed, and good naturedly awaited the next question.

"Senator, have you heard of the rumors to the effect that President Harrison and Secretary Windom had also formed an alliance, both offensive and defensive?"

"Of what nature?" queried the senator, Yankee fashion.

"In substance, that Mr. Windom is to work for Harrison's re-nomination and re-election in 1892, in return for which the president is to use the powers of his administration to secure Mr. Windom's nomination four years later."

"Nice scheme, indeed," remarked Mr. Sabin.

"Want my opinion on that?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I will be in favor of Windom for the presidency in 1896," and the senator laughed at his own humorous sally until his sides shook.

Just perfect is what a lady said to us of the March number of "Peterson," and we can fully endorse the verdict. The opening engraving is a beautiful picture, and the numerous wood illustrations are all capital. The fashion and household departments offer the most varied attractions. "The Mother's Department" and "Things Worth Knowing" should be read by every housekeeper and mother. "Peterson" is a rare combination of useful, artistic and literary excellence. No other two dollar magazine can boast such a list of contributors as Rebecca Harding Davis, M. G. McClelland, Minna Irving, Lucy H. Hooper, Edgar Fawcett, Frank Lee Benedict, Howard Seely, Clarence M. Boutelle and various other prominent writers of prose and verse. So far this year it has even surpassed its former high standard of excellence in many respects. Terms, $2.00 a year. Address, Peterson's Magazine, No. 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Waterloo N. Y. Observer: Times are dull. Why? Because farmers are compelled to sell the entire product of their farms for less than it costs them to produce it. When farmers get good prices for their produce they prosper and cause every other business to prosper. The land is, after all, the source of the wealth and prosperity of every country instead of the manufacturing industries. The latter help the people of the immediate locallity where the factory is located, but the land helps every community, for it is everywhere. A manufacturing industry located in the land where the land was barren would collapse in no time. When the farmer obtains good prices for the products of his farm, he has money with which to purchase the product of the mills and factories, but when he is forced to sell for less than cost he has no surplus to invest for any purpose. Farming has always been and always will be an infant industry, that needs the fostering care of the goverment more than any other because all other industries are supported by it. When agriculture fails, every other business and trade languishes. The present situation of affairs proves the assertion beyond a possibility of refutation.

The Farmers and the Tariff.

Minneapolis Times.

Senator Washburn, interviewed by our reporter, assures the public that there will be important tariff legislation during the present session, and that the bill to be framed will be on the lines of senate bill of the last session. It is to be hoped that the senator's assurance will be realized. The demand for material reduction on the tariff schedule grows more insistent and emphatic every day. The senate bill, which the democratic majority in the house rejected last session, is in the right direction, but does not go far enough. The objection to the senate bill is that it exaggerates the discriminations of the existing tariff against the agricultural states rather than otherwise. The political party of which Senator Washburn is a conspicuous if not particularly brilliant exponent, is committed to such practical legislation as will lighten the burdens and remove one of the embarrassments of the farmers of the Northwest. The absurdity of maintaining, after a quarter of a century of power and prosperity a tariff schedule adopted in time of war, has been often enough pointed out. All over the country the farmers are organizing for self-protection. At the present rate of increase in membership of these associations the whole 4,500,000 farmers will before long be practically united in one body. It is a movement of the greatest significance. Everywhere among the farming classes the conviction is growing stronger and stronger that they are merely the hewers of wood and drawers of water for the other classes and they are going to insist, in the most vigorous fashion, upon better treatment.

They have constantly before them the stern uncomfortable fact that in spite of all their industry and economy their business has become unprofitable. They have been forced to study the situation, and try to get at the root of their difficulties. The result of inquiry is that they are victims of an absurd, irrational and burdensome tariff system, involving devices of injustice and unfairness, which seem to be aimed, whether intentionally or not, almost exclusively at their class. The prices they are obliged to accept for their grain are below the actual cost of production. Live stock, notwithstanding the extortionate prices paid by the consumer for meats of all kinds, hardly pays the expense of feeding. Millions of bushels of corn will not bring enough to pay for taking it to market. The farmer cannot get a decent remuneration for his labor at any branch of his calling. He certainly has substantial reason for complaint. There is manifestly something wrong somewhere, and the farmer has located or thinks he has located the cause of his troubles, and is demanding that it shall be corrected.

What is Mr. Wasburn's party going to do about it? The time for shuffling and puttering has passed. The familiar argument of over-production is not a sufficient explanation, because the farmers can readily sell all they produce at the prevailing prices, which proves that it is needed for consumption. The supply does not exceed the demand, or they could not sell the surplus at any price. They know that the food products which they raise yearly are consumed; and what they demand is a reasonable return for their labor and the capital they have invested in the business of feeding all other classes of the population.

'Round Home.

Old winter dies hard.

Weather prophets are predicting an early spring. We should prefer to see the evidences of it.

We are reminded by the weather of the past week that the reign of winter is not quite over—not yet.

The cadet ball on Friday evening was a nice affair, socially and every way and a very enjoyable event.

Prof. Casey was at Red Lake Falls last week. The Prof. takes hold of the business in a way that makes him lots of friends.

Col W. M. Leggett was elected secretary of the State Fair Association at the meeting in St. Paul last week. A good selection.

The Mississippi Valley Lumberman says: "The circulars must go!" Naturally, if you expect to saw any lumber with them.

Dr. M. Leguee has been doing a land office business buying cattle for the St. Paul market. He has shipped several carloads via the D., C. & N. R. R.

Mens suits, 2,000 complete suits to choose from. Come early and get the best selection.
C. O. D. CLOTHING HOUSE.

Harry Attix does not recover from his grip as rapidly as he and his friends could wish. Our advice to him is to let up on work a litte and give Nature a chance to recuperate.

Alliance work is progressing nicely all over the county. Every week we get letters of inquiry, and if this thing continues there will be a live alliance in every town in the county before fall.

Rariton Chinchilla over coats $3.50 at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

Mrs. Bert Bivins, Mrs. P. C. Schmidt and Mrs. W. G. Lytle gave a very pleasant cinch party to their numerous lady friends last Wednesday afternoon, also to lady and gentleman friends in the evening.

Smoked halibut, smoked bloaters, anchoivis and Norway herring at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

The city council has very kindly placed the council room at the disposal of the Crookston Farmers Alliance which was a very neat and handsome thing to do. Lets give 'em a rousing vote of thanks, boys.

Good Vermont gray overcoats $2, at C. O. D. Clothing House.

Hans C. Sampson, president of Fosston alliance was in the city on Monday. He reports the alliance in a flourishing condition, increasing at every meeting. They meet every two weeks. John Fleisch is their delegate to St. Paul with Ole Nelson as alternate.

Evaporated peaches, apricots, rasnberries, blackberries, silver prunes, California prunes, prunes and fine raisins in large variety, just received at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

The excursion to Grand Forks last Wednesday night was heartily enjoyed by a larger host of pleasure-seekers. Geo. Scott, of this city won the medal and the championship of the Northwest. He has been challenged by N. Eddy, of Grand Forks for the championship and the medal.

Money to loan in large or small sums on good farms. Choice farms and city property for sale. CHAS. M. LOWE,
[17-tf] Broadway, Crookston.

A. M. Stewart went over to his Inkster store on Saturday last. Thinks business on this side of the Red is the best. Speaking of the future prospects of the Red River Valley he says that Crookston is bound to be the leading city of the Northwest spite of all her enemies can do to prevent it.

Good Union cassamere overcoats at $3.50, $4.00, $4 50 and $5.00, at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

We deeply regret that the boom period let up when it did for at the rate they were building this way Red Lake Falls would just about have reached Crookston by this time as they were approaching rapidly. But to lay joking aside, if they would get a fife and a drum and call their village to-gether they would have quite a neat little city and it is unfortunate that it is spread out over so much territory.

Children's suits $1.
Children's overcoat $1.
Children's winter caps 10c.
Boys' suits age 13 to 17, $2.50 at the C. O. D. Clothing House.

We wish the secretary of every alliance would at once correspond with us in relation to forming a county alliance. Steps will be taken this week for such a formation and the call issued probably on Saturday. Meantime it would be well for each alliance to elect three delegates to such alliance at its next meeting as it is very desirable to have the county alliance formed in time to send a delegate and alternate to the state alliance meeting at St. Paul on March 4th.

$100,000 to loan.
JOHN MCLEAN.

Col. O. V. Davis of Mandan was in the city on Monday enroute for Thief River Falls where he went to purchase a band of 17 moose for his already extensive menagerie. He is trying to get the State of Dakota to provide means to prevent the extinction of wild game by setting apart a portion of the public domain for a park wherein those animals may be protected. He has a herd of 28 buffalo, 20 moose and elk and 160 antelope. He has some half-breed buffaloes crossed with Holstein and Polled Angus, the latter having a hide that very much resembles seal and, he thinks, can be made a substitute for sealskin. Buffalo raising, he says is very profitable but can never be made successful outside of big ranges as the buffalo, like the Indian, deteriorates by civilization. They can be tamed easily but are guided by the prairies.

Well, Sa-a-a-y!

Our old-time friend, E. F. Smith, writes us from Spokane Falls that business is good, real estate rising, and that the Great Northern is bound to reach Spokane this year; that Lem Nobles is doing well in the commission business; that Frank Adams is doing a rushing business in lathing; that the cold weather continues and snow going slowly and that—

We find the following items in the Red Lake Falls Gazette of Feb. 14th:

Rev. Mr. Miln and bride arrived here this afternoon and will take up their residence in the 5th st. building, near Mr. McClatchie's residence. Mr. Miln is resident pastor of the Baptist church here.

H. A. McClatchie was about the first time on Monday since he was taken with la grippe accompanied with a touch of pneumonia. Mrs. McClatchie was quite ill yesterday, but to-day is much improved.

The following items we clip from the Fosston Thirteen Towns, of Feb. 14th:

Mrs. C. Clough is reported dangerously ill with pheumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Taylor, Contractor and Mrs. Shacgreen, Mrs. McLennan and John Crawford, all of Crookston, who started early last week for a tour to the lumbering camps and a trip to the famous Red Lake, arrived here on their homeward journey on Tuesday morning, and took the afternoon train for Crookston. The whole party were pleased with their trip and delighted with what they saw.

The concert given last evening by Miss Inez McGrew, of Crookston, was greeted with as large a house as any entertainment that was ever given in the city, as its character merited. It was first-class in every particular and each part showed good taste in selection and careful preparation. The excellent singing of the young girls as usual received much favorable comment, and they were always received with generous applause and once responded to an encore. Each and every part was perfectly performed and all were well received by the audience. The remarks with which Attorney Bennett, who acted as master of ceremonies, introduced each selection, the modesty with which he announced his own parts and the magnanimous manner in which he presented the excuses of his friends and relieved them from embarassment caused much merriment and constituted a never failing fountain of amusement. The orchestra as reorganized made its first appearance at this entertainment and afforded no little pleasure. At the conclusion of the program dancing was indulged in for a short time.

Mrs. Charles E. Sawyer gave a lovely tea to her lady friends Tuesday afternoon at her pleasant home on Broadway.

Fisher Bulletin: Genial Will Peterson came over last Monday evening to see—well his best friends—but did not try to jump the "cannon ball" express as before.

Elmer Blanchard was in the city last week from his home in Tabor. He is teaching in school district No. 174. That he is successful is shown by the fact that he has taught the school several terms. He reports the farmers all deeply interested in the alliance work.

On Thursday last at one o'clock the fire bell summoned the department to attend to a bit of a blaze in the Third Ward, in the residence of W. S. Walker's foreman, John Florene. The goods were safely removed from the house which was made almost a total wreck. The boys were handicapped by breaking hose which rendered their work less effective.

A. M. Stewart: I think THE JOURNAL takes the right ground on condition of our markets in their relation to the producers. I think the manner in which our wheat has been handled this fall is utterly shameful—those who control the situation seem to have lost sight of every consideration except to make all there is in our wheat and more too. As one business man I can say that I am heartily in favor of the farmers' combining in their own defence in the alliance and I believe they will win if they are true to their cause. I believe that every business man should make common cause with the farmer and aid them all they can for our interests are mutual—we cannot prosper unless the farmers are prosperous. We need an open market and if we were all united on that point I believe we would get it.

THE JOURNAL is sorry to announce that our esteemed friend, H. S. Attix, Esq., has accepted a situation at Meeker, in Rio Blanco Co., Col., and leaves next week for his new field of labor. Mr. A. is led to this step as much from the necessity for a change of climate on account of his health as for any other consideration. He had been advised by his physician to change climate and this offer coming at this time seems providential as it opens the way for him to comply with the physician's mandate. Harry will bear with him the best wishes of hosts of old and tried friends who have known him as an earnest, upright hard-working man and an honest capable business man. He is one of the pioneers of this section, coming to Becker County in 1874 where he was for a year in the employ of Frank La Crosse, a leading merchant of Audubon. He went to Richwood in 1875 where he married and went to farming. In July 1878 he filed the first claim to land in the Maple Lake country near what is now the station of Mentor. He farmed until the fall of '87 and was postmaster for four years of the time. That fall he opened a small store of general merchandise and was doing a nice business until the fall of '88 when his store took fire and burned him out slick and clean. Instead of sitting down and whining he hustled about to find something to do and soon made arrangements with E. D. Childs whereby he opened up the store of Attix & Co., in the Fifth Ward. By dint of hard work and hustling he built up a big trade and recently the firm moved over to the city, occupying the old Markham store on Second Street. He regrets very much the necessity of having to go, and he feels sure that he leaves many warm friends whose success in life he will ever hope for and watch with interest. THE JOURNAL can heartily recommend him to all with whom he may associate in the future as an A 1 hustler and a good all round business man.

DIED.

TRUAX.—At her home in Crookston, Saturday, Feb. 15th, 1890, of pleurisy, Mrs. Geo. W. Truax, in her 44th year.

Magdalina Simons was born Feb. 21, 1846, at Milwaukee, Wis. She was married to Geo. W. Truax, July 9, 1872, at Prescott, Wis., and moved to Crookston in 1879, she has been a member of the Baptist church at Crookston since 1884. She was the mother of fourteen children, eight of whom are now living, the youngest being a babe of three months. In her death her family sustains a sad and irreparable loss, but they "sorrow not as those who have no hope" for they expect to meet her again at the resurection of the just. The funeral services were held at the Baptise church Monday which was largely attended notwithstanding the severe cold weather.

Geo. McManus went to St. Paul last week.

Conductor and Mrs. Alexander entertained their friends at cinch Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. J. B. Copeland and Miss Fanny reached home on Sunday morning after a pleasant visit with relatives in Chicago.

I. K. Messelt and Ole K. Lakness came down from Winger last week. They report a thriving alliance and the farmers all interested in the work up there.

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of a booming pamphlet from our old friend Robert Houston. Robert has a townsite about 25 miles from Tacoma which bids fair to knock the hind sights off'n any city in Washington State, and it looks like "Bob" has struck a bonanza. Puget City is the name of the new aspirant for the rites and privileges of a city.

A Fight for Hay.

Red Lake Falls Gazette

Every little while Lambert is represented in our justice courts and this time has worked up a case that may develop some serious surprises for parties interested.

Peter Champagne, as complaining witness, swore out a warrant before Judge Holmes, last week, charging Jos. Lajambe, Felix Lajambe, Israel Laframboise, Emanuel Filiatrault, with forcibly seizing and appropriating hay belonging to the complainant, the latter claiming to have purchased the hay from Agent Schuler. The defendants for some reason did not stand trial, appearing at court without counsel and waiving examination were bound over to the district court in the sum of $300 each, all furnishing bonds except Filiatrault, who was committed.

As nearly as could be learned the case is as follows: The defendants obtained permission to put up the hay in question from the Indian agent, paying $1 25 per ton. The plaintiff, after defendants had put up the hay, purchased it from an Indian, paying $6 for 40 tons. Last Tuesday Champagne went to the reservation with five men and six teams and loaded on a good portion of the coveted hay and started home. The road passed near Lajambe's and when the Champagne party arrived at the road running to the former's barn, the defendants were in waiting and were armed with pitchforks and clubs and promptly forced a hand-to-hand encounter, conquering the Champagne party and forcing them to turn in and unload the hay where Lajambe directed. Filiatrault will furnish bail and the case will come up at the June term of the district court. The hay will be expensive for all hands.

St. Hilaire Alliance.

On Friday last the farmers of River Falls met at St. Hilaire and formed an alliance to be known as St. Hilaire Farmers Alliance. The following officers were elected, viz:

Nels K. Anderson, President, P. O. Haglund, Vice President; John Nelson, Secretary; K. O. Gigstad, Treasurer.

Mr. Nels K. Anderson was elected delegate to St. Paul and P. O. Haglund alternate. The meeting had not been as thoroughly advertised as could have been wished, however the room was well filled by an earnest body of men determined to try to do something in their own behalf, and a good strong alliance was formed and two old alliances rehabilitated and put in running order. We have not met with a more intelligent and determined body of men this winter than those we there met and we shall be very much surprised if the St. Hilaire Alliance is not a power for good in the county. At the close of the organization a rising vote of thanks was given to H. E. Cooke for the assistance rendered in organizing. Mr. Chas. A. Johnson hitched up his horse after the meeting and took the writer to Red Lake Falls arriving, however too late for the train south much to our disappointment, as we greatly desired to reach Fertile that same evening. The fault was not in our driver but in the fact that for a large portion of the distance we encountered bare ground which rendered our progress necessarily slow. Mr. Johnson made the return trip to St. Hilaire that night and carried with him our earnest sympathy.

Woodside Items.

More snow and better sleighing than at any time before this winter.

The click of the ax seems to be everywhere present in the woods, nowadays.

The first meeting of the Woodside debating society was held in the school house in district No. 190, last Friday evening. After having a good old time it was adjourned until next Friday evening at 7 o'clock. That's right, let the good work go on. There is no reason why a debating school cannot be kept up in the country as well as in the cities. All are invited, and everybody should come and take part in order to make it interesting.

Messrs. Sam Felsing and Wm. Tatro have put up a lot of ice at Maple Bay, where they intend to engage in lemonade and ice cream selling next summer. They have also commenced to gather material for the building of a steamboat, 16 feet wide by 60 feet in length, which they are going to run on Maple Lake the coming summer. Maple Bay is nicely situated on the shore of this beautiful lake, and will no doubt make a fine summer resort. We wish the boys good success.

A meeting will be held in the school house in district No. 83, on Saturday, Feb. 22d, at 3 p. m., for the purpose of organizing a farmers' alliance. Every one interested in farming and who wishes to lend a helping hand in fighting for the rights of the farmers, should not fail to be present. FARMER.

Bro. Love, of the Hallock Enterprise is doing a good work for the farmers and deserves well of them. Why don't you stir 'em up to organize, Ed?

Be not deceived. If anyone tells you that "the farmers can't do anything to right their wrongs," be sure he has some reason for wishing that his words will prove true. In union there is strength.

Last week we referred to an attack made by the Moorhead News upon Prof. John Allison. The article was filled with innuendoes against the Rev. gentleman. In plain English the News meant to insinuate that Mr. A. is a drinking man. Now, Bro. Lamphere is not a drinking man, but he is one of these good moral men who deprecate the habit in others, and his attack upon the Prof. aptly illustrates the kind of temperance reform that many of the so called temperance reformers of the day practice, that is, when they see a man struggling hard to break off from the drink habit, instead of lending a helping hand, giving him a kindly word of good cheer, they jump right upon his neck, and in a "I-am-holier-than-thou-art" manner, they kick him with all their might, seeming to rejoice in the wreck of manhood that may need only the timely aid of the help they might give him to re-assert itself. Prof. Allison has admitted his former weakness, but has sworn never to touch the stuff again, and is it the part of christianity to keep pelting away at him? In the name of wonder what more would you have the man do than he has done? Does his attitude not show repentance, and is it not the duty of all right-thinking men to aid him in his endeavor to reform? In this day and age of the world we hear a good deal of chin music on the subject of temperance, but too much of it is accompanied with an expression of superiority, a palpable shrinking from a plain duty, which is not christianity, but rank hypocircy. Show us the temperance worker who, when he thinks his brother is in danger will go to him and warn him; who will gladly welcome any evidence of a desire to break off from the thralldron of the liquor habit, and we will show you a true christian, one whose life exemplifies his profession. We do not suppose our good brother Lamphere has once thought of this subject in this light, but are not the sins of omission sometimes as great as the sins of commission? And is not our responsibility as great in the one case as the other? If Mr. A. is sincere in his expressed desire to reform, would not Bro. Lamphere's innuendoes rankle in his heart bitterly? Would not the only tendency they would have be to discourage him in his brave struggle against the drink habit? The power of a good word fitly spoken, how few realize how powerful, how precious it may be! And how easy to be spoken by the true christian temperance worker. Far better would it be to lavish such words upon an hundred unworthy objects than that one poor struggling soul should be driven down to perdition for lack of them.

Mankato Journal: The farmers of this state are getting themselves together lively. From every part of the state they are organizing. This means much. Under ordinary circumstances the farmer is too much pre-occupied to devote much time to the great questions so intimately concerning him. In too many cases this has been left with the professional politicians. The result, as can easily be imagined, has been disastrous to the farming communities. The chief industry of the state has received the least attention. But, now, if we read the sign of the times aright, there is likely to be a radical change. The farmer is coming to the front as a prominent and intellectual factor in our state politics. This is as it should be and ought to have been long ago. The politician looks upon these organizations with total indifference, and significantly winks his eye, and presses down his rising fear by giving vent to the very common expression: "They will never hang together." It remains with the farmers to say whether or not they will "hang together.

They will either "hang together" or they will hang separately, you bet!

Government Control of Railroads.

Almost every paper we pick up of late has something to say upon this subject, and nearly all of them abound in manifold reasons why this can never be practical. It is very amusing to notice their frantic efforts to throw dust in the eyes of the public and leads to the query: "What's the matter? Who said anything about government control of railroads, anyhow?" Can it be possible that they fear that the present awakening of the farmers to their own interests will lead to such a result? It must be that they fear that some action will be taken by the farmers that will materially interfere with their money making schemes, and that this is what they fear more than anything else, as, so far, this idea has hardly occurred to the average farmer, and yet a desperate fight seems to be on, just as though the companies were already confronted by the proposition. One railroad president in an interview with a reporter for a St. Paul paper, is very prolific of reasons why this is impracticable, among them that the system would create many more offices for scrambling politicians to quarrel over. Well, keep it out of politics then, make it purely a business arrangement, and that settles that point. Again he says it is impracticable "because you cannot take private property for any such purpose." Why not? If a railway company can condemn and take the property of a private citizen for right of way purposes, why cannot the government condemn and take possession of railroad property on the very same grounds, that is, "for the public good?" It certainly is for the public good that railroad tariffs should be reduced, and there is no good reason why this should not be done. The fact that watered stock prevents, is no good reason, and will not stand the legal test, as is shown in a recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the Iowa railroad cases. At present there is no effort being put forth looking to government control of railroads by ownership, but the producers, all over the country, are waking up to the fact that some steps must be taken to protect their rights, and unless some concessions are made, and that right soon, by those who are now taking an undue proportion of the profits of the soil, there is no telling what this uprising may lead to. It is very evident that the parasites who prey upon the farmer are beginning to get scared by the way they are beginning to yell "STOP THIEF" before any thief as big as themselves has put in an appearance. We have no fears of any attempts to put the roads under government control if the roads will do the fair thing by the people, but we realize the necessity for a change in the deal, and that very quick. Failing to get that, we should not be a bit surprised to see the German system introduced.

Our thanks are due Hon. S. G. Comstock for a copy of the Congressional Directory.

The state editors met in annual convention in St. Paul last week, did some business, got a good square meal at the Windsor and then adjourned till the annual excursion calls them together. An effort will be made to have the next National convention held at St. Paul. So mote it be.

There is a question of vast importance that should come before the March meeting of the State Farmers' Alliance and that is the question as to whether the State Inspection is controlled by the elevator system or not. There is more than a half-formed suspicion that such is the case and the duty of the Farmers' Alliance to verify or dispel this suspicion. The Board was created in the interest of the farmers and they should see that it is conducted in their interest.

Wonder If He Has?

Heron Lake News: The fight, if it may be called one, against the governor, is peculiar. The enemies cannot maintain a single charge against him; their only ammunition is mud, which they hurl as only experts can. The governor has stood by the people in every instance hence the growling in certain quarters.

Speaking of Senator Pierce's bill for the appointment of a committee of investigation into the cause of the agricultural depression of the country, the St. Paul Dispatch says:

"It is not too much to assume that Senator Pierce had in mind in offering this measure the situation of affairs in his own state of North Dakota. If we are not mistaken there is nothing like actual distress arising from agricultural depression prevalent throughout the country. In the Dakotas alone does it appear that the farmers are in actual want as the outcome of agricultural depression. Elsewhere the return of crops for 1889 have been above the average, and difficulty has existed on the part of the railroads to provide facilities for the prompt shipment of agricultural produce."

Which shows how easy it is for a big daily like The Dispatch to be "mistaken," when it wants to be. If there is no "actual distress" anywhere but in Dakota, will The Dispatch tell us what is the cause of the general depression in the values of farm property all over the United States? Will it also tell us how much the farmer has realized on those big crops that have bothered the railroads so much to provide shipment for? The Dispatch makes a common error when it estimates the prospects of the farmer upon the amount of grain he raises, without considering what he receives therefor. It seems singular to us that such a paper as The Dispatch can look abroad over the land and see everything so wonderfully calm and serene in agricultural communities, when the fact is so plain that the very life of agriculture is threatened by a lot of vultures that are slowly but surely sapping its life blood. When the fact is so plain that farmers all over the United States are making no money and many of them actually doing business at a loss; that the farmers all over the Union are combining in self-defence, and for what? If there is no "actual distress" among them what means this general uprising among the producing classes? But in view of these facts The Dispatch blandly informs us: "In the Dakotas alone does it appear that the farmers are in actual want as the outcome of AGRICULTURAL DEPRESSION!"

Well, now, that is what we call decidedly innocent and refreshing! Here is a vast stretch of country containing within its borders some of the richest soil in the world, land that has for several years produced crops of from 25 to 40 bushels of No. 1 Hard wheat, said to be (and is) actually worth at least ten cents per bushel more for milling purposes than any other wheat in the world, these same "suffering Dakota farmers" have for these many years raised these big crops, which have brought fortunes to somebody, and now The Dispatch blandly assures us that of "agricultural depression" among that class of "fortunate (?) farmers" has produced

"ACTUAL DISTRESS!"

Why, bless your soul, man, if these farmers had had their rightful share of the profits during the fat years it would have taken as many lean ones to have reduced them to the condition they are in to-day, and you know it, or ought to. Your song is the siren song of the despoiler, who, after he has stolen the profits of our wheat for years and years would like to have us believe that "short crops" is all that ails us! Overlooking and trying to hide the fact that the more we raise the more somebody else makes out of us! But those things don't work any more. The farmers are getting aroused to the facts in the case and are combining to make it extremely hot for those who have been enriching themselves from the toil of the producer. The farmers are confronted by the fact that they must devise a way whereby they can secure to themselves the profits of their labors or shut up shop. This fact is rendered more emphatic by this one year of short crops that causes such "agricultural depression." It has opened their eyes to the systematic robbery going on all around them, and they will not cease from their efforts until a remedy is found and applied and the equilibrium restored.

Investigation Committee.

Last week THE JOURNAL briefly alluded to Senator Pierce's bill for the appointment of a committee of investigation in the interest of agriculture, notice of which we received just before going to press. Section 4 of the bill provides:

"That it shall be the duty of said commission to take into consideration and thoroughly investigate the causes of the present depressed condition of the agricultural interests of the United States, including the laws relating to the inspection of grain, the regulations governing warehouses or elevators used for the storage or shipment of farm products, the feasibility of providing for interstate inspection of cereals, the relation of railways and transportation rates to the prices of products, the influence of the tariff on the prices of the necessaries of life, its effect on the agricultural industry and generally such consideration of the subject matter of this inquiry as in the judgment of the commission shall best secure the object specified in the title to this act."

This is one of the most important measures ever brought before congress in the interest of the farmers, and its success depends almost, if not wholly, upon the character of the men who compose the committee. It is of so much importance that every possible effort should be put forth to secure its passage and to insure the appointment of the proper men upon it. We want the leading minds, the very best material the agricultural interests can furnish to act in this capacity, and then great good will come from it. This is a subject the alliance might profitably take up for discussion to devise the means for the passage and successful operation under the bill. Write to your congressmen and to your senators and enlist their hearty co-operation in your behalf, and if successful, you will have taken a long step toward securing the open market of which you stand in perishing need.

What is the Trouble?

Minneapolis Times.

Somebody in Michigan has figured out that the average cost of raising a bushel of wheat in that state for the last five years has been about 70 cents. With wheat at $1 there is a profit of 30 cents to be divided between the producer, middlemen and commission brokers. How large a share of this falls to the farmer is not easy to ascertain, but it is estimated to range between 10 and 13 cents. When there is a speculative value on wheat the profits to middlemen are proportionately increased, while the advantage to the farmer is very slight. An authority on wheat says: "If wheat can be produced for 70 cents, its market price should never go above $1. When it gets beyond that the consumer is lining the pockets of the speculator with ill-gotten wealth." But how is the farmer going to grow opulent and take his family to Europe on a profit of 10 to 13 cents per bushel on his wheat? The middlemen and speculators can take care of themselves, and they generally do. But the man whose land and labor produces the staple, what is he going to do when wheat will bring only 75 to 85 cents per bushel, and his share of the net profit ranges from 5 cents to nothing—or worse? Farming, which ought to be the most independent, contented and prosperous of all our avocations, is fast becoming one of the most unremunerative, thankless and harrassing. There is something wrong somewhere. The trouble ought to be located, and the remedy applied without delay.

That's what we are after, old man.

Exchange: It is a mistake for farmers to be led into the notion that the business men in town are their enemies or that they are reaping great profits. As a matter of fact the average merchant finds it pretty tight squeezing to get along; pay his bills and his help. Yet many a customer has been helped over a tight place by being furnished goods on time till the crops come in. And when a subscription paper is started to build a road or reimburse an unfortunate man who has been burned out or hailed out, it soon finds its way to town. Now suppose you close up every store in town but one, how much would it improve the value of your farms? What would it benefit the farmer if all competition were done away with?

Alliance Programme.

The Executive Committee of the State Farmers' Alliance has adopted the following rules and regulations as to the annual meeting of the State Alliance, on March 4, 1890, subject, of course, to the right of the State Alliance at such meeting to revise and amend the same in any particular:

First—The State Alliance shall sit during the day in private session.

Second—Addresses by invited persons will be made at the evening sessions, and in public.

Third—During the business sessions no member shall speak more than once upon any branch of a question, or for more than ten minutes at a time, unless permission is granted by vote.

Fourth—On the first day of the session, pending the report of the committee on credentials, addresses upon the good of the order may be made by members of the alliance, provided the same shall not exceed twenty minutes each, unless otherwise ordered.

Fifth—After permanent organization, the next business in order will be the reports of officers and action thereon.

Sixth—After this two hours will be given to discussing the question of manufacturing binding twine by the convicts of the state, or otherwise.

Seventh—Three hours, or as much thereof as may be necessary, shall be given to the discussion of railroad transportation, including the subject of watered stock.

Eighth—Two hours, or as much thereof as may be necessary, shall be given to the discussion of interest on money.

Ninth—Four hours, or as much thereof as may be necessary, shall be given to the discussion of alliance insurance work.

Tenth—The reports of committees shall be made and acted upon.

Eleventh—The election of officers of the State Alliance for the coming year.

Twelfth—The first hour of the second day, or as much thereof as may be necessary, shall be devoted to the address of the president.

Thirteenth—The report of the Minnesota delegates to the St. Louis meeting of the National Farmers' Alliance and the Confederated Farmers' and Laborers' Union, and the discussion thereon, will be next in order.

At the open evening session:

First—Address of welcome by the governor of the state.

Second—Address by the attorney general of the state as to the operation of the railroad laws.

Third—The Railroad Commissioners will be offered an opportunity to present their views to the State Alliance, and make report of their proceedings.

Fourth—Gen. J. H. Baker, ex-Railroad Commissioner, will make an address.

Fifth—An address will be delivered by the State Lecturer of the Alliance, and any of his deputies who desire to speak.

Sixth—Any persons invited by vote of the State Alliance to address it will have an opportunity to do so.

The addresses will be divided up among the two or more open evening sessions of the alliance. It is also suggested that one evening be given to a public discussion of the interests of the farmers, by members of the alliance and others, speeches to be limited to ten or fifteen minutes each, so as to give a large number opportunity to participate. It is expected that open evening sessions will prove a pleasant and profitable part of the alliance meeting.

Farmers' Economy.

Farm, Stock and Home.

"If a farmer would be satisfied to live as cheaply as he did forty years ago his profits would be very large." This is a literal translation from an agricultural (?) writer. The inference is that because the farmer does not live as he did forty years ago he should blame none but himself for his non-success. Putting the farmer back forty years is equivalent to putting him back 100 years, for there was but little difference in the modes of living and doing during the intervening sixty years. But the dark ages, the back-breaking ages, the ox team, stage coach and log hut ages were good enough for farmers! Let them stay there and live as did their grandfathers, then they can make money enough to enable the more favored mortals of earth to bask in the improvements, ease, joy, beauty and light of this the twilight of the nineteenth century! Will the daft writers on farmers' economy please tell us what the condition of other kinds of business would be if farmers "lived as they did forty years ago?" The trouble is not that farmers spend too much money; they don't have it to spend, more's the pity! If every farmer in the land could annually spend fifty dollars more than he now does to make himself and family more comfortable, it would create a business "boom" in this country that would culminate in one broad, universal, national smile; and the smile would stay, too. The apologists for our present economic system would like to make farmer extravagance responsible for agricultural depression. But if farmers could make money by not spending a cent, what would become of stores, factories, railroads, towns and cities? It is idiotic to condemn farmers for spending too much money; we should strive to so arrange it that they might have much more to spend.

Don't Talk About It.

Farm, Stock and Home.

From Maine to California, from Minnesota to Florida, the question is being discussed, What ails agriculture, and what can we do for it? Not alone agricultural, but political, religious and family papers are discussing the question; and ministers, lawyers and doctors are also at it. Gentlemen, it is time to call a halt. Your course is demoralizing; you are discouraging farmers! You must not admit that anything is wrong; must not admit that farmers are hard up, that they are making no money. Your course is suicidal. Give the farmers some more chloroform of hope; assuage their aches by liberal doses of nobility and grandeur of farming as an avocation; apply lotions of "better methods;" give them larger pills of "economy;" smilingly tell them that longer hours, harder work, and a more liberal diet of wind will fetch them out all right? but, for heaven's sake, don't tell them the truth!

VALID REASONS.

(Communicated.)

The National Religious Liberty Association has issued a leaflet in which is announced the following

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

We believe in the religion taught by Jesus Christ.

We believe in temperance, and regard the liquor traffic as a curse to society.

We believe in supporting the civil government and submitting to its authority.

We deny the right of any civil government to legislate on religious questions.

We believe it is the right, and should be the privilege, of every man to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience.

We also believe it to be our duty to use every lawful and honorable means to prevent religious legislation by the civil government; that we and our fellow-citizens may enjoy the inestimable blessings of both religious and civil liberty.

It also enumerates the following reasons for signing the petition against religious legislation:

1. Because we believe in religious liberty.
2. Because we believe religious legislation to be opposed to religious liberty.
3. Because we are opposed to the enforcement of religious institutions and rights by law.
4. Because there is at the present time an organized effort to secure religious legislation.
5. Because we consider the proposed national Sunday law, and the educational amendment which provides for the teaching of the principles of Christianity in the public schools, to be steps toward the union of church and state.
6. Because the present movement towards a union of church and state will, if successful, open the flood-gates of religious legislation, bigotry and intolerance.
7. Because religious legislation leaves religious faith to the decision of the majority; but the majority has no right to decide the religious faith, and bind the conscience of the minority.
8. Because freedom is essentially the right to differ, and that right should be sacredly respected.
9. Because the petition is in harmony with the constitution, the first amendment of which says: "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."
10. Because the petition is in harmony with the Declaration of Independence, which declares equal rights and liberties for all men.
11. Because a hundred years of unequaled prosperity attest the wisdom of our forefathers in the establishment of a government in which church and state are entirely separate.
12. Because we desire to have this "land of the free" preserved from the blighting influence of the religious despotism which has cursed the old world.
13. Because we believe religious legislation to be subversive of both civil and religious liberty, and therefore a menace to both the state and the church.
14. Because patriotism impels us to oppose anything which would endanger the prosperity of the government.
15. Because we believe all men are created equal and therefore have the same right that we have to worship God according to the dictates of conscience.
16. Because, in harmony with the Golden Rule, we are willing to grant to others the exercise of the same rights which we claim for ourselves.

The Tax on Mortgaged Farms.

A correspondent of the Morris Sun has some thoughts upon a very important subject, viz: that while merchants, bankers, etc., are allowed to deduct their debts from their assets in listing their property subject to taxation, the farmer alone has to pay taxes on his debts:

And this case of mine represents but one of a thousand similar cases all over the State of Minnesota. As it is estimated the state, principally farming lands, covered by mortgages to the amount of $175,000,000 on which the farmers have to pay a tax on the full assessed valuation of their farms besides. What a swindle? Farmers don't you think it high time that you send some one to the legislature to make laws for you, besides political demagogues? No such law exists in regard to other occupations, as for instance, bankers, merchants, manufacturers; in fact all engaged in other business than that of farming are furnished by the assessor with a blank form to be used for putting down the liabilities which is deducted from the assets, hence nothing but the actual amount owned in the business can be assessed, but a farmer must pay a full tax not only on what he actually owns, but what he owes as well. He pays a full assessed valuation of his farm and if it is mortgaged for all it is worth he pays a tax on it as though it was free. He pays a tax on a cow valued at $12 worth in the market $10; he pays a tax on an old scrub of a horse valued at $50, sold in the market from $20 to $25; he pays a tax on an old harvester valued at $100, not worth as much as a cord of wood.

And whereas, the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, did for value received on the tenth day of April A. D. 1889, duly assign the aforesaid note and mortgage and the debt secured thereby to Halvor Steenerson and George J. D. 1889, and of the sum of twenty-five and 50-100 dollars ($25.50-100.) due as the eighth installment of said note on the first day of January A. D. 1890, and all of said sums are still due and unpaid, and whereas it was stipulated and agreed, by and between the parties to said mortgage, that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained, on the part of the mortgagors to be kept and performed, then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for said mortgagee and its assigns to consider the whole sum thereby secured to be immediately due and payable, without notice to said mortgagors or any other party,

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post office, whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted at a Meeting of the Mentor Alliance, Held Feb. 15th, 1890.

Whereas, Branches of an association known as "The Merchants' Retail Commercial Agency" of Chicago, Ill., has been organized in Crookston and other towns in Polk County; and

Whereas, Merchants and others belonging to said organization are sending out circulars to farmer debtors who (through a succession of poor crops and the legalized robbery of money loaners and their like,) are unable to pay their debts, requiring them to pay at once or secure the same on penalty of being posted as "dead beats;" and

Whereas, The by-laws of said association forbid, under penalty, any member of the same trusting a delinquent debtor of any other member, thereby destroying their credit; and

Whereas, We believe the producers and wage earners should have SOME of the benefits of their labor, should be allowed to enjoy a few of the comforts of life of which the nabobs have so many; therefore

Resolved, That the members of Mentor Alliance will not trade or deal with any member of said association to the extent of one dollar that can possibly be avoided, and we call on all members of the alliance in Polk County and elsewhere, and all others who may or may not be subject to this humiliation, to denounce this outrage upon a class of honorable citizens who through unfortunate circumstances are not now able to pay their debts; and

Resolved, That it is the duty of alliance men and all wage earners in sympathy with them throughout the state, to lay aside partisan prejudice and this year elect a Legislature that will repeal and enact, and a Governor that will execute laws that will free us from the grasp of extortionists.

Resolved, That the foregoing be published in THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and The Great West.

GEO. H. TRIPP, Sec.

SLETTEN P. O., Minn., Feb. 15, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL:—A meeting of farmers was held on Monday last in the east school house, in the town of Badger, for the purpose of organizing a farmers' alliance and to discuss the interests of the farmers. C. O. Welnest was elected chairman, and Oscar Daveny, secretary of the meeting. After considerable debate all the farmers that were present decided to join the alliance, and officers were elected. Several speeches were made, going to show the great wrongs inflicted upon farmers by monopolies. A collection was taken up which brought in something over two dollars. The meeting adjourned to meet again on Monday afternoon next, at the residence of Hans Nork, at 1 o'clock p. m.

CAN'T SELL THE GRAIN.

A Supreme Court Decision of Interest to Farmers and Elevator Men.

Minneapolis Journal, Feb. 19th.

The supreme court in St. Paul yesterday decided the case of Geo. W. Hall, respondent, vs. Geo. A. Pillsbury, et al, appellant, affirming the order of the lower court. This establishes the ruling that an elevator man cannot pass title to grain which may have been deposited with him for safe keeping. G. W. Ehle & Co. were the proprietors of an elevator at Stewart, on the H. & D. railroad. Hall was one of some fifteen people to store grain in the elevator, taking the usual receipt. Later on the elevator men sold this grain to the Pillsburys, claiming that when the grain had been deposited with them the title also passed, giving them the right to dispose of it. The supreme court says that while it is impossible for the owners of the grain to regain the identical grain deposited, yet that the elevator men were simply bailees, and under no circumstances could they dispose of it—that is, that they must keep that amount in store, subject to the orders of the depositors.

But He Will Not.

Battle Lake Review: It is said that a number of G. A. R. men are working up a case against Warden Randall, of the Stillwater prison. They want him bounced because he has dismissed several old soldiers from positions in that institution. If the charges are true, and Warden Randall has been discriminating against the G. A. R. boys, Gov. Merriam should remove him at once.

Professor John Henry Comstock, the eminent naturalist, begins in the New York Ledger of March 1, a series of six articles on the study of insects, in which he describes, not only those insects which are useful to the farmer, but also, those which destroy entire fields of grain, cotton and rice, and ravage orchards, gardens and vineyards. He demonstrates how it was scientifically determined that an average annual loss of $80,000,000 has been occasioned in the south by the cotton-worm alone; and that an average loss per year, of nearly $2,400,000, has been brought about in the apple crop of Illinois by the ravages of the codlin moth. The series is profusely illustrated.

Warren Register: Judge J. P. Nelson lost his handsome residence in Passadena, Cal., on the 31st of last month, by fire. The fire started in the attic, and had already gained such a headway when discovered that nothing could be done to check the progress of the flames; consequently the building was entirely destroyed.

St. Paul Daily News: Senator Washburn seems to continue to find places for his friends, the latest selection being a consulship for F. A. Husher. Mr. Husher was a member of the last legislature from Hennepin county and of course an ardent supporter of the junior Senator. Shortly after the adjournment of the Legislature he failed in the publication of the newspaper he was engaged in at Minneapolis and that failure developed that Senator Washburn held his note for $5,000. Whether there is any connection between his vote for Senator, the note and the consulship, we are unable to say, but Husher has the consulship and Maj. Newson is still out in the cold.

Barnesville Review: Alvah Eastman, of the Anoka Herald, is looking up moonshiners down in Kentucky and here is what he writes home: "At the next station I chartered a team and driver and went across the country to Mayfield. We started Thursday noon, and we reached Mayfield Saturday after dinner, a distance of fifty miles in two days' driving. Mud—there wasn't anything else, except bridges, and I counted over thirty in twenty miles. I don't blame the natives for voting the democratic ticket. I would not blame them for doing anything they wanted to. A man who lives in such a God forsaken country is entitled to all the privileges the law would deprive him of. The houses are nearly all built of logs shingled with mud and some of them have no windows. The only light they can get must be through the open door. I don't believe there is a house in the three counties that I passed through that contained a bit of plastering. I visited several of the best houses on the road, and the partitions were made with unmatched boards. If the thermometer should get down to zero the whole country would be frozen to death and I am constantly praying for a cold wave."

Wheat Shipping.

Correspondence Farm, Stock and Home.

I want to emphasize what you say in your issue of Jan. 1st, "The rights of farmers to make direct shipments of wheat should not be surrendered." Several cars of wheat have been shipped from our station, and the state weights and grades on same were perfectly satisfactory to the farmers who shipped. I have shipped none myself, but I am sure that the opportunity to ship has been worth to me $10 or more on the few loads I have marketed. Grain grades better here since some commenced to ship direct! Our difficulty is entirely with local grading, and the trouble will never be settled till the grade of wheat is fixed by disinterested parties. At present the buyer grades the wheat in the country markets. The producer must take the best he can get, and seldom has the benefit of competition. Our state system of inspection should be extended instead of being abolished. Would it not be practicable for farmers to combine and build warehouses, and have the state furnish an inspector to grade and weigh? Such a warehouse would be truly public, and one or two of them in a county would fix the grades and compel all the houses to do a fair business or close up.

Our local buyers claim to give the best possible grades for wheat, but all shippers I have spoken with report the state grades better, and in two cases less dockage, besides a better grade. Where farmers are too poor to build warehouses, would it not be a legitimate part of railroad business to build such houses for state inspection, or to aid farmers to build them? The local elevator is a necessity for handling the main crop of wheat, and if the grain is to be shipped, bought and sold on grades, the grading should be, and in justice must be, entirely separate from and independent of buying, selling, raising, or carrying it. The buyer now grades our wheat in local markets. Some disinterested system of grading in country elevators must be established before we can have peace with justice.

Desperate Nebraska.

The Western Rural

The farmers of Nebraska are becoming aroused as they see their hard labor for the production of the necessaries of life unremunerated, while the carrying companies of the country are growing richer day by day. The country has reason for devout gratitude that the millions of our farmers who are to-day suffering adversity as scarcely no other class of industrial people ever have, are the naturally patient people and helpful people that our farmers are. Place any other laboring class under similar conditions, and there would be an actual outbreak. But the farmer is peaceful and loyal to law and government. His patience, however, is not an evidence of stupidity. He knows that when he has corn to sell and the world wants that corn, the railroad should not be allowed to step in and assess the producer for the transportation of his product to a degree that leaves a balance insufficient to cover the cost of production. It is said that the farmers of Illinois will actually lose $10,000,000 on last year's corn crop. Yet there is not a railroad in Illinois that is not making money. This will give some indication of what Nebraska, which is five hundred miles further away from Chicago, must suffer in the way of loss. The western roads are even more grasping than the eastern roads, although most of the former have been built with government aid and have grown rich from the products of the farmer's toil. It is claimed, too, and it is probably true, that the roads are charging from eight to ten per cent per hundred more for carrying grain than they did a few years ago. Under such circumstances it is not to be wondered at that the farmers of Nebraska are becoming desperate and are making demands for justice in tones that will command attention.

The governor and the railroad commission of the state are speaking for the farmers. They are appealing for a reduction of through rates, to the managers of our railroads. Governor Thayer demands a reduction of five per cent per hundred. But the farmers, as a whole, seem to think that this is not sufficient. Ten per cent is spoken of as being more in accordance with justice. Last week the governor and the board of railroad commissioners were in Chicago to consult with the railroad authorities. The Rural has no hesitancy in saying the cut should not be less than ten per cent. But we have little hope that the governor and railroad commissioners will accomplish much of permanent value. The board can reduce the rates within the state, but it cannot go beyond the state; but the law, as it would likely be interpreted by the courts, will not, in all probability, permit the board to reduce the rates as low as they should be. The law provides that the board shall not make unreasonable rates, and if it should reduce them so that they would leave but a small profit, or no profit at all, it is likely that the courts would not sustain the cut. Yet it is possible that real justice may demand that the rates be placed so low that no profit at all will be yielded. Why not? The railroad has been more profitable than any other industry in the country. More fortunes and greater ones, have been made from railroading than from anything else. If any prominent road should be operated at a dead loss for the next two years, the roads would still have a splendid sum on the credit side of the ledger. Railroad capital is no more sacred than farm capital. Why then should it be permitted to charge rates that will yield a profit, upon grain that the farmer produces at a loss? Justice is justice. This journal has always maintained that when business was depressed and nobody was making money outside of railroad circles, the railroad should not be permitted to make money. It is not equality before the law to permit the roads to do a profitable business, when no other business is profitable.

But the railroad managers will never voluntarily consent to give up their profits for a season and will never even be satisfied with a meager profit. Nothing but rigid legislation can bring about equitable relations between the roads and the farmer. It is to aid in securing just such legislation that The Rural has been urging the holding of a convention, composed of delegates from all the farmers' organizations, that we may unite our strength in a grand confederation of societies. With sufficient push the farmers of Nebraska will likely receive some concessions, but let them and all of us combine together for securing absolute justice.

J. B. Bren, J. W. Bren and Frank Cernousek were down from Tabor last week. J. B. was on his way to St. Paul for a week's visit.

Will Van Dyke was in the city last week enroute to Tacoma. We wish him worlds of luck out there and a safe and speedy return to civilization.

Mayor J. W. Lilly left on Monday evening for his old home at Warrau, Ky., where he will visit for awhile before going to Louisville, Ky., to engage in business.

THE JOURNAL is informed that the store of Grifthen & Estenson at Neby, was burned to the ground early this week, resulting in a total loss to the proprietors.

Don't forget the Farmers' Institute on Wednesday March 12th. Bring along a sample of your wheat if you have any doubts as to its quality for seed, and have Prof. Harper test its capacity

Charlie Westler, a former Crookstonite was in the city this week for the first time in three years. He says he finds some improvements but would like to find some more. Thinks Crookston has a grand future.

County Att'y Williams wants to buy a good watch dog to keep the East Grand Forkers from waking him up at all hours of the night to attend to cases. The fiercer the dog the more money he will pay for him.

Evaporated peaches, apricots, raspberries, blackberries, silver prunes, California prunes, prunes and fine raisins in large variety, just received at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

Treasurer Lucken and a corps of efficient clerks were kept busy this week raking in the dollars of our daddies on personal taxes. Cows assessed at $10 by county assessors, raised to $15 by the elegant State Board and sold last fall for from $5 to $7 per head! How's that for equality (?) in taxation and prosperity (?) for farmers. Will we get a proportionate rake off next year?

Money to loan in large or small sums on good farms. Choice farms and city property for sale. CHAS. M. LOWE,

H. H. Thorson, was in from Roome on Wednesday and confirms the report of the burning of the store of Grifthen & Estenson at Neby. He lives within three miles of Neby which is his postoffice, and says that the destruction was almost total including the postoffice. But very little merchandise was saved. Messrs. G. & E. had insured their property but it is said to be questionable whether they can realize anything on it owing to a neglect to fulfill all of the conditions of the policy.

Elsewhere appears a set of resolutions, passed by Mentor Alliance in relation to the Merchants Retail Commercial Agency. We do not know the circumstances in the case which called them forth but from what we do know of that Agency its object is not to occasion distress to any well meaning debtor but to reach a class who never make any pretense of paying an honest bill when they can by any means avoid it.

Smoked halibut, smoked bloaters, anchoivis and Norway herring at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

Mrs. H. H. Dickmann, wife of Register Dickmann of the U. S. Land Office died at the family residence on Houston Avenue on Saturday afternoon aged 51. The funeral services were held at the house at 4 o'clock on Sunday and the remains were taken to the old home in Wabasha County for interment. Mrs. Dickmann had been a sufferer for some time and returned home a few days since from a trip below for her health. She leaves her husband and five children to mourn the loss of an excellent wife and a loving mother.

We took a trip to McIntosh on Saturday last and met many of the farmers of King who were considering the question of forming an alliance. As their meeting had been called for three p. m., and we were obliged to leave one hours before that we did not have the pleasure of seeing all of them but we met a number who decided to organize an alliance and signed a petition for a charter. The meeting was the adjourned until Saturday March 15th immediately after the arrival of the morning train from Crookston. We took dinner at the Labrie House and sampled some bread made of the flour from Jenson's new mill and—. Yum, yum! If you want nicer flour you are hard to suit. Well it was as nice bread as we desire and if they are going to turn out that kind all the time they deserve to make money from the start and will no doubt.

Let 'em Come.

We are deluged with communications this week and the result is that some will have to wait until next issue as we have not time to set them for this, although we have "boiled down" some of them. But let 'em come. They are interesting. We want short, crisp letters giving the news from each alliance at every meeting.

T. B. Walker has written a letter to Mayor Lilly in which he deprecates the idea of establishing another mill at this place, and the letter contains a covert threat of the removal of his mill if we encourage the enterprise. Our citizens gave him a magnificent bonus to come and if they did not so arrange it that if he should get huffy and go away he would have to return the property that's where they made a foolish bargain and they should look out for this point in the future. The idea that Mr. Walker or any other one man can cut all of the lumber on the Red Lake Reservation, or can supply the millions of feet that will be needed to build up this country is, to us, absurd and we have an idea that many mills the size of his will be required. We think his bluff will be estimated at its true value and that our citizens will act for their own best interests by securing as many mills as possible.

John Kops was over from Grand Forks last week and took a run up to Mentor on Saturday.

JOHN McLEAN.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

An important session of the Minnesota State Farmers' Institute will be held in this city on Wednesday, March 12th, 1890, commencing at 9 a. m. Prof. D. N. Harper, State Chemist, will be in attendance with samples of frozen, frosted and blighted wheats, from the crops of '88; also the products of such seed, and will explain the effect of frost and blight on our wheat. He will be prepared also to tell by samples brought to him whether the wheat is fit for seed or not, and he is desirous that every farmer who has damaged wheat that he thinks of sowing should bring along a sample of it for analysis. This is an opportunity that no farmer should neglect, as by it you can positively ascertain whether your wheat is fit for seed or not. The institute will be held as follows:

In Warren, Marshall Co, Monday, March 10th.

In Stephen, Marshall Co., Tuesday, March 11th.

In Crookston, Polk Co., Wednesday, March 12th.

In Hallock, Kittson Co., Thursday, March 13th.

In St. Vincent, Kittson Co., Friday afternoon, March 14th, and Saturday forenoon, March 15th.

As this is a question of vital importance to farmers, every man who is in doubt as to the value of his wheat for seed should attend this institute and have his wheat analyzed. We have received the following letter from the Governor on the subject. We omit the report of Prof. Harper as it is a very long one, and would require several columns to contain it all, and he will be here himself to explain all it contains, which is better:

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
Executive Department,
St. Paul, Feb. 20, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: The question as to the proper kind of wheat to be used for seeding purposes by our wheat-raisers, especially in the Red River Valley, where the crops were so poor in 1888, is of such vital importance to the farmers of our state, that I deemed it advisable to have the matter investigated and, if possible, devise some means to bring it to the attention of our wheat producers. With this end in view, I communicated with Prof. D. N. Harper, State Chemist at the Experiment Station, and requested him to furnish me with an official report upon this subject. Prof. Harper has given the subject very careful study, has made frequent trips to the Red River Valley in its interest, and from his long and practical experience with such matters is fully equipped to deal understandingly with the question. In accordance with my request he has kindly furnished me with a report of his observations and experiments made during the past season in this district. From this report it will be observed that the conditions affecting the wheat in 1888 varied greatly in different sections, and gave rise to entirely different results. In Polk, Marshall and Kittson Counties there resulted much FROSTED and FROZEN wheat. Wheat was injured by RUST in all sections of the Valley more or less. Only those localities on the eastern sandy border, many on the western river border, and isolated districts in the central prairie lands escaped. In commenting upon the different grades of poor wheat, and the results of seeding the same, it will be noted that RUSTED and FROSTED or BLISTERED wheats are poor for milling, but if THOROUGHLY CLEANED are safe to use for seed. FROZEN wheat if seeded cannot produce a good crop, and is UTTERLY WORTHLESS for milling. Much BLEACHED wheat resulted from the extraordinary number of rains after harvest and before threshing. This wheat is also poor for milling, but like rusted and frosted wheat is safe to use for seed if THOROUGHLY CLEANED. This report is accompanied by samples of wheat, which have been collected in this district, together with an analysis of the same, and it seems to me that the results of his examinations are not only worthy of serious consideration, but prove conclusively the necessity of using good wheat for seeding purposes. Our wheat-raisers should be impressed with the importance of thoroughly acquainting themselves with a subject which seems to me, if carried out, would materially increase the value of our best wheats and bring all to a higher level. I therefore have the honor of enclosing to you herewith a copy of Prof. Harper's report, and beg leave to request of you the favor of causing it to be published in your valuable newspaper, or, if you have not the space to spare, to give such a general outline of the same as seems to you most desirable for your locality. By doing this I am confident it will result in much good, and we will all get great value to all the interests affected by wheat raising. The samples of the wheat referred to in the report will be forwarded to you by express from St. Anthony Park, Minn.

Yours respectfully,
W. R. MERRIAM,
Governor.

ED. POLK COUNTY JOURNAL.

Didn't know but you would like to hear from the "Thirteen States" and to show you that the dwellers of the Thirteen Towns don't sleep all of the time but are alive and read THE JOURNAL I have the pleasure to report another link in the chain. A farmers meeting was called at 11 o'clock a. m, the 20th of February in the Hill River school house by C. E. Southmayd, for the purpose of organizing a farmers' alliance. A large number of our farmers assembled and established a sub-alliance with a charter membership of 23. The alliance was named "Hill River Farmers' Alliance." Our next meeting will be held at Lindsay post-office on March 1st. Hope to send a delegate to the state meeting of March 4th.

Yours Truly, FRED.

[Thanks. Will "Fred" please send us the names and P. O. address of the officers, also Alliance No. when it is received. ED. JOURNAL.]

WYLIE, Minn., Feb. 24, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I have often seen reports of the organization of farmers' alliances, and would say that the farmers up here in Black River are doing their best to get organized. We have already got a charter and intend to make as much headway as possible. Our farmers are beginning to see the necessity of sticking together. I am glad to see in your paper so much of importance for the benefit of the farming community. Our officers are as follows: President, Swan Anderson; vice-president, Ole Larson; treasurer, Andrew Swanson; secretary, A. M. Swanson.

Woodside Items.

WOODSIDE, Sept. 24, 1890.

The general salutation in this locality now-a-days is: "For Lord's sake when will we have spring; by gum, I shall have to buy hay pretty soon or else starve my cattle!" &c.

Hay is selling at from four to five dollars a ton.

There was a dance at Mr. Gideon Stoddard's, February 17th. A happy crowd attended, and a pleasant time is reported.

The Woodside Debating Society is prospering nicely and an increased attendance can be noticed at every meeting.

The Woodside farmers met in school Dist. 83 and organized an alliance of 43 members, on Washington's birthday. Then, having done one patriotic deed, they did another by giving three rousing cheers in honor of the day and adjourned to await the arrival of their charter.

FARMER.

WOODSIDE, Feb. 22, 1890.

At a meeting of farmers of the town of Woodside, held in the Woodside school house, Feb. 22d, the meeting was called to order by H. G. Mitchell, after which H. G. Mitchell was chosen temporary president and H. C. Tatro, secretary. Forty-three names were enrolled as charter members. The secretary was instructed to send for a charter. Meeting then adjourned to meet two weeks from date of the meeting, March 8th. H. C. TATRO, Sec.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

The Fairmount Sentinel says that Senator Washburn, in a letter to that paper places himself squarely on the side of tariff reduction and reform, and pledges himself to vote for wiping out entirely the duty on lumber, sugar, jute, manilla, sisal grass, etc., and to greatly reduce the tariff on other necessaries of life. That's all right. Senator Davis is right on deck too and now let us hear from our congressmen that they are on the right side and Minnesota will be all right.

Kittson County is coming to the front and the farmers propose to organize alliances in every town where such a thing is possible. They are becoming very tired of raising from 30 to 40 bushels No. 1 Hard every year since they have been in that fertile county to find that after two years of partial failure of crops they are classed as objects of charity, to whom must be sent food, clothing, etc., freight free! How extravagantly they must have lived all these years and years, spending their surplus for plug hats, broadcloth suits, 25 cent cigars and some feedle dings like dose. No wonder they are sorry now that they bought so many pianos and Brussels carpets and silk dresses and bonnets with humming birds on 'em and in 'em! Now that they feel so hungry they must regret it and they have decided to stop such reckless expenditures and consider whether it was really them or THOSE WHO HANDLE THE WHEAT AFTER IT LEAVES THE PRODUCERS' HANDS who have been having all of the good things of life while the farmer gets only the chaff!

St. Vincent New Era: It is always a pleasure to discuss questions with Bro. Cooke, of THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL. He does not commence an argument by calling his opponent a rascal and end by making a blackguard of himself. After discussing an article we printed two weeks ago on Hon. Jas. J. Hill's generosity, he asks us the following question: "Hadn't you rather have had a free and fair wheat market all these years and years, uncontrolled by elevator influences, than all Mr. Hill has done for you? Honest now, wouldn't you?" Honest Injun, we would! It is our turn now, Bro. Cooke, to ask a question: Are not Mr. Hill's gifts of improved stock to the counties of northern Minnesota and Dakota; his annual subscriptions to our Industrial Association, and his contribution of cash and free transportation of supplies for the benefit of farmers on the Ridge, praiseworthy, and some of them princely acts of thoughtful kindness? Aren't they?

Very kind and all that, but the share of the products of the soil which of right belonged to those who did the work necessary to produce them and which they did not get for lack of an open market, largely overbalances the account of gratitude they owe to Mr. Hill or any other man. How much does it lack of being a small portion of their own money returned to them?

They Kick.

The people residing along the line north of St. Vincent are wont to kick vigorously over the movements of the "cannon ball express," and, since we had occasion this week to look the matter up we dont blame them. We picked up a paper printed on the line to see about what time we could get somewhere and this is what we found. The train leaves Crookston at 6:30, supposedly all right and nothing occurs to mar the dull monotony until they reach Warren, which they do, according to this schedule, at "50." Whether there is anything in the appearance of of the city of Warren to cause such an arrival we can't say, but they go on and reach Argyle at "3:77" a. m., or g. m., we don't know. It don't say. Well, time flies and they reach Stephen at "2:01" presumably an hour or so earler than they reach Argyle but we are not certain by the schedule. They reach Donaldson at "16:20," Kennedy at at "10:00;" Hallock at "7:23" p. m., Northcote at "21:11," Humboldt "11:30" and if they have no further bad luck reach the shades of Deacon at "10:01." Kick? Well we should think they would.

County Farmers' Alliance.

As many of the sub-alliances as can will please send their delegates to this city on Saturday next, to take preliminary steps looking toward the formation of a County Alliance. The business to be done will be to decide whether we shall organize; if decided in the affirmative, then to sign an application for a charter and to elect one delegate and one alternate to represent Polk County Alliance in the State Alliance. The regular meeting for organization will be held at such date in March as shall give every sub-alliance in the county an opportunity to send in their delegation. We have now 16 sub-alliances in Polk County, many of which have already elected their delegates. All who have not should do so at once. Remember that each alliance is entitled to three delegates, whose duty it shall be to represent their alliance in the County Alliance until July 1st, or until their successors are elected. Every delegate must have credentials signed by the president and secretary of his sub-alliance. Every alliance who has not done so should at once elect their delegates. In case that any alliance shall be unable to get their delegates ready for the Saturday meeting and desires to be represented, any officer of that alliance will be admitted or any one member who comes properly vouched for.

Let's see; was there not a large-sized row kicked up some years ago, about the time when this country was a hundred years or so newer than it is now on the subject of "taxation without representation!" Well, what did those fellows want anyhow? Did they not have all they needed to eat and to wear? Why should they kick? Why they got the idea into their heads that they wanted to vote! what for? Why, they had on idea that if they could vote they could make laws best calculated to their advancement in everything that makes life worth living, they thought if they could vote they would be free men indeed. But, said some "you can't do nothin!" "farmers won't stick together!" "You havn't got intelligence enough to accomplish anything!" "The job is too big for you to tackle; you can't whip England!" Notwithstanding all these discouraging features and hundreds more it is a matter of history that they DID unite and they did accomplish their purpose, and they did found a free government in spite of armed opposition and traitors at home. They fought that they might have the ballot to protect them. We have it, free as air but how do we use it? Is it the means of protection to us that it proved to be to the founders of this government? Do we appreciate this great lever at its full value? When we are tempted to murmer at the magnitude of the task before the farmers do we ever stop to consider the true value of the weapon that is at our command to use if we choose? It is very probable that the evils we complain of can be cured without resort to extreme measures but we should never forget that we have a powerful weapon at command if needed. In the light of history the farmer should not despair of winning his cause, because it is a just cause and combination will effect it. It may take time it probably will but harder tasks have been successfully accomplished and this can be.

Davis For The Farmers.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18, 1890.

L. H. JUDSON, Crookston, Minn.

DEAR SIR:—I have your esteemed favor of the 14th, enclosing a petition from the farmers of your neighborhood, which I shall lay before the senate to-day.

I am exceedingly glad that you have requested my views upon this subject. I have for many years regarded the practice of fictitious sales where the property itself is not in sight, is not delivered and is never intended to be delivered, in which in short the whole proceeding is a bet, to be settled by a payment of differences at the end of the game, as the most dangerous and corrupt gambling to which the American people were ever addicted. It not only demoralizes the players at the game in the cities where the transactions are conducted but it stimulates in every city and village throughout the country hundreds of people to indulge in transactions of which chance is the basis and in which honest industry has no part whatever. In this way communities are demoralized, young men debauched and not infrequently men of previous fair standing brought to ruin, involving others with them. The evil goes further of course than this. The values which are fixed in these gambling transactions are unreal, transient and deceptive. Whenever the value of a staple product is subjected to influences of this kind it introduces an element of uncertainty which depreciates that value from the true level it would occupy if it were left to the steady operation of natural causes, and in this way it most injuriously affects the producer.

This matter has been the subject of many petitions similar to this and is receiving the earnest attention of some of the most thoughtful men in this body. I assure you that my own co-operation shall not be wanting in any measure which shall afford the desired relief.

Yours truly,
C. K. DAVIS.

A FARMERS' LAW.

THE LEGISLATION ASKED FOR BY THE NATIONAL ALLIANCE.

Storage and Classification.

Government Warehouses Wanted in All Agricultural Sections.

Advances of Money on Products.

Senator Casey to Introduce This Important Bill—A Strong Lobby of Farmers Backing the Measure.

The Minneaplis Journal.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The National Farmer's Alliance is preparing to take a livery whirl at congress this session. The alliance is now evolving measures which will soon be brought prominently before the nation. The officers of the association claim these measures, if they become laws, will be of inestimable benefit to the farmers of this country. The principal bill that the alliance is fostering is one to establish subtreasuries and government warehouses in all agricultural sections of the Union. The measure in question was considered at great length at the annual meeting of the national alliance held at St. Louis last December. The idea was reported by the convention's legislative committee, and was adopted with much enthusiasm. The bill, as now drafted for introduction in congress by the officers of the national alliance, provides for the establishment of government warehouses and sub-treasuries, as previously stated, and the greater part of the expenses for maintaining them is to be paid for by the government. After asking for a general storage system for agricultural products, the bill recites that this should have government sanction and supervision. It also provides for government weights and certificates and classifications. The government will be asked to make monetary advances on products thus stored after much the same same nature that it now advances against whisky stored in government warehouses. The bill asks that receipts be made negotiable by indorsement, and that the rate of interest shall be very low. It also provides that all advances and other expenses shall be repaid to the government in order to get possession of these products for consumption. It is not yet decided whether the government will be asked to erect warehouses, or whether the people will build them. The land is to be donated by the farmer in all cases.

It is a question whether such a bill as this can be steered through congress this session, but the national alliance men propose to make a vigorous attempt to get it through. The congressman who opposes it will be put on record if they vote against it at any rate. The alliance leaders propose to get this much satisfaction out of it if they fail in accomplishing their purpose. However there is a possibility that they will not be able to do this even. It a very easy matter for congress to lay away objectionable measures in dusty pigeonholes and forgot all about them. The present alliance measure, however, may be all right. Senator Casey, of North Dakota, is to introduce it in the house next week, and Congressman Pickler, of South Dakota, will attempt to steer the measure away from breakers in the lower house. Senator Casey thinks the measure will be all right, provided it is modified somewhat.

Hon. Alonzo Wardell, of Huron, S. D., a member of the national alliance executive board, will work for the passage of the measure. It is now stated that this explains his present visit to Washington.

Keep it Before the People.

The Western Rural.

Let no falsehood and no sophistry keep the real condition of the American farmer from sight. For an intelligent people the Americans are in some respects distressingly stupid. Newspapers and orators tell us that the country is exceedingly prosperous. They say that the poor are living better than they ever lived; that the value of the farmer's land has increased, and that though he may feel poor he is really rich, and so on. The Rural has never denied that the country is making money. Indeed it has expressly admitted it, but while admitting it, it has said that the profits do not go where they belong. Thousands of farms are valued at a higher figure than they were fifty years ago. That must naturally be the case. But that is to the disadvantage rather than to the advantage of the farmer. A farm worth fifty dollars an acre must pay more taxes than a farm that is worth only five or ten dollars per acre, and if neither is paying any profit or scarcely any, the man who owns the five or ten dollars an acre farm is the best off. It is a clear case of blessed be nothing. But it is not true that farm property to-day is worth more than it was five years ago. Farm values have shrunk and are shrinking all the time. Farm property is not selling very briskly. But if every farm in the country would bring ten thousand dollars to-day, and that was practically clear profit to the owner, it would not help matters. Somebody must work these farms or the nation is gone up higher than Gilroy's kite. Hence while the average farmer, if he should sell his farm for ten thousand dollars, would not know how to use it profitably in any other business, the man who would pay him the ten thousand dollars must take his place and struggle along at a losing game.

It is no use to take in general terms about prosperity. So far as the farmer is concerned look at facts and keep looking at them. The statistical report of the Illinois State Board of Agriculture is authority for the statement that the farmers of this state lost about $10,000,000 on the corn crop of last year. The yield was 247,980,589 bushels, which is valued at $58,537,047. Then is made the estimate of the cost of production which is based upon the reports of 1,600 correspondents and which is $9.75 per acre or a total of $68,272,872 for the crop. Seven per cent interest is allowed upon the capital invested in the estimate. Now if this report is correct, here is a hard, stubborn, disagreeable fact that will quickly take the shine off a thousand newspaper glittering generalities. At that rate of loss any one may figure out the coming of hopeless ruin to our agriculture. Can anything be done to stem the tide? Why, certainly. Well, what? Now every reader of this paper will have a remedy. The Rural is giving what it thinks would be remedies in every issue. But why not come together in convention and compare the value of remedies suggested, settle on those most valuable and go ahead unitedly to introduce them? All we need is union of action and not a union of lethargy.

Money for Farmers.

The Western Rural.

Senator Cullom received from Illinois—we believe—a bill providing that the government loan money to farmers at two per cent interest. The senator introduced the bill a short time ago. Of course the idea will strike many people with horror, and learned financiers and statesmen will at once ignore the fact that the government has been loaning money to bankers and railroads, and pronounce the notion idiotic. It is somewhat remarkable, however, that newspapers which would naturally be thought too "conservative" to favor such a bill, are actually supporting it, which at least is evidence of the fact that the condition of our agricultural classes, and its significance to the whole nation, is coming to be understood. The Rural simply takes its well known position, viz: That something must be done, and that something—whatever it may be—will be a very great innovation upon what the most of our people have been accustomed to think is the proper thing for government to do. It may be that the government will yet adopt the policy of loaning money to our farmers, for if it will canvass the situation, it will find that the money leech is doing more to destroy agricultural prosperity than cyclones, blizzards, drouths and floods all put together. This journal favors immediate relief to the farmer, and is not very particular how it comes.

And no suit or other proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover or collect the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed, by sale at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, of the said mortgaged premises, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay and satisfy the amount now due on said mortgage, and the amount so paid for taxes as aforesaid, with interest thereon, and twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the legal costs and disbursements of such foreclosure and sale, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, of said Polk County, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on Friday the eleventh day of April A. Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear, and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $181 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

ROCKSBURY, Feb. 20, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I arrived home at 3:30 o'clock, and to say that I was chilled to the marrow, is not using any too strong language. To face the wind at this time of year, in the dead of night, for a distance of 18 miles, tries the grip we have on life with the best of us. We have called our meeting in School District No. 73, for Monday, the 24th. I have the satisfaction of seeing those who opposed any move most bitterly three years ago, come to the front and earnestly work for the alliance now. I wish that fellow who writes in the Western Rural about the ease and comfortable situation of the farmers now-a-days, would take a spin through this country, going from house to house among the farmers; he would find that if their carpet was anything but a home-made rag carpet, or one made from gunny sacks, it probably was not paid for, and he would find many a farm dwelling with only the bare earth for a floor. With regard to the pianos and organs, he would find it a very easy matter to keep count of them; should he meet with one better than a ten dollar rattletrap, he would find upon close inquiry that it had been a wood shed ornament of some politician's residence before its final removal to do ax-grinding service at the farmer's palace. Yes, he would find plenty of machinery; there is no end to that. But think of the independent and exquisite feeling of satisfaction of the man who rides his mortgaged seeder, drawn by a mortgaged team, scattering the seed-grain-note grain over the mortgaged field. Don't say the simile is overdrawn; our recording offices throughout the whole country prove it is true to the letter.

We are told by some Chicago papers that we must not expect a higher price for our grain; that the world's market establishes the price, and we must abide by it. The farmers of the west are not complaining about the price of our produce at the world's market; we are complaining of the unfair treatment at our home markets; at high freights; at the unjust system of taxation, by which the farmer is made to pay taxes on what he don't own; at the high rate of interest, or rather, at the apparent inefficacy of our present usury laws. We complain, because when we take ten bushels of No. 1 hard wheat, in a good marketable condition to the elevator, they pay us for nine bushels of No. 2, and often succeed it putting it down to No. 3, and we are utterly helpless; we must either take their offer or take our wheat home again. In short, we complain, of the system so generally adopted throughout this country, of making the product of the farm, the results of the labor of the farmer, a free booty. We complain of this system of

SYSTEMATIC HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

I hear some one say: "Your language is a reflection upon yourself!" Well, take your choice; the farmer speaks openly; he cannot blame so ingeniously that his censure will be mistaken for praise; he means every word he says. Friend monopoly approaches with overflowing cordiality and all radiant with smiles, makes his low salutation, speaks sweet, honied words to us, but at last we find his taffy was the cunning of a knave, the venom of a coward; the stiletto has done its deadly work; and though our brains are as obtuse and blunt as a sledge hammer, and though we can't smell "fish" until it is so soft that it has to be handled with a scoop shovel, yet we know pretty nearly as well as our Chicago friend, that "supply governs prices" in a just and fair market, but we also know that our home markets are manipulated and controlled by a lot of gambling villains, without any regard to fairness and justice. Look at the condition of the country at large Every other industry except agriculture is prosperous; making money. Nine-tenths of the farmers in the whole country are losing money so fast that their property is already mortgaged for more than it will bring under the hammer; thousands of them are reduced to utter destitution, dependent upon charity to keep them from starving. What has brought the farmers into this deplorable situation? Had it been a failure of crops, other industries would have suffered in common with agriculture, which is not the case. There is no need of "beating around the bush;" it is confiscation of the farmers' property; it is making him pay so much for everything that he is obliged to buy, so that everybody that sells to him is getting rich, and by some means of combination, controlling the markets, so that he is obliged to sell his produce below the actual cost of production, hence everybody that he sells his produce to is making money. A peculiar position that can exist only until the farm property is all absorbed, which, at the present rate of absorption, will not be many years. We are organizing to do battle against this evil; but if we are continually to be foiled in every effort to obtain justice, we will quit the business. Men will not always labor for only the sweet consolation of knowing that every stroke of work that they do simply sinks them deeper into debt. Probably agriculture is superfluous; that idea seems to be in vogue. Every legislature in the country, including the national, are not only not doing anything to ameliorate the situation, but are actually oppressing the industry.

"Hail! hail! to thee, Marcus Verus, the boy prefect!" Verily this ought to put the old man's thinking cap on. Even the shepherd gets justice, while our worthy Antonines is at the "Latin Games." Our locals are all teeming with live interest; are there no old cronies at home? Hail! hail! hail! for the St. Hilaire starch factory and three rousing cheers for the Farmers' Alliance!

C. A. JOHNSON.

"An Ocular Delusion" is the title of a bright social study in serial shape, which will begin in the New York Ledger of March 1. The story holds the mirror up to club life in the metropolis, and touches lightly but with the masterly and suggestive stroke of the etching hand some of the more distinctive sides of New York society life. Several of the characters are so startlingly typical that they may be taken for any one of scores of the members of the "Four Hundred." The hero is a fine combination of manliness, ready ingenuity and audacity, a youth with a rare amount of phosphorus in his cerebral gray matter and an equally generous amount of red corpuscles in his veins—a character which the author has elaborated with sympathetic interest, and which, according to the impression given by the advance sheets, represents an oarsman of a recent crew of a leading American college. The author, by the way, is that brilliant young newspaper worker Frank Howard Howe, son of the late postmaster-general, Timothy F. Howe of Wisconsin.

Shall we Join Hands.

The Western Rural.

The Rural is in receipt of a number of letters from different parts of the country favoring a convention in Chicago this Winter of delegates from the various farmers organization, with the object of uniting them all in a federation. It is inexplicable that farmers with a knowledge of their absolute power to control political matters, should have been so slow to organize. As a rule men rather like to "boss" things. Show the slightest chance of getting on top and they will take advantage of it without delay. But farmers have been an exception. Numerically strong enough to dictate to the government and even in commercial matters; numerically strong enough to protect their rights and strong enough to prevent every wrong from which they now suffer, they have persistently neglected to exert that strength or to put it into available form. A large portion of them have done nothing. This class to-day is complaining bitterly of a condition of things that would have been utterly impossible, if they had united with their fellow farmers in a common defense. If that had been done the senate of the United States would not to-day be composed of the tools of monopoly; the railroad monopoly would not now be living sumptuously upon a people that in the midst of plenty do not know how to get hold of enough money to pay their debts; the country would not be covered a foot thick with fraudulent watered stock which our industries must support; our public lands would not been given away to every rich begger who asked for them; the Pacific railroads would not be doing business for private gain upon the people's money; the national banks would not be doing a thriving business upon the public credit and getting pay for accepting the credit; the markets would not be flooded with villainous adulterations of food products and trusts and combines and class legislation would never have existed. Unite the farmers and all these things would be an impossibility,

But when we have organized we have done it in the least effectual way. From one cause or another we have unfurled different banners and got under them. The Grange has got some, the Alliance has some, the Wheel secured others, the Farmers Benefit Society enlisted others, the Patrons of Industry has its division. What does each know about the other? May we not ask; What has each cared about the other? Each has drawn itself up in battle array, without any well regulated support from the other. There is no objection to these separate organizations maintaining their individuality. Indeed in some respects there are good reasons why they should. But they should be united by some sort of a compact. Something should be done by which these various bodies, aiming at the accomplishment of the very same purpose, should move together and upon the same line. A brigade that does not come into action just at the moment when another brigade must have support or suffer complete or partial defeat might as well never have been recruited so far as that emergency is concerned.

We repeat what we have said before, that we should like to see a convention in this city of these various organizations. Let us come together and see if we agree in regard to our needs, discussing some of those questions on which we seem to differ, from the standpoint of the producer. Let us see if we can agree upon the remedy, and coming to a full understanding as to our needs and action, let us combine our strength and secure what is waiting for us if we will reach for it intelligently.

Farm Mortgages.

The Western Rural.

People who have a real interest in the farming community have been in hopes that this present census would show the value of farm mortgages, but it seems that they are doomed to disappointment. There has been much guess work in regard to this class of mortgages. The Rural believes that the amount of such mortgages, if once ascertained, would astonish the American people. It believes that the amount ought to be ascertained, not only because it would greatly aid the movement for legislation to prevent double taxation, but because it would put the condition of the farming classes more intelligently before the people. This government will be compelled to make a new and radical departure in regard to the treatment of agriculture. It must save our agriculture from ruin. Perhaps when it repeals all class legislation, and gives the farmers a fair chance, nothing more will be needed to be done. But if that is not sufficient, government must do more. The most important duty that our government has to do is to preserve the republic. To do that it must encourage general prosperity, and it certainly must encourage the prosperity of our fundamental industry. Now the reader can finish this article in his own thoughts. We simply start out with the proposition that this government must protect agriculture, whatever may require to do it.

Failures of Farmers.

Farm Stock and Home.

There is much fallacy in the assertion that "farmers seldom or never fail," in the sense that business men fail. The assertion is born of the fact that no record is kept of farmer failures, as there is of the failures of every business man, no matter how small or insignificant. If the failures of farmers were regarded the same as failures of merchants, the record of the former would be something appalling. If a merchant fails to make money cannot pay his debts at maturity, allows his notes to go to protest, he is a bankrupt, and is so proclaimed in all commercial reports. He "fixes up," perhaps; settles for twenty-five or fifty cents on a dollar, and resumes business, probably in better shape and worth more clear money than when he failed. If the farmer fails to make money the fact is regarded as a matter of course, and not a cause for bankruptcy; if he can't pay his debts at maturity they are allowed to run along until debt and interest amount to as much as his property will sell for, when he is "closed out," and goes into the world homeless and penniless. No one thinks of compromising his debts at twenty-five to fifty cents on a dollar, possibly leaving him better off than before. He has given up everything and must start life anew under the most unfavorable and depressing condition. But the farmer has not "failed," and writers continue to discant on farming as being the "best business in the world," because the records show that there are "fewer failures in it than in any other business." The records show nothing, because no records are made of farmers' failures. That farmers do fail, and with melancholy and deplorable results, is true. That the cause of failure often rests within themselves is also true; but it is also true that failures result from causes beyond human control, and from other causes that humanity and wisdom might destroy. But these points we will not discuss; the object of this is to simply protest against the claim that "farmers don't fail," and that, therefore, "farming is the best and safest business in the world."

Do Hogs Pay?

Iowa State Register: When the price of pork is as low as at the present many farmers get the idea that raising hogs does not pay. Let us look at this question and ascertain, if we can, whether anything on the farm pays better. One acre of clover and one acre of corn (50 bushels) will produce 800 pounds of pork. This, at $3 per hundred, which is low enough, is $24. Suppose you say the pigs and the care of them for eight months, when they ought to be ready for market, is worth $8, leaving $16 for the use of two acres of ground. But you say there is danger of cholera and other diseases with hogs. That is true. But the mortality among hogs for the past twenty years does not exceed ten per cent. But say it is double that, or twenty per cent. This on $24 would be $5 00—leaving $18.20. Deduct from this the $3 for pigs and their care, leaves $10.20 for two acres or $5.10 per acre rent. If a man has fifty acres of corn and hogs enough to eat it, and ten of clover, making sixty acres, he will have a clear profit for the use of the land of $357.

Polk County has now 18 sub-alliances and the county alliance, and yet the good work is not all complete, nor will it be until every farmer in the county has joined. Every member should be a committee of one to induce all to join in the good work until all are safely on board. Then when a bill of importance to us is before Congress we could all unitedly work for its passage. In this way something could be accomplished.

Don't forget to attend the institute on Wednesday, March 12th.

Some more wheat weather—according to friend Donaldson.

Hallock has as fine a city hall as any city of its size in the Northwest—nicer than some. No wonder our sister city takes pride in herself. She has a right to.

The farmers of Polk County are organizing in defense of their rights and to obtain a free and open wheat market. If they are true to their own interests they will get what they seek.

G. C. Holden was down from Warren two days last week visiting friends in the city. Said as Guy Aubol had been down the week previous taking a breath of fresh air, he thought he was entitled to a like privilege. The boys are doing a good business up there.

Capt. Donaldson says the cold weather we have had for a few weeks will prove the salvation of the wheat crop, and if we could only have the same until April first we might expect a booming old crop. He thinks that squaw winters result in a great deal of misery in the wheat bin.

In the list of pupils in attendance at the normal school in Moorhead, as published in the Moorhead News, we note the following from Polk County: Martha and Minnie Cruikshanks, Buffington; Annie Hancock, Euclid; Cora B. Sankey, Edna; Andrew and Julia Trovatton, Winger, and Emma J. Woodall, Euclid.

Mr. Dickmann is register of the U. S. land office at Crookston.

Money to loan in large or small sums on good farms. Choice farms and city property for sale. CHAS. M. LOWE, [17-tf] Broadway, Crookston.

While we are looking about for a place to invest a little surplus enterprise why would it not be a good plan to send a committee to St. Paul to interview the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad authorities to ascertain what are the prospects for that road building in here? Several villages in this upper country have done this very thing, and why should Crookston be backward? We have never had under consideration a project of greater value to us and it is certainly worth a vigorous effort, if necessary to obtain.

Elsewhere in this issue will be seen a letter from Hon. Gilbert A. Pierce, U. S. Senator from North Dakota, which we commend to the alliances of the county as a proper subject for action. His bill provides for the creation of a committee of investigation into the causes of the present depression of agriculture, so that the cause being known a remedy may be applied. Every alliance should send in a petition for the passage of the bill.

Evaporated peaches, apricots, raspberries, blackberries, silver prunes, California prunes, prunes and fine raisins in large variety, just received at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

Mr. Robert Farweather, of Euclid, informs THE JOURNAL that his son-in-law, who is at present in the old country, has been offered and accepted the situation of general superintendent of the new linen factory at Hastings and will soon come over to America to enter upon his new duties. Mr. F. received a cablegram from him, from Belfast on the 26th announcing the fact of his acceptance of the offer and replied to it by cablegram on the 27th. It seems rather funny to us up here in the Northwest, the idea of sending a message over the pond to absent friends but that's just what we can do—if we have money enough.

S. L. Dobson starts shortly for Helena, Butte and other western cities where he is building up a large trade in oat meal. We are pleased to note that his trade has grown so extensive that he has been obliged to increase the capacity of his mill by the addition of more machinery, by which he can grind 800 bushels of oats in a day of 24 hours. If his trade increases by next fall he will be able to market all the oat meal he can produce which will furnish a good market for oats for our farmers. Mr. Dobson is fully deserving of unlimited success. In a quiet and unostentatious manner he has put in an institution that will be of immense practical benefit to our farmers and to our city and we are more than pleased to see the success he is already meeting with. He manufactures a superior quality of oat meal which is rapidly acquiring for him the trade of the Northwest.

Among the institutions which Polk County has to furnish a good market, the leading one is the oat meal factory. With its increased facilities for grinding it can furnish a market for over 200,000 bushels of oats a year, which is a big thing if our farmers will avail themselves of it. The only requirement is that the oats must be white oats and should weigh 35 pounds to the bushel. We think it quite improbable that the oats of last year's raising will be fit for use for seed this, and that to raise oats that will be available, farmers should get the seed below. Oats down there can be had for 19 cents per bushel, and if the railroad companies will give us half rates we can get them delivered here for from 25 to 26 cents. From all that we are able to learn of the condition of the oats raised here but a very small percentage, if any, will be available for seed, and this becomes a question of great importance to farmers.

This country stands in great need of seed oats, and owing to the fact that our crop was blighted, it will not do to use what we raised. The railroads claim to be philanthropic upon occasions and have been very good in times of dire distress in the past. Now let them come to the front and offer us a half rate on our oats shipped in for seed, and they will prove their sympathy by their works.

Since the above was in type Maj. Mix informs us that the Great Northern will give an half fare rate to farmers who desire to ship in oats for seed. These rates will commence on March 20th and continue till May 31st. You can ship in any quantity desired from a hundred bushels to a carload or more.

Of the new musical comedy, "A Base Hit," which is to be produced at the Opera House, in this city, on March 13th, the Ashland (Wis.) Press has this to say:

"It is really a pleasure to attend such entertainments as that given by the 'Base Hit' Company last night, at the Ashland Theatre. The object of the players and the play was to produce laughter, and the success of the undertaking was unmistakably evidenced by the general mirth. At first only a smile was produced when Willard Simms, in the realistic impersonation of Pat McGuire, made his comical entrance upon the stage. There was a general ripple of simpering before he had been there many moments, which was developed into a perfect uproar as the play proceeded. Willard Simms is undoubtedly one of the best comedians who has ever delighted an Ashland audience. The dancing, singing, etc., were very entertaining. The play is an extremely funny burlesque on base ball and we prophecy for the management a 'clean score' with no errors, and can safely guarantee that they will not be compelled to make a 'home run' before the close of the season."

A Potato Starch Factory.

A practical plan for the establishment of a potato starch factory is being discussed and will probably be attempted. The plan is to form a company, issue 400 shares of stock at $25 a share, sell as many as possible to the farmers, thus making them interested in the plan, which would insure the raising of a sufficient quantity of potatoes to supply the factory. A farmer could take as many shares as he wished, give his note, and in the fall pay in potatoes. On the notes the money to build the factory could be obtained, and the business ready for operation by fall. With a good market for potatoes, a good market for oats and justice in the wheat market, the farmers could live and business of all kinds would feel the effects of it. We would like to see the new venture succeed

Hallock Alliance, No. 720.

On Thursday morning we took the 6:30 train for Hallock, where we arrived in due process of time, about 12 o'clock, and were met by Bro. Love, of the Enterprise, who took us over to his office where he showed us the stacks of job work he is doing, then to his cozy and nice little residence where he introduced us to as slick a dinner as a newspaper man often encounters in this vale of tears. After dinner we proceeded over to the city hall, where we found a large crowd of farmers ready to organize an alliance. After the preliminary ceremonies a permanent organization was effected and the enrolling of names commenced. By this time we were warned by the reckless manner in which tempus fugits that we must fly if we would reach our train, so we flew, satisfied that the work is in good hands up there, and that much good must necessarily follow.

THE FARMERS' MEETING.

The meeting of the Farmers' Alliance which takes place in St. Paul this week, is one of the most important to the interests of agriculture in our state that ever occurred, and if properly managed, it will prove a great blessing. If the farmers can control its deliberations and actions in their own interests, it will be all right, but if it is to be run in the interests of political aspirants for future honors, it will be more than time wasted. The situation that confronts the agricultural interests of the state to-day is a serious one, and the same interests throughout the United States are more or less affected by it, and it requires the combined wisdom of our farmers, acting for their own interests solely, to solve the problem. No other consideration should be entertained, and we believe no other will be if the delegations from every county are composed of the same kind of material as are those from Polk County. They have been chosen for no other reason than that of their fitness for the business, with no political axes to grind and no political irons in the fire. If the convention is composed of that kind of material throughout, great good must result from their deliberations. We sincerely hope this is the case, as the needs of the hour urgently demand redress if the agricultural interests of the state are to be prosperous in the future. Our greatest need here is for a free wheat market, and that right away. What good is it to raise a splendid crop of wheat if when you come to market it you can get at best but the bare cost of production? The system is such that the elevator system absolutely controls the market, and the cause seems to be found in the contract between the railroads and the elevator system, which practically bars out independent buyers. This might be removed by the railroad companies themselves, and if they will not do it then we should demand of Congress the passage of the bill providing for the building of government elevators, now pending, which would no doubt accomplish the relief we seek.

ERSKINE P. O., March 3d, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: The Scandia Farmers' Alliance, No. 648, of the town of Knute, held a meeting last Saturday, 10 new members joining, so we have to report 40 members in all. POLK COUNTY ALLIANCE.

The meeting called to consider the question of organizing a County Alliance convened at 2 p. m. in City Hall, on Saturday. Andrew Steenerson was elected temporary chairman and E. D. Childs, secretary. On motion, the chair appointed C. A. Johnson, of Agawam alliance, Tom Sundely, of Sand Hill alliance, and John Urness, of Russia and Onstad alliance, as a committee on credentials. A recess was taken to allow the committee on credentials time to report. A motion to allow any member of any alliance unrepresented by delegates a vote in the proceedings, was amended to allow such person to cast the ballot of his alliance. At a meeting held by the Agawam Alliance, of Rocksbury, Polk County, Minn., on the 24th day of February, 1890, the following officers were elected: J. O. Dypvic, president; Lyman Clark, vice-president; C. A. Johnson, secretary; Iver Peterson, treasurer. Committee on finance, M. Rockstad, W. P. Bekken, Geo. Turnell. Delegate to State Alliance, J. O. Dypvic; alternate, L. Clark. Delegates to County Alliance, C. A. Johnson, Geo. Turnell and W. P. Bekken. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we denounce the present system of taxation, it being unjust.

Resolved, That we demand that railroads and telegraphs be controlled by the government, instead of the present system.

Resolved, That our State Alliance make an imperative demand upon the state to remedy the present outrageously unjust system of grading and dockage practiced by our elevator companies, before another crop is ready for the market.

Resolved, That the millers one-eighth is capable of indefinite expansion, having already appropriated the whole grist, including sacks, and are now laying claim to the team and driver.

Resolved, That the usury law is utterly inefficient, and that the money in circulation is inadequate to the demand.

Resolved, That we recommend the appointment of a County Protective Committee, to be appointed by the County Alliance.

C. A. JOHNSON, Sec.

The Farmers' Institute.

The Farmers' Institute next Wednesday, conducted by Prof. O. C. Gregg will be a meeting of more than ordinary interest to the farmers of this county as it will afford an opportunity to test their seed wheat and ascertain what is fit for seed and what is not. We are told that the railroad company will give reduced rates for this meeting. Those along the Fosston branch can take the Tuesday train; along the St. Hilaire branch it will not be quite so handy but we presume that parties who come via that road will have an opportunity to have their samples tested after the arrival of that train, though it would be better if they could be in attendance all day. Every farmer who feels interested in the success of his business will have a good opportunity to get valuable pointers and he will avail himself of it.

Somebody sent us a copy of the Advocate, published at Topeka, Kansas, in the interests of the Kansas Farmers' Alliance. The Advocate is a rattling good paper, bristling with good points for the cause in any state. We can recommend it to all who wish to keep fully posted on alliance work. It is worth a hundred times its cost—$1 per year, and should be in every sub-alliance in the county.

For some reason or other some papers are trying to create the impression that an irrepressible conflict is breeding between the business men and the farmers of the Northwest. This is entirely an erroneous idea, and there can be no other reason for its circulation than an effort to injure the alliance. The object of the alliance is a good one and their cause is just, and their efforts to obtain their rights in the market should be earnestly supplemented by an association of business men, formed to back up the alliance in its efforts to obtain a free and open market, wherein there is competition. If the farmer can obtain what his produce will bring him in such a market he can have the wherewithal to pay the merchant, and to pay him in cash. The merchant could then make far better terms and more money than most of them are doing to-day. The interests of our farmers and business men in this country are mutual, and one should be, and is, as anxious to see a free and open market for wheat as the other, and all who try to give a different construction of it are either wofully ignorant of the situation or have some scheme to promote by misrepresenting the facts.

It is singular how hard it is for some to disabuse their minds of the idea that the farmers' alliance is in any sense a political organization, and to get over the old underground railroad style of political wire-working in their methods. There can be none of this sort of thing tolerated if the alliance expects to accomplish the good work before it. Bossism must be emphatically relegated to the shades, and every member of the alliance must be a free and independent worker. When you see any one in your midst who is so terribly anxious to carry his own point—whatever that point may be—that he is not willing to submit the question to the alliance, but must needs try to pack the convention and carry his point at all hazards, it would be better to jump right onto his neck and squelch him out at once. In this organization every man should have a mind of his own and a chance to express it, and as long as we belong to the alliance we shall fight for this point, because we believe it to be absolutely essential to the very life of the order. Of coure we all have our preferences and a perfect right to express them, but no one has any right to assume the position of dictator general, because there is no such office in this alliance. If anybody has any political schemes he wishes to carry through by means of the alliance, he had better drop the idea at once, for the alliance cannot wash his soiled linen and accomplish the high object for which the alliance is formed. The alliance is not a horse, saddled and bridled, ready for some political mountebank to ride into power, and if you make it that you kill it.

Replying to Bro. Lamphere, of the Moorhead News in the alliance matter we would say that he seems to be totally in the dark regarding the alliance movement. With Polk County farmers it is a business movement, purely and simply and with no reference to politics whatever. That pothouse politicians should mis-apprehend the movement and fear least they lose the influence they have always used simply and solely to secure the loaves and the fishes, and kick does not surprise us in the least—and they are doing some vigorous kicking, but that a man like Brother L. should so misunderstand the matter is, we confess, a matter of great surprise to us. Business men in every avocation may form their alliances or organizations and not a ripple disturbs the fair bosom of the political lake, but once let the farmer attempt to form an association by which he hopes to benefit the agricultural interests of the state, and secure a free and open market for his produce and what a howl is there, my countrymen! What is the matter with the farmer? Is it possible that when he forms an alliance that he is liable to lose his usefulness to bread and butter politicians, whose only visible means of support lies in doing the dirty work for the monopolists who are sapping his life blood? If so, they can not unite too quick so that they can take a hand in the game. Mr. Allison has been attacked with more venom than even he would be entitled to even if he was the drunken creature his maligners say he is, and we must look for the reason elsewhere than what they care a continental about his character. He is urging farmers to unite in a grand work and if his advice is good why should they not take it? Are they not as a class intelligent enough to understand the differences between good and bad advice? We think that they are, we know that they are and the day that they will be ruled by those who act in the interests of monopolists is drawing to a close. Bro. L. would like to know "what assurance can be given that the newer alliance officials will prove any better than the older ones?" What assurance? And to whom, please? We had not heard that the farmers had had a guardian appointed to whom they are obliged to submit their actions for approval, and even supposing that the alliance movement was wholly a political movement have not the farmers a perfect right to engage in it if they like? We would like to have somebody tell us if they can why the men who raise the bread to feed politicians and furnish the majority of votes to make them may not engage in politics in this free country if they like without such a terrible dust being kicked up about it! A dust that can only have but one effect and that is to blind the eyes of the people to the real facts at issue. We have all tried to do business in this country upon a plan that gives the lion's share of the profits to everybody but the man who produces the wheat and this is wrong—a wrong to the business men of this country. Instead of trying to check them in their efforts to obtain justice, the business men should supplement their efforts by associations to back them up, to aid and strengthen them because the interests of every legitimate business is mutual with the farmer upon whom they depend for the business. If the farmer can get but the bare cost of production from his produce how can business thrive? The business men of Crookston understand this and have tendered the free use of the city hall for the use of the alliance. This is as it should be and they will lose nothing by it. The farmer feels his need of the hearty co-operation of all interested in his welfare and progress and he is not a chump who will soon forget his friends. Upon the other hand neither will he forget those who in any manner attempt to hinder his efforts to secure his rights, or to betray him into the hands of his enemies. We believe that Bro. L. is in full sympathy with any movement calculated to subserve the true interests of this country but we believe he is wholly mistaken in his views upon the objects of the farmers' alliance.

Solid For The People.

In a private letter from Senator C. K Davis to the editor of THE JOURNAL, he says: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your esteemed favor of the 20th inst. touching upon the project of an agricultural commission and the appointment of an Alliance man as one of its members. The plan, as you prudently remark, will depend for its efficiency upon the character and quality of the Commissioners, and your recomdation will induce me to give the subject of the bill and its administration, the most careful consideration.

Very truly yours

C. K. DAVIS.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 12, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: If my bill ever becomes a law, I shall be very glad, indeed, to aid some intelligent farmer in the Red River Valley to become a member of the commission. I am very much obliged to you for the interest you take in the proposed measure, and am particularly gratified at the articles appearing in THE JOURNAL, which I have had the pleasure of reading. There is going to be some opposition to the bill, growing out of the feeling on the part of some of the chairmen of certain committees that the investigation proposed would abbreviate somewhat their own range of authority and duties. To overcome this opposition it is necessary that the farmers bestir themselves and pile in the petitions upon Congress insisting upon the passage of the bill. For myself, I feel that the farmers of the country, after all these years, are entitled to have a commission largely composed of their own members, who shall make an investigation for themselves, take evidence, decide, if they can, what occasions the depression which marks the agricultural interest and suggest a remedy for the same. I shall do all that is possible, personally, to accomplish the purposes of the bill and to secure its passage, and I hope that newspapers like your own will take up the matter and show the farmers the necessity of action if they would secure this recognition. Again thanking you,

I am very truly yours,

GILBERT A. PIERCE.

Comstock For The People,

HOUSE REPRESENTATIVES U. S.
WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb. 24, 1890.

FRIEND COOKE:—I have your letter of the 20th inst. in relation to the tariff, and suggesting the appointment of a good alliance man as a member of the Agricultural Commission provided for in Senator Pierce's bill.

If that bill passes I shall do what I can to carry out the wishes of the Farmers Alliance in the matter.

With reference to tariff matters, I have been in the Ways and Means Committee room occasionally, and have talked with the members. I think the committee will present a bill satisfactory to our people, or nearly so. Of course, it will not go to the length that some of our friends desire, but it will give a very substantial reduction in the tariff on many articles. I expect to see a reduction of the tariff on twine, or the materials of which it is made, and a large reduction in the tariff on sugar. I believe there will be a reduction of the revenues of the government to its reasonable expenditures. The committee is working earnestly on the bill and is making good progress. I have no doubt of the intention of the party to carry out its pledges which it made the country in the last campaign. Those who constantly assert that I am an extremist on the tariff question, know nothing about it, for I am not such, and believe that a revision is needed not for party purposes alone but for the interests of the country. A protection tariff is an adjustable thing which should be changed as often as necessary to meet the exigencies which are constantly arising. I believe in carrying out our promises to the country, and shall do all I can to that end.

Yours truly,

S. G. COMSTOCK.

FERTILE, Minn., Feb. 24, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: Saturday, the 22d of February, Garfield Alliance held their third meeting, 14 new members joining. We now number 25, which is very small for this township, in comparison with other towns in the county. T. H. Nesseth was elected delegate and H. A. Gullekson, alternate to state convention. The grain inspection law was discussed and the general opinion was that it is not in practice at local elevators; the farmer's coat, in a great many cases, seems to be the cereal inspected by some buyers. A resolution was passed by the alliance as follows: "That we who have to sell to local elevators are not benefitted by the grain inspection law, but we are not in favor of repealing the law, but demand of our next legislature to amend the law so as to have more effect at country elevators." If every man or corporation of farmers could build elevators or warehouses along the several railroads in this state where they could handle and ship their own grain, I think there would be much gained; but as it is now, the railroad companies will not permit any one to build elevators but themselves, and this is more than we should stand. A corporation of farmers, with their hard earned money, should have the same rights as a corporation of millionaires with their ill gotten gains. The elevator company and the railroad company are for the most part the same thing. Now, brother farmers, come and join us and let us see by joining together and pulling one way, all of us, we can better our condition. If the present condition of things shall continue much longer, we might just as well give up now, because we work only to make the millionaire's grip on us so much the tighter.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

Somebody sent us a copy of the Advocate, published at Topeka, Kansas, in the interests of the Kansas Farmers' Alliance. The Advocate is a rattling good paper, bristling with good points for the cause in any state. We can recommend it to all who wish to keep fully posted on alliance work. It is worth a hundred times its cost—$1 per year, and should be in every sub-alliance in the county.

For some reason or other some papers are trying to create the impression that an irrepressible conflict is brooding between the business men and the farmers of the Northwest. This is entirely an erroneous idea, and there can be no other reason for its circulation than an effort to injure the alliance. The object of the alliance is a good one and their cause is just, and their efforts to obtain their rights in the market should be earnestly supplemented by an association of business men, formed to back up the alliance in its efforts to obtain a free and open market, wherein there is competition. If the farmer can obtain what his produce will bring him in such a market he can have the wherewithal to pay the merchant, and to pay him in cash. The merchant could then make far better terms and more money than most of them are doing to-day. The interests of our farmers and business men in this country are mutual, and one should be, and is, as anxious to see a free and open market for wheat as the other, and all who try to give a different construction of it are either wofully ignorant of the situation or have some scheme to promote by misrepresenting the facts.

It is singular how hard it is for some to disabuse their minds of the idea that the farmers' alliance is in any sense a political organization, and to get over the old underground railroad style of political wire-working in their methods. There can be none of this sort of thing tolerated if the alliance expects to accomplish the good work before it. Bossism must be emphatically relegated to the shades, and every member of the alliance must be a free and independent worker. When you see any one in your midst who is so terribly anxious to carry his own point—whatever that point may be—that he is not willing to submit the question to the alliance, but must needs try to pack the convention and carry his point at all hazards, it would be better to jump right onto his neck and squelch him out at once. In this organization every man should have a mind of his own and a chance to express it, and as long as we belong to the alliance we shall fight for this point, because we believe it to be absolutely essential to the very life of the order. Of course we all have our preferences, and a perfect right to express them, but no one has any right to assume the position of dictator general, because there is no such office in this alliance. If anybody has any political schemes he wishes to carry through by means of the alliance, he had better drop the idea at once, for the alliance cannot wash his soiled linen and accomplish the high object for which the alliance is formed. The alliance is not a horse, saddled and bridled, ready for some political mountebank to ride into power, and if you make it that you kill it.

Replying to Bro. Lamphere of the Moorhead News in the alliance matter we would say that he seems to be totally in the dark regarding the alliance movement. With Polk County [illegible]

[illegible] farmers it is a business movement, purely and simply and with no reference to politics whatever. That pot-house politicians should mis-apprehend the movement and fear least they lose the influence they have always used simply and solely to secure the loaves and the fishes, and kick, does not surprise us in the least—and they are doing some vigorous kicking, but that a man like Brother L. should so misunderstand the matter is, we confess, a matter of great surprise to us. Business men in every avocation may form their alliances or organizations and not a ripple disturbs the fair bosom of the political lake, but once let the farmer attempt to form an association by which he hopes to benefit the agricultural interests of the state, and secure a free and open market for his produce and what a howl is there, my countrymen! What is the matter with the farmer? Is it possible that when he forms an alliance that he is liable to lose his usefulness to bread and butter politicians, whose only visible means of support lies in doing the dirty work for the monopolists who are sapping his life blood? If so they can not unite too quick so that they can take a hand in the game. Mr. Allison has been attacked with more venom than even he would be entitled to, even if he was the drunken creature his maligners say he is, and we must look for the reason elsewhere than what they care a continental about his character. He is urging farmers to unite in a grand work and if his advice is good why should they not take it? Are they not as a class intelligent enough to understand the differences between good and bad advice? We think that they are, we know that they are and the day that they will be ruled by those who act in the interests of monopolists is drawing to a close. Bro. L. would like to know "what assurance can be given that the newer alliance officials will prove any better than the older ones?" What assurance? And, to whom, please? We had not heard that the farmers had had a guardian appointed to whom they are obliged to submit their actions for approval, and even supposing that the alliance movement was wholly a political movement have not the farmers a perfect right to engage in it if they like? We would like to have somebody tell us if they can why the men who raise the bread to feed politicians and furnish the majority of votes to make them may not engage in politics in this free country if they like without such a terrible dust being kicked up about it? A dust that can only have but one effect, and that is to blind the eyes of the people to the real facts at issue. We have all tried to do business in this country upon a plan that gives the lion's share of the profits to everybody but the man who produces the wheat and this is wrong—a wrong to the business men of this country. Instead of trying to check them in their efforts to obtain justice, the business men should supplement their efforts by associations to back them up, to aid and strengthen them, because the interests of every legitimate business is mutual with the farmer upon whom they depend for their business. If the farmer can get but the bare cost of production from his produce [illegible] Crookston [illegible] tendered the [illegible] of the city hall for the use of the alliance [illegible] a chump who will soon forget his friends. Upon the other hand neither will he forget those who in any manner attempt to hinder his efforts to secure his rights, or to betray him into the hands of his enemies. We believe that Bro. L. is in full sympathy with any movement calculated to subserve the true interests of this country but we believe he is wholly mistaken in his views upon the objects of the farmers' alliance.

Solid For The People.

In a private letter from Senator C. K. Davis to the editor of THE JOURNAL, he says, "I have to acknowledge the receipt of your esteemed favor of the 20th inst. touching upon the project of an agricultural commission and the appointment of an Alliance man as one of its members. The plan, as you prudently remark, will depend for its efficiency upon the character and quality of the Commissioners, and your recommendation will induce me to give the subject of the bill and its administration the most careful consideration.

Very truly yours,
C. K. DAVIS.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 12, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: If my bill ever becomes a law, I shall be very glad, indeed, to aid some intelligent farmer in the Red River Valley to become a member of the commission. I am very much obliged to you for the interest you take in the proposed measure, and am particularly gratified at the articles appearing in THE JOURNAL which I have had the pleasure of reading. There is going to be some opposition to the bill, growing out of the feeling on the part of some of the chairmen of certain committees that the investigation proposed would abbreviate somewhat their own range of authority and duties. To overcome this opposition it is necessary that the farmers bestir themselves and pile in the petitions upon Congress insisting upon the passage of the bill. For myself, I feel that the farmers of the country, after all these years, are entitled to have a commission largely composed of their own members, who shall make an investigation for themselves, take evidence, decide, if they can, what occasions the depression which marks the agricultural interest and suggest a remedy for the same. I shall do all that is possible, personally, to accomplish the purposes of the bill and to secure its passage, and I hope that newspapers like your own will take up the matter and show the farmers the necessity of action, if they would secure this recognition. Again thanking you, I am very truly yours,
GILBERT A. PIERCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb. 24, 1890.

FRIEND COOKE:—I have your letter of the 20th inst. in relation to the tariff, and suggesting the appointment of a good alliance man as a member of the Agricultural Commission provided for in Senator Pierce's bill.

If that bill passes I shall do what I can to carry out the wishes of the Farmers Alliance in the matter.

With reference to tariff matters, I have been in the Ways and Means Committee room occasionally and have talked with the members. I think the committee will present a bill satisfactory to our people, or nearly so. Of course it will not go to the length that some of our friends desire, but it will give a very substantial reduction in the tariff on many articles. I expect to see a reduction of the tariff on twine or the material of which it is made, and a large reduction in the tariff on sugar. I believe there will be a reduction of the revenue of the government to its reasonable expenditures. The committee is working earnestly on the bill and is making good progress. I have no doubt of the intention of the party to carry out its pledges which it made the country in the last campaign. Those who constantly assert that I am an extremist on the tariff question, know nothing about it, for I am not such, and believe that a revision is needed not for party purposes alone but for the interests of the country. A protection tariff is an adjustable thing, which should be changed as often as necessary to meet the exigencies which are constantly arising. I believe in carrying out our promises to the country, and shall do all I can to that end.

Yours truly,
S. G. COMSTOCK.

FERTILE, Minn., Feb. 24, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL:—Saturday, the 22d of February, Garfield Alliance held their third meeting, 14 new members joining. We now number 25, which is very small for this township, in comparison with other towns in the county. T. H. Nesseth was elected delegate and H. A. Gullekson, alternate to state convention. The grain inspection law was discussed, and the general opinion was that it is not in practice at local elevators; the farmer's coat, in a great many cases, seems to be the cereal inspected by some buyers. A resolution was passed by the alliance as follows: "That we who have to sell to local elevators are not benefitted by the grain inspection law, but we are not in favor of repealing the law, but demand of our next legislature to amend the law so as to have more effect at country elevators." If every man or corporation of farmers could build elevators or warehouses along the several railroads in this state where they could handle and ship their own grain, I think there would be much gained; but as it is now, the railroad companies will not permit any one to build elevators but themselves, and this is more than we should stand. A corporation of farmers, with their hard earned money, should have the same rights as a corporation of millionaires with their ill gotten gains. The elevator company and the railroad company are for the most part the same thing. Now, brother farmers, come and join us and let us see by joining together and pulling one way, all of us, we can better our condition. If the present condition of things shall continue much longer, we might just as well give up now, because we work only to make the millionaire's grip on us so much the tighter.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., MARCH 6, 1890.

Give the Farmer a Chance.

Minneapolis Journal.

The decidedly meager advantages accruing to the farmers of this country through the present tariff, have been alluded to by The Journal. Very plausible sophistries have been spoken and written on this subject, but the fact remains as deeply rooted as a verity of geometry. And it is a fact that tariff revision has become an absolute necessity, for the present inharmonious, patchwork tariff policy will not do. Some industries are over-protected, some have inadequate protection; some articles ought to be on the free list, which it was perfectly proper to make dutiable two decades ago.

The farmers' products have had to take their chances. And protection is, from time to time, increased on manufactured products without diffusing the advantage so as to include the farmer. The placing of jute, sisal and manilla on the free list, is advocated in the present congress to help out the consumers of the manufactures of these and like materials, and rightly enough, perhaps This does not hurt the farmer. But the proposition to place flax on the free list does.

And here is a chance for the manufacturers who have been strengthened by protective duties through the aid of the farmer, to do the latter a good turn. The manufacture of linen and toweling and twine from flax fibre is in its infancy in this country. That industry is just the kind which can be legitimately assisted by protective duties Our Northwest is a superb flax-growing country. It furnishes about a third of the flax seed of the country. The most remunerative part of the flax-growing business is, however, neglected. The straw needs to be thoroughly utilized for the fiber. There are only two or three linen mills in this country. There are a few flax cordage factories. In the west a few flax tow mills.

What we want to do is make our own linen and cordage and twine from flax. We can grow all the flax we need. Why import it? Why not encourage our farmers to grow flax for the straw as well as for the seed? Why not give them this substantial benefit from the protective principle? If a protective tariff is good for anybody it is for them, too.

Northwestern Agriculturist: To best develop choice grade Friesian heifers in the line of butter and milk, they should be kept in thrifty, growing condition on good clover hay if it can be had, or corn fodder, wild hay or silage, with a fair ration of oats or bran. Fattening grain, like corn or barley, should be avoided. The muscles should be developed and food enough given to keep the animal growing symmetrically without forcing. Size is not essential but care should be taken, especially the first year, not to allow a lack of good food to check a healthy growth. With such food and careful handling, the heifers will reach their normal development and become as good cows as they are capable of making. Heifers intended for the dairy should be handled and curried a great deal, and a friendly feeling established between them and their owners. One peculiarity of the imported Friesian cows is their gentle disposition. They evidently regard all mankind, men, women and children, as their friends, and are easily approached and seldom have vicious habits.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of seventy and 97-100 dollars, ($70.97) which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John Proulx, (unmarried) to The Loan and Guarantee Company, of Connecticut, bearing date the first day of October, A. D. 1888, with a power of sale therein contained, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 26th day of October, A. D. 1888, at 11 o'clock a. m., in book 35 of mortgages, on page 335 etc.

And, whereas, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has elected, and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and, whereas, there is actually due and payable thereunder, at the date hereof, the sum of seven hundred and twenty and 97-100 dollars ($720.97); and, whereas, said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz: The east half of the southwest quarter (e½ of sw¼) of Section ten (10), and the east half of the northwest quarter (e½ of nw¼) of Section fifteen (15) all in town one hundred and fifty (150) of Range forty-two (42) west, in Polk County, and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances will be sold at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes (if any) on said premises, and fifty (50) dollars attorney's fee, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 19th day of April, A. THE LOAN AND GUARANTEE COMPANY, of Connecticut, Mortgagee.

A. HUMPHREYS, Attorney of Mortgagee. [42-48]

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered In the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $181.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the 'Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

OVERPRODUCTION.

The Law of Supply and Demand.

A Monstrous Falsehood Uttered by a Mis-Statesman, and Given Out by a Senile Editor Through a Corrupt Press.

OVERPRODUCTION IMPOSSIBLE.

Thoughts for Statesmen—A Remedy For Hard Times.

W. S. Morgan, in Topeka (Kansas) Advocate.

Many years ago Thomas Carlyle wrote of us as a people, that we would "have our period."

"It will be" says "when health is intact, crops abundant, and the munificent hand open. Then so-called statesmen will cry overproduction, and the man of the ballot, the self-reliant the self-plient, will go the ballot box amidst hunger and destitution, but surrounded by the glitter of self rule, and ratify by his ballot the monstrous falsehood, overproduction, uttered by mis-statesmen and vindicated by the same ballot; the infamous lie thrown upon the breeze by a senile editor through a corrupt press, and thus bring ruin upon the country, serfdom upon himself and the death of oppression upon his children."

Had Mr. Carlyle been divinely inspired he could hardly have described, with clearer prophetic vision, precisely the condition of the American people at the present time.

We are passing through our "trial period." Take Kansas for instance Were ever crops more abundant? Was ever health more intact? Was ever a people more industrious or more economical?

In the midst of all this seeming prosperity the cry of poverty comes up from the producers, and mis-statesmen utters the "monstrous falsehood," overproduction. The same "infamous lie" is "thrown upon the breeze by a senile editor through a corrupt press", and what is the result?

The "infamous lie" ratified by the ballot of the producer, bringing "ruin upon his country, serfdom upon himself and the death of oppression upon his children."

The most abundant crop for years. What is it worth?

Corn, 15 cents per bushel; oats ten cents and wheat 60 cents per bushel.

Why is this?

Ask the lawyer, the partisan editor, the politician or the so-called statesmen and they will tell you it is overproduction. Was ever lie more apparent on the face of it?

They have told you in substance, that you had not produced so much you would be more prosperous; that you would have made more money; that the country in general would be in a better condition financially, if the people would not work so hard and overproduce everything. In short, we raise so much to eat that some of our people must go hungry; manufacture so much clothing and so many boots and shoes that some of us must go ragged and barefoot; that we dig out so much coal that many must suffer for want of fire. Oh, the flimsiness of such argument. How long will the people permit themselves to be gulled by such palpable falsehoods?

Down here in Arkansas we have a partial failure of crops and we are told that that is the cause of hard times. In Kansas they are blessed with an abundance and that is said to have caused hard times on account of an overproduction.

Oh! the cheek, the gall it must require for these self-important, self-conceited, blatant political demagogues, who never produced a dollar's worth of wealth in their lives, to make such statements, to propagate such lies. But a pity it is that in this enlightened age there can be found any considerable number of fools ready and willing to "ratify this infamous lie with their ballot."

Is overproduction possible? No. Why? Because on the products of labor we live. Labor feeds us, clothes us, warms us and builds houses in which to live.

Now suppose that everybody had a surplus of all these things. Would the cry of poverty and wail of despair go out through the land? The productions of labor contribute to the human family: they are absolutely necessary to the existence of the human race. Is it possible, then, that these elements properly distributed, can entail misery and poverty upon the people? The idea is too absurd to think about; it is too repugnant to common sense. There might be such a thing as the overproduction of one or two things, to neglect of some-thing else equally as important; but this would be soon corrected by the loss in producing it as compared with the profits in producing that which is neglected, and the equilibrium is soon restored; but there never can be a general overproduction, (except, perhaps, of fools.)

The real cause of the general industrial depression throughout the country is an inequitable system of distribution. Statistics show that the wealth of the country has increased within the last twenty-five years from sixteen billion to sixty billion dollars. No other country has at any time in the history of the world shown such rapid increase of wealth. As producers we have astonished the world.

It would seem that with all this increase of wealth, all made by the producers, that the industrial masses ought to be in a prosperous and happy condition. It is useless to add that such is not the case. But why? We have had a repetition of the statement that we have created within that time no less than five to seven thousand millionaires. But this is no answer to the question. How did these men accumulate such large fortunes while others, the real producers of wealth were growing poorer all the time? Squalid poverty on the one hand, and opulent wealth on the other, are only the results of system, and men and organizations are only losing their time passing resolutions and condemning the men who have become wealthy, while they themselves are sustaining by their ballots the system fraught with all these evils.

And what is a civilization worth that produces such results? What of a statesman who utters not his warning against its evil tendencies? What of a Christianity that dare not unmask its rottenness and sound the warning note of danger? And what of a constituency, a freeman that will ratify this condition of things with his ballot?

The great trouble lies in our own system of distribution. Production and distribution are the two factors which must make up our National greatness. As is certainly apparent to all, we produce admirably, but we do not distribute properly.

The two principal factors in distribution are money and transportation. These, properly controlled, are the beneficent agents or servants of commerce, But under our system they have become the masters of commerce. They fix the terms upon which commerce shall be carried on and sustained. They levy tribute on the products of labor with an iron hand. Governors, judges, courts and legislatures do their bidding. Even the Executive of the nation is not without the pale of their influence. Those who control these agents of distribution have accumulated vast fortunes, and we have this anomalous condition: The nation wealthy, but the people poor.

For want of space we shall not undertake anything like a discussion of some of the prominent points relating to this most important question, but will content ourselves by indicating some of the evils which result from the present system, and the importance of applying the proper remedy. For a full discussion of this whole question with the proper remedy the reader is referred to "History of the Wheel and Alliance Impending Revolution."

We have already stated that money and transportation were the two principal agents of distribution. Money as a medium of exchange facilitates barter, infuses new life and enterprise in every avocation. As an agent of distribution it may be subdivided as performing two distinct functions, or rather as bearing two different relations in performing its functions. They are usury and commerce or trade.

When we consider the power of interest and the evils which it entails upon all who come within reach of its grasping tentacles, we are not left to conjecture the importance which this branch of our subject bears to the matter under discussion, or as to the fate of the nation that permits itself to be drawn into this vortex that has swallowed the nations. Sixteen thousand millions of dollars worth of interest bearing, soul devouring mortgages resting upon the homes of our people.

Six thousand millions of interest bearing public indebtedness is eating away the vitals of American industry.

Eleven thousand millions of private indebtedness is sapping the energies of the nation's producers. Thirty-three thousand millions of dollars indebtedness.

This is the heritage we are preparing to bequeath to our children. This is the incubus on American labor. This is the Upas tree that is poisoning every element of national greatness; robbing enterprise of its energy; industry of its reward; public spirit of its patriotism and posterity of its inheritance. What is the interest burden? At eight per cent. it amounts to two billion seven hundred and thirty millions of dollars per annum. This vast sum is annually transferred from the producers to the non-producers; usury does it. Interest is usury. The great part of this sum becomes principal and is each year added to the aggregate amount of the indebtedness of the country and becomes an additional burden upon the profits of industry.

Let us now consider for a moment what this vast sum means.

Twenty-seven hundred and thirty millions of dollars annual interest!

It represents the value of all the wheat raised in the United States in six years, at one dollar per bushel.

It represents all the corn raised in five years, at thirty-five cents per bushel.

It represents more than the civil war cost for any one year.

All the hay, corn, wheat, cotton and oats raised in the United States in one year, sold at the highest price obtainable would not bring money enough to pay this annual interest burden.

It would require a train of cars reaching twice around the globe to hold wheat enough to pay it, at one dollar per bushel.

To pay it in corn, at thirty-five cents per bushel, it would require a train of cars reaching almost six times around the earth.

From a financial standpoint we could better afford to sustain an army of 800,000 men than to pay the annual tribute to this "sitting army" that holds the evidences of our indebtedness.

It requires no prophetic vision to anticipate the future condition of our people if they are not aided in some way to lift this incubus from the industries of the country.

So much has been said of the abuses of commerce or trade, of the numerous trusts which threaten to undermine and overthrow our whole commercial system, which hitherto was supposed to rest upon a solid foundation, and be controlled by healthy competition, that it would be only a monotonous repetition of an old story to discuss it here.

The other factor, transportation, is of hardly less importance than the money question.

The immense fortunes which men who control this means of distribution have been enabled to accumulate in the short space of half a life time, is one of the best evidences that this agency has been perverted from the public good, by taxing production to an extent that must inevitably lead to industrial slavery.

In the light of the facts at hand, and easily obtainable, it would seem unnecessary, for the purposes of this article, to undertake to show that the hundreds of millions of dollars annually exacted from the products of the country to make up dividends on stocks that represent no value whatever, and bonds which, to a great extent, represent a fictitious value, of princely salaries and extravagant expenditure, is a useless burden on society that threatens every phase of our national life, and bodes no good to our national prosperity.

These two agents which form the principal factors in our distributive system, and which ought to be made the servants of the people, but which under the present condition are their masters, are the most important elements that contribute to our national greatness.

Being so closely related to the interests of the people, so intimately connected with their welfare and interwoven with their enterprises, it is a source of wonder that anyone can be found who will contend from a logical standpoint that they should not be controlled by the people, that is to say, by the government.

If these agents were properly controlled so as to be the beneficent servants of commerce instead of its master, the producer would receive a just reward for his labor.

This would enable the farmer to buy more of the products of the artisan and the manufacturer, and they, in turn, could buy more of the products of the farm. The millions of dollars of wealth that goes to make up the aggregate of vast accumulations of capital would remain in the hands of the producers, or accrue to the benefit of the consumer, and demand would be stimulated by increasing consumption by the simple process of increasing the ability to buy.

"Supply and demand," says the Silver Commission, "mean the same thing and are but two faces of the same fact." The demand is only limited by the ability to buy, and though people may starve in the midst of plenty for want of means to purchase the necessities of life, it is no evidence of over-production, but of improper distribution resulting in under-consumption.

And this condition will continue to exist so long as we are content to endure a system that makes ten thousand paupers in order to create a millionaire. And we will continue to have this system so long as the "senile editor" continues to propagate the "monstrous falsehood," the pulpit asks the blessings of Deity upon our present system, and the voter ratifies it by his ballot.

Let the government abolish usury entirely by furnishing the people money at cost, upon good security; obtain by purchase, control of the railroads and operate them in the interests of the people.

Then new fires will be lighted in every forge, millions of idle wheels will be put in motion, new mines will be opened up and mother earth made to yield her hidden store; millions of idle hands will be given employment, and the busy hum of active industry will be heard in every city, town and hamlet throughout the land.

Polk County Journal.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., MARCH 13, 1890.

'Round Home.

It begins to look like spring weather.

Mrs. A. Braley gave a card party on Tuesday evening.

Miss Jennie Miller returned from a visit to Keystone last week.

County Attorney Williams needs another dog for his office.

Geo. J. McManus went to St. Paul and Duluth last week and will return about the 15th.

Only a few more days before the spring time comes, gentle Annie, or words to that effect.

Miss Inez McGrew and Miss Jennie Gallasch went over to visit friends in Grand Forks last week.

Judge Mills arrived on Tuesday to hold chambers. Several important cases will be argued before him.

Make a home run for the Opera House to-night, make a short stop there while you witness "A Base Hit."

Half freight rates on seed oats via the Northern Pacific, March 20th to May 31st, 1890. [47-4]

Miss Allie Veronneau went to Warren on Saturday to pay a farewell visit to friends there before going to Butte.

Dick Hussey is making a huge success as a druggist, but says he is eagerly anticipating the return of Dr. Van Dyke from the west.

Mr. Sampson treated the second ward school children to a sleigh ride on Monday afternoon. The little folks seemed to enjoy it hugely.

The Prattsburgh (N. Y.) News says: "Mr. and Mrs. Clark Van Housen and daughter are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Van Housen."

Edward Bivins, Mrs. F. Bivins and Miss Alice Van Dyke went over to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Cooke and Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Bartlett, on Saturday last.

Dave Robinson has purchased a half interest in the fruit and confectionery business of H. A. Mason, and together they will make a strong team. We wish the boys success.

Dr. Lankester was in the city on Monday. Says that Hugh Thompson is recovering from his recent severe illness and is able to be about; for which his many friends are thankful.

Mr. Buffington, of the Payne-Carrigan farm, arrived in the city this week with his foreman, enroute for the farm. It seems that the sale that was announced last fall for some reason or other fell through.

Soren Johnson, the photographer, returned from a brief visit to Superior, on Friday morning, very favorably impressed with what he saw and heard. Thinks Superior is the coming city of the great Northwest.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings is preparing to remove her millinery store to Robert street, in the building adjoining Reed's restaurant, on the east. She is having the building nicely fixed up to be ready for the spring opening. Look out for her announcement later.

Mrs. Isidore Fortier and daughters left for Butte, Montana, on Monday morning, to attend to the business matters of her late husband. Miss Allie Veronneau accompanied them, intending to engage in business there if she finds everything satisfactory to her.

Bro. Stevens, of the Warren Register, was in the city last week, enroute from Mt. Carroll, Ill. to Warren. He will remain in charge of the Register, while his son, the managing editor, takes a bit of a vacation. Mr. Stevens says times are as hard in Illinois as here, if not more so.

Nicoli Eddy, who was to try conclusions with Geo. Scott, at the skating rink last Friday night, for the championship of the Northwest, failed to show up when "time" was called and George remains master of the situation. A good time at the rink was enjoyed, however.

Mr. J. Jorgenson is moving his building from his lot on Robert street down to the foot of Ash street, to make way for a brick building which he intends to erect as soon as the weather will permit. The space between that and the Fortier block should be built up at the same time.

The Northwestern Farmer and Breeder, published at Fargo, has changed to a semi-monthly. It is one of the best agricultural papers in the Northwest, and at the price, 50 cents a year, should be in the hands of every progressive farmer. Address the publisher, E. A. Webb, Fargo, N. D., for a sample copy.

John Hack, who returned from the great west last week, gives a very graphic description of that country and all he saw and heard thereof. It was almost as good as a visit with the Crookstonites dwelling in that far off land to hear him tell about them. While he was very favorably impressed, he does not seem overly anxious to go out there to locate.

The Hawley correspondent of the Moorhead News says that N. H. Fulton has accepted the position of general manager of the Hawley creamery and will take charge as soon as the season opens. Mr. F. is an experienced creamery man and will no doubt give them excellent satisfaction. His butter always ranks first in the market.

WANTED.

A good compositor. Call at this office.

TO BE OPENED.

The President has approved of the bill for opening the Red Lake Reservation, but the proclamation will not be issued until the surveys are completed, which will take, it is said, from a year to 18 months. Upon receipt of the news in this city last week a meeting was called to ratify the action of the President and to commend the earnest efforts that Congressman Comstock has put forth in our behalf, and to take such action as was deemed necessary to advertise this city and the county. With such prospects before us we should all take hold unitedly in the great work and success will thus be sure. We should also put our shoulders to the wheel in the effort to secure a free and open market, so that the farmers may have the wherewithal to buy the pine lumber when it shall be placed upon the market.

Hon. H. Steenerson was in St. Paul last week. On his return he found a letter from a large lumber firm of Michigan, making inquiries into the pine industry here with a view to locating mills. They will thoroughly investigate and will, probably, take a hand in the manufacture of the pine when it comes into the market.

John C. Welles, proprietor of the old Reis farm, arrived on Monday from his home in Fon du Lac, and went down to the farm in the evening. He is making active preparations for the coming seeding campaign and is very sanguine of good crops and prices. He will put in every acre now ready on the home farm and is talking of buying several sections more.

Minnie and Mrs. Bailey are removing into the store on Broadway just north of LaDue's meat market, which they have repapered and refitted nicely. They have been doing a good business and their increasing trade demands greater facilities. The ladies will soon be ready for the grand spring opening. They intend to keep in stock everything desirable in their line and invite a call.

Smoked halibut, smoked bloaters, anchoivis and Norway herring at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

John Nelson, secretary of St. Hilaire Alliance No. 703, writes us that 15 farmers joined that alliance at their last meeting on Feb. 28th, and that much interest is felt in the cause, though many more would join if they had the means. Mr. Nelson is fully impressed with the importance of the work and hopes to see the time when there will be an alliance in every town. Thinks every member should use his influence with his neighbors.

C. E. Sawyer: I like the idea you advanced in last issue on the Duluth & Winnipeg Railroad, and I am sure that our citizens ought to take some action looking toward the bringing of that road in here, and I am led to the conclusion that if we do not take some action soon the road will go south of us. I saw Mr. Fisher last week who expressed surprise that we had taken no action in the matter while other places take a lively interest in it. I am convinced that it will not requre a bonus to secure the road, and I hope our people will not let it go without an effort to secure it. While at Duluth I took a run over the road as far as it is completed and was well pleased with what I saw of it. I tell you Crookston needs that road.

The members of the Polk County Farmers' Alliance, delegates to the meeting of the State Alliance, waited on Governor Merriam to ascertain if anything could be done to relieve such of our farmers as are unable to pay for the seed wheat they purchased last year. The payments are due with their personal property taxes, and unless some relief is had the sheriff will be obliged to proceed in the matter, which will be a means of distress. The Governor will lay the matter before the Attorney General, who will try and devise some means of relief in all such cases. Should that be successful, these farmers will owe their relief to the Farmers' Alliance of Polk County, and that is only one of the many good things that the alliance will do for farmers if intelligently managed.

Evaporated peaches, apricots, raspberries, blackberries, silver prunes, California prunes, prunes and fine raisins in large variety, just received at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

We heard somebody on the street mourning the absence of good mayoralty timber. Why, bless you, man, the woods is full of good material. What's the matter with Wm. Anglim, M. R. Brown, Fred Durand, Ed. Wile, Wm. Watts, Halvor Steenerson, R. J. Montague, A. A. Miller, Judge Ives, Alex or John McKinnon, P. C. Schmidt, E. C. Davis, John Cromb, A. D. Stephens, A. C. Wilkinson, E. D. Childs, Felix Fournet, C. E. Sawyer, Louis Fontaine, or a hundred and one other good men and true? If that deck is not big enough and good enough to draw a winning hand from we must indeed be hard up. You could shoot into that crowd and not hit a poor stick, every man among them being thoroughly identified with the growth and prosperity of our city. There are other good men against whom nothing can be said than that they are among the newer arrivals. Good material? Lots of it and may the best man win.

That Potato Starch Factory.

The plan suggested in THE JOURNAL of the 6th, is a good one.

Farmers can afford to take the stock and thus secure a market for potatoes every year. Potatoes at 25 cents a bushel will pay as well as wheat at 75 cents, and be much better for the land. Potatoes one year prepares the way for a big wheat crop on the same ground the next year. Such a factory put in operation will help Crookston. It will make employment for labor; a demand for building material; sale for merchandise, and help the prosperity of all classes in the community. But it is getting late and if such a factory is to be put in operation this year, no time should be lost. FARMER.

Richard Hussey lays the whole blame in the matter of our wheat market directly at the door of the Minneapolis millers, who, he says, absolutely control the output of flour and thus the price of wheat. By keeping the price of flour low enough so that consumers will use it in preference to corn meal, they secure a larger trade, but they must keep the price of wheat down to bare cost of production to do this and make the large profits that they do; so they contract to supply the eastern millers with all the wheat they want at eastern figures, thus keeping them out of this market as competitive buyers. If the Legislature would pass a law basing the price of flour on the cost of wheat and a reasonable charge for milling, he says the whole problem would be solved at once. He thinks the question of our markets is one of so much importance to our business men that they should aid and abet the efforts of the farmers to obtain a free and open market.

The Blair Educational Amendment.

It is high time that the people of this land were made aware of the dangers which threaten their rights and liberties through a measure now pending in Congress, introduced in December last by Senator Blair, under the designation of a "joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States respecting establishments of religion and free public schools." It is more familiarly known as The Blair Educational Amendment.

This measure professes to have been framed in the interests of religious liberty and Republican principles of government, but contains provisions which qualify it to operate directly against these interests. A brief examination will suffice to locate the evil and to discover its serious character.

Section one provides that, "no state shall ever make or maintain any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." This is unquestionably a very laudable provision, calculated to bring the Constitutions of the states up to the level of the National Constitution which says that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof!" But it is contradicted by the provision of section 2, which says,

"Each state in this Union shall establish and maintain a system of free public schools adequate for the education of all the children living therein, between the ages of six and sixteen years, inclusive, in the common branches of learning, in virtue and morality, and in knowledge of the fundamental and non-sectarin principles of Christianity. Let us see what this would involve. First, it would have to be determined what are the "fundamental and non-sectarian principles of Christianity." But in this there is by no means a concurrence of opinion among representatives of the various religious denominations. Radical differences of belief exist, even in relation to those things which lie at the very foundation of Christian belief. Indeed, it would be very difficult, if not quite impossible, to settle upon a single doctrine of Christianity which is held without difference of opinion by all denominations alike. What concurrence of belief, for instance, even upon fundamental principles, would there be found among the Baptists, Roman Catholics, and Unitarians? It is evident, then, that upon the establishment of this proposed amendment there would immediately ensue a struggle among the various religious bodies to determine what should be recognized as the "fundamental" principles of Christianity. Each denomination would fight for what it considered to be these principles, and a turmoil would ensue in which the dragon of religious bigotry would have full play to rear his ugly head, and engender hatred, strife and discord in every part of the land.

Every teacher in the public schools, and every candidate for that office, would have to be qualified to give instruction in the principles of Christianity such as might be agreed upon as fundamental and non-sectarian, if any such agreement were possible. A code of these principles would have to be formulated, in which such teachers should be examined, and which they would be required by law to teach to the youth over which they had charge. Thus there would be a religious code which would be recognized by law, and decreed and supported by the state. This would be nothing else than a state religion, just what the first section of the proposed amendment undertakes to provide against by saying that "no state shall ever make or maintain any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

The discord, dissatisfaction and strife which such a measure is fitted to occasion is incalculable. All parents who might not recognize the validity of what the state would decide upon as the "fundamental and non-sectarian principles of Christianity," would be compelled to withdraw their children from the public schools, to prevent their being instructed in reilgious tenents which they did not indorse. This would include all parents of Jewish faith, and, it is safe to say, many who belong to denomination, recognized as Christian. There would also be numerous parents of no denominational connection and recognizing no religious faith, who would be strenously opposed to having their children taught in any of the principles of the Christian religion. It would be a gross injustice to these parents and their children to deny to them the benefits of the public schools, those schools which they are taxed to support, and to the privileges of which, under a republican form of government, they have an indisputable right. It is a measure to which they could not and would not peaceably submit.

Therefore in the name of peace, in the name of justice, in the name of religious freedom and of American and Republican principles of government, let the people of this country raise their united voice against the passage of this proposed amendment. That it may indeed fail of its purpose, and the evils which it threatens be averted, is a consummation most devoutly to be wished.

Pillsbury's Plan.

He is Said to be Getting Ready to go into Politics.

The Minneapolis Journal.

There has been a vast deal of discussion on 'change over C. A. Pillsbury's recent utterences on option trading. For the most part the dealers condemn what he said.

"Charles Pillsbury is a queer fellow," said a well-known man on 'change yesterday. Of course there was a definite purpose in his recent radical talk on the harm speculative grain trading does to the millers and farmers. He is a mighty shrewd figurer and it isn't easy to divine his motives in this attack on option trading. I don't think he meant nealy all he said, and I'll tell you why."

"Go ahead."

"Well, I remember that some 10 years ago, when Frank Hurd, the Toledo congressman, introduced his bill in congress to abolish speculation in wheat C. A. Pillsbury favored it. To help the farmer? Bless you, no! At that time the millers' association controlled the price of wheat in the Northwest. Pillsbury and the other millers argued that speculative trading raised the normal price of wheat. If this trading was abolished the price would go down and the millers would have a bigger margin of profit between the price of wheat and the price of flour. And yet now Pillsbury argues that the trading lowers the price of wheat where formerly he held that the effect was to raise it."

"But his motive in attacking option trading now?"

"Politics, pure and simple. Friend of the farmer, you know. Wants him to see dollar wheat. Fact is, Charlie Pillsbury wants to go to the United State senate. That's an ambition most rich men get sooner or later. I happen to know that he had the pins all set up in the Washburn-Sabin fight to enter the field the minute it happened that Washburn had to draw out. But that never happened and so he held back. The argument to be used with the grangers was that Pillsbury had put thousands of dollars in the farmer's pockets by the way he had bulled the wheat market just before that. His men were prepared to show that he had by his persistent bulling added 10 cents a bushel to the price Northwestern farmers got for their wheat that year."

"Was it true?"

"Yes, sir, every word of it. There is no question of that. Pillsbury lost considerable money that year by his bulling operations and in so doing shoved the price way up. But you may be sure it wasn't from any philanthropical motives that he did it. He was mistaken in the way he 'sized up' the market—that's all."

"So he has political aspirations?"

"Yes sir. I think you'll see him in the arena openly before long. And he'll make a success of it, too. He is shrewd and has great executive and organizing ability. He would show some of the old hands a trick or too that would surprise 'em. you'll see.

The elevator men claim that the sub-treasury bill would not change the features of the market any, and yet they are bringing the whole strength of their influence to bear against it. If they did not know that it would give the producer the opportunity to control prices why are they so anxious to kill it? The fact of their opposition should make it the more desirable for farmers.

The first issue of the Presto Change is on our table, wearing a creditable appearance. It is published at the town on the N. P. road heretofore known as Staples' Mills, but since the arrival of the cut-off from Little Falls, re-named Presto. It is published by the veteran newspaper man, A. J. Clark, and seems to be enjoying a liberal patronage. THE JOURNAL wishes Mr. Clark abundant success and plenty of "Change."

The opponents of the sub-treasury bill claim that the reason for their opposition comes from the issue of Treasury Notes which they claim will cause confusion in all money matters. Well, we will waive that point, make a different provision, if necessary, but the essential point for us is to secure the building of the warehouses, as that gives us an opportunity to store our grain and use the money at a rate of interest that does not consume the profits and more too. But we find that is not what ails them, for as soon as we make that concession they bring up more arguments calculated to show that the plan is a poor one. We will admit that it is a poor one—for the elevators, for it would make them pay what our wheat is worth to us.

The faith that Mr. Comstock's friends reposed in him before the nomination, which led to his nomination and election, is being justified in a manner truly gratifying by his conduct in behalf of the people's interests, and he is proving a most worthy successor of one of the best Congressmen Minnesota ever had. He has been largely instrumental in removing obstacles to the opening of the Red Lake Reservation, has introduced many bills of great importance to this district, and on the tariff he is sound to the core. In a letter to the writer he says that he will honestly support his constituents in their demand for free sugar and free sisal, and he thinks that the bill now being prepared will be a long step in the right direction. His letter shows that he is in hearty sympathy with the farmers of the Northwest and that they will find no truer champion of their cause than he. If the Minnesota delegation throughout is as sound, we are all right.

The pot-house politicians, who so confidently predicted that Governor Merriam's address to the Farmers' Alliance meeting, would be an open bid for the farmers' votes, had the wind so completely taken out of their sails by a plain, practical, common sense speech, conspicuously free from any effort to pose as the farmers great and only friend, that they are now frantic with rage and disappointment, and declare openly that "Donnelly wrote it!" This is too thin, as everybody acquainted with Donnelly's method of opening the matter to the bone and exposing the very marrow thereof, very well knows. No, that idea will not win. We must give the Governor credit for all that speech entitles him to, and it shows that he has thought very deeply on the subject of the farmers' wrongs, and while it shows that even he has much to learn, it also shows a very commendable desire to learn. If Mr. Donnelly had simply written that speech for political purposes, he would have gone to the bottom of the wheat inspection business, showing, first, that the business was created in the sole interest of the farmers, and attempting to show that none but their friends are handling it. The impression obtains among farmers that the elevator companies of Minneapolis and Duluth as absolutely control the grading as ever they did, as Mr. Donnelly well knows, and had he, as Governor Merriam's enemies claim he did, written that speech for political effect, he would have endeavored to show that the system was in the hands of the farmers' friends. These hoaxers are scared to death least the Governor should score a point, and they are largely overdoing the matter.

We are more disappointed than we can express at the failure of the Farmers' Alliance to endorse the sub-treasury bill now before Congress, for we are firmly convinced that a bill of that kind would be the salvation of this upper country, and would practically solve the vexed problem now before us, and how a majority of the farmers could be made to vote against it, puzzles us. No sooner had the measure been read by Mr. Wardall, than Jim Baker, a man who pretends to be "the farmers' true friend" jumped to his feet and declared that he had "never heard one word of such a bill before, and for that reason it ought not to be endorsed!" We do not like to say that so capable a man as he lies out of whole cloth, but we must take that statement with a great grain of salt, as we were discussing that bill at least ten days before that meeting 300 miles from St. Paul, and the Pioneer Press in its issue of Monday, Feb. 24th, contained a long article on the subject. Strange that he, then, for the first time, "heard anything about it. (?) We do not like to impugn his motives, but when he uses the force of his brilliant oratory to sustain the position of the Manitoba road, appearing as their accredited attorney before Legislative committees in their fight against the Duluth & Winnipeg road, we are forced to the belief that he has some particular spite against the farmers of this upper country, or else his financial interest lies in opposing our true interests. They wanted that road because it, being the shortest line, would give them lower rates of transportation. But Jim Baker says: "No! You can't have it! The Manitoba road is able to carry all of your stuff by a round-about line to Duluth; they don't want the D. & W. built and therefore you can't have it!" Again, the interests of this country demand a system by which the producers can absolutely control the market price of wheat. The sub-treasury bill offers them this privilege, and again Jim Baker jumps frantically into the arena and wildly shouts "No!" You can't have it because I never heard of it before!" How is that for a farmers' friend? A man who has spent most of his life holding down some government position? At the last election he slipped a cog, failed to connect, and is now writing a series of articles in the Pioneer Press calculated to show why "farming is a failure," (to some,) and "they say" he is now gunning for Gov. Merriam because the frost of neglect nipped his (farmer Baker's) crop. Now, it strikes us that the less of that kind of farming the alliance indulges in, and the less of that kind of farmers join, the better it will be for the farmers' interests. We cannot afford to be an instrument of revenge for politicians if we would accomplish the results we seek, and we are confident if the farmers will candidly review that bill and its objects they will see that the ESSENTIAL IDEA of it is just what they want. We care not how the bill is worded so that the object—"a free and open market wherein the producer can name the price," is preserved. The sub-alliances should correct the error of the State Alliance.

The opening of the great pine reserve will have a tendency to give this country such a boom as she never heard of before. It will furnish cheap pine and that will do more to build up the country than any other agency.

C. A. Pillsbury is quoted as having charged up the whole iniquity in the wheat business to the bucket shops, and says: "I wish the farmers of this State would stop being imposed upon by political demagogues and men who do not know what they are talking about, and follow the lead of men whose interests are identical with their own, and who have better opportunity to see the causes which are depressing the price of breadstuffs!" By which we are led to suppose he means elevator men anyhow and millers possibly. Well, now, just at this present writing it occurs to us that the farmers did, one fall only a few years since adopt the advice of a prominent elevator man, one C. A. Pillsbury, who wrote a letter which was printed in all of the leading papers of the Northwest, advising farmers to "hold their wheat for a rise, that was sure to come." Many farmers followed that advice and borrowed money, held their wheat till spring "for the raise" which came, it is true, but it made the farmers hump themselves to "raise" the margin necessary to carry their wheat, or even to drop it, while the poor unfortunates who could not follow this illustrious advice, but had to sell in the fall had made big money by so doing. We suppose the withholding of all that wheat gave the elevators a chance to handle what they had and get ready to scoop in the balance when the farmers could "hold it for a raise" no longer. Mr. Pillsbury says wheat should bring $1 per bushel in our market this fall and winter, and the elevators have bought thousands of bushels at 25, 30, 35 and 40 cents per bushel! Our "friends," the wheat dealers, have given us these prices and yet we should keep right along "advising" with them, "taking their advice," which plunges us deeper into the hole every year, because every man who has the sense and the independence to advise us not to, and to try to help us devise a way to obtain a share of the profits we earn is a "political demagogue" and men who "don't know what they are talking about!" (It is a pity about that.) Is it not WONDERFUL what a warm, what a deep paternal interest these men have in us NOW when the life of the elevator interest is threatened by this uprising of intelligent farmers? How nervous they are getting and how they tremble! And how fearful they are that some naughty "demagogue" will snap the chains that bind us to the elevator iniquity and give us a free and open market, a

COMPETITIVE MARKET!

No sir, Mr. Pillsbury, it does not require any "demagogue" to convince us that the elevator system as managed to-day is an absolute bar to a competitive market, and even should some "demagogue" chance to "advise" us to break these chains, we had rather a "demagogue" should counsel us to do right than a saint should advise us to still continue in the bonds of slavery! The farmers of Minnesota have too often been frightened at this cry of "demagogue," which always comes when the peculiar system is in danger; too often have they been so far misled that they have for the time forgotten the real issue at stake, and their forgetfulness has cost them dearly, but we believe that now they will labor in unity until this great octopus is slain. Farmers of Minnesota! heretofore it has been your own countrymen who have pocketed your earnings, but now it is English capitalists who seek to deplete your fortunes to build up their own, and while in the past it MAY HAVE BEEN consoling to know that it was your own brothers who were robbing you, will you submit to the same, or worse, from foreigners? If this be "demagoguism" make the most of it!

Make It A Common Cause.

Why is it that our country has not been making the progress it should have done during the past few years? Farmers have felt and have sought the remedy through organization. Business men have felt it and have earnestly sought the remedy through establishing (or trying to establish) manufacturing enterprises, and now comes Mr. C. A. Pillsbury with the solution of the question in the statement that wheat per bushel in this market! Mr. Pillsbury is one of the most experienced elevator men in the country, and has greater facilities for knowing what he is talking about than most of us, and if his statement is true we can readily see what hurts us. On the very top of the market we are the losers to the extent of from 30 to 40 cents on every bushel of our wheat, and on the thousands of bushels of our wheat that they wrongfully take at less grades than No. 1 Northern, the loss per bushel will run from

OUGHT TO BRING ONE DOLLAR

FORTY TO SIXTY CENTS.

These cold facts ought to open the eyes of the business men to the necessity for backing up the farmers' efforts to get a fair showing in the market, for what earthly good will all of your manufactories be to you while agriculture suffers this enormous drain annually? You depend upon agriculture to support all of your institutions, and you owe it to agriculture to aid in stopping the drain. Instead of raising a great hue and cry against the efforts of farmers to organize, you ought to encourage it, and you should form supplementary organizations to back them up and demand that they are given their rights. The farmers demand that the contracts now existing between the railroads and the elevator companies be dissolved, and that independent buyers be given an equal chance in the market. And this grading system is all wrong, giving the buyer the advantage every time. If grading of wheat is such a good thing for farmers, make it apply to horses, cattle, sheep, and everything else he has to sell. We notice that all who are interested in maintaining the present system are anxiously trying to blind our eyes to the situation by charging up the evil to "the tariff," to "bucket shops," to "overproduction" and a thousand and one other things, but we would like to know which one of them causes us a loss of from 30 to 60 cents per bushel on our wheat as the present system of marketing does! It is true that we ought to have the tariff removed from sugar and sisal and lumber; that we ought not to be obliged to pay personal taxes on a double valuation; that we ought not to pay taxes on real estate that the other fellow (who holds the mortgage) is the real owner of. All of these things add to the general depression, while the root of the evil remains in our system of marketing wheat. From the effect that the farmers' movement has already had upon those who are fattening off his labors, we are confident that should the rest of mankind fall in with him in his demand for justice, our rulers would be forced to give heed to the demand and the object would soon be accomplished. If we all united in the demand that the railroads dissolve their contracts or forfeit their lines to the government, they would choose the lesser evil, no doubt, and another fall would see a free and open market here. There is money in our wheat and when the farmer can get his rightful share of it he can do business, and we don't see how he can before. This would bring prosperity and we can see no other way to do it.

The State Farmers' Alliance.

The meeting of this body in St. Paul last week was fraught with greater interest than ever before and more largely attended than ever, 550 delegates being reported to be in attendance. Desperate efforts were made by scheming politicians to capture the Alliance or to hamper its usefulness, but the good sense of the farmers prevailed and their efforts were thwarted, and a plain, practical, common-sense platform was adopted. An effort to appoint a whitewashing committee for the grain inspection business fell flat upon the audience, most of whom felt that a practical experience of its workings was sufficient.

The Hon. Ignatius Donnelly started the ball rolling by submitting resolutions providing for legislation for the purpose of raising the standard of the State Agricultural college; the general adoption of the Australian system of voting; the passage of a law regulating the tolls exacted at grist mills and elevators, so that farmers might have the benefit of at least half their crops; legislation to modify and govern the rate of interest and usury; the making of arrangements so that farmers resident in Northern Minnesota can be insured cheaper fuel; the passage of a law to prevent railroad companies watering their stock; also a general resolution condemning monopolies and systems of exaction bearing hard upon farmers, and lastly an indorsment of the alliance organ, the Great West.

This made a good start and other resolutions all bearing upon the matter of needed legislation were submitted, to the following effect:

A law to provide for the election of United States senators by the people.

A law providing for the national government owning and operating all railroads.

The passage of a law providing for absolute prohibition of intoxicating liquor for both states and nation.

A law to provide for annual sessions of the legislature.

The repeal of the present tariff laws.

The regulation of railroad freight rates so that the company's earnings should not exceed 5 per cent. interest over the actual expenses under economical management.

A law regulating taxation and mortgages.

A law for the protection of forests, and with this end in view the abolition of the 2 per cent. duty on lumber.

Legislation providing that in townships a two-thirds vote of freeholders only be requisite before bonded indebtedness can be incurred.

The location of elevators at all stations; the fixing of the rates for cleaning and elevating fixed at one-half cent; the receipt for grain to be made commercial paper bearing interest at not more than 6 per cent. and the election of state grain inspectors by the people.

H. E. Boen submitted resolutions from the Fifth district delegates as follows:

That it is the sense of this meeting that the present transit rates are hostile to the farming interests of the country, and ought to be abolished. And we ask the state alliance to request the railroad and warehouse commission to adopt for the railways of this state the Iowa schedule of rates.

A delegate created a diversion by submitting a resolution indorsing Ignatius Donnelly as lecturer for the alliance and also indorsing "the other officers when everything had been satisfactorily explained." No one seemed to quite comprehend what he meant by this resolution, but it went with the rest.

Other resolutions provided for the fixing of the legal rate of interest at 8 per cent; the repeal of all grain inspection laws and the institution of an open grain market, and the stoppage of dealings in grain futures.

The session lasted from Tuesday noon until Friday noon and was full of practical suggestions, and each member resolved to go home and urge every farmer of his acquaintance to join the alliance and help on the good work. A commission from M. A. Gilbert & Son, appeared in the hall on Wednesday evening, about 9:30 and tackled the farmers in defense of the elevator system, and heard many things new and unpleasant of the way our markets are manipulated. The sample of grain they brought to show what No. 1 Hard should be was poorer wheat than much that has been taken out of this country as No. 1 and No. 2 Northern, containing small, bleached and white kernels enough to frighten our average buyer into a conniption fit at the idea of giving No. 1 Hard for it. The St. Paul and Minneapolis papers, with all their boasted "independence" (?) were strangely silent about this episode, not a peep being heard from them on the subject. Polk County was the banner county, sending 15 delegates and five or six alternates, with only 21 alliances yet formed, most of them since Jan. 1st, 1890. The following delegates were present:

L. H. Judson, Andover, No. 617.
A. N. Hixson, Crookston, No. 648.
E. E. Abbott, Mentor, No. 594.
John Flesch, Rosebud, No. 666.
C. E. Southmayd, Hill River, No. 785.
O. P. Renne, Garden, No. 660.
Wm. Marin, Russia and Onstad, No. 677.
Peter Cornelius, Polk Co., No. 753.
Ola K. Lakness, Winger, No. 721.
J. G. Moen, Knute, No. 643.
Frank Cernonsek, Tabor, No. 657.
A. Steenerson, Sand Hill, No. 553.
T. H. Nesset, Garfield, No. 650.
John Grythin, McIntosh, No. 752.
P. R. Anderson, Roome, No. 676.
And Ole Olson, At Large.

No county made a better showing considering the time Polk County has been engaged in the good work, and if the farmers are alive to their own interests this number will be more than doubled at the next annual reunion.

There is no line so handsomely equipped for Through Passenger Service as "The Northwestern Line"—C. St. P., M. & O. R'y—and the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago trains over this line have a better record for reaching either end of their run "on time" than those of any other line in the country.

THE

All well posted travelers between the Twin Cities and Chicago take this line—particularly favoring the "Vestibule Limited," which carries the finest sleeping cars and coaches ever built, and also all classes of passengers, without extra fares. On the Lake Superior portion of the line, between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, and St. Paul and Ashland, Pullman sleepers are run on night trains, and parlor cars on day trains.

NORTHWESTERN

Pullman sleepers are also run through between Duluth, Superior and Chicago. Fast through trains are also run between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Kansas City, via Sioux City, with through Pullman sleepers St. Paul to Omaha and Kansas City. Dining cars are run on all through trains over this line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago, and between St. Paul and Kansas City. Besides being the best

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., MARCH 13, 1890.

Moorhead News: Editor L. Osborn, of Glyndon, was in town to day. He says with reference to M. U. Squire, the principal of the Glyndon school, that Mr. Buckingham gave him a tremendous walloping last Saturday for persisting in being soft on Mr. Buckingham's daughter Helen, 14 years old, who attended his school, after Mr. Buckingham had remonstrated with him concerning the matter. He states also that being "spoony" seems to have been Squires' weakness; that he had been too attentive to several other girls and the school board have for some time been dissatisfied with Squires. He was forced to resign and left the village without making any extended adieus. It is supposed he is now in North Dakota.

AN OPEN SWITCH

It Sends Engineer Charles Lovelace, of the Great Northern Railroad, to his Death in Montana.

The Victim of the Wreck passes through This City—Story of the Accident.

Grand Forks Plaindealer.

It was a sad sight that met the eyes of the crowd which gathered at the Manitoba depot last evening on the arrival of the train from the west. The body of Charles Lovelace, the engineer who was killed in the wreck on the Montana division near Callis station Saturday night, was taken from the train and uncovered in the depot for a few moments. The story of the tragedy is a simple but pathetic one. The young engineer was rushing along through the cutting winter air of that unhospitable region, thinking possibly of his distant home in the east, when suddenly he discovered that the train had been thrown on an open switch. He just had time to reverse his engine and jump—the ponderous locomotive was thrown from the track and fell upon the unfortunate engineer killing him instantly. The head brakeman and a man name Larse Opine were both seriously injured.

The remains were brought to Minot where much sympathy was manifested by the citizens. The ladies of the village made a handsome wreath, and the benevolent order of Firemen and Engineers both showed a brotherly interest in their fellow craftsman's unhappy fate. The remains are accompanied by J. R. Jones, and George McClare. They will stop tomorrow at Barnesville and then go on to Binghamton, N. Y., where the burial will occur. This was Lovelace's home.

Teachers' Examination.

The spring examination of teachers will be held in the following places:

At Fisher, in the school house, March 21st and 22d.

At Crookston, in the court house, March 24th and 25th.

At Red Lake Falls, in the school house, March 27th and 28th.

At McIntosh, in the school house, April 1st and 2d.

All teachers expecting to teach in the county during the present year, must be present at one of these examinations.

In the hiring of teachers, school boards will observe the following: A contract made with a teacher who does not hold a certificate which is valid in the district where she is to be employed, is void. A contract cannot extend beyond the validity or life of the certificate. A contract made by the teacher prior to the procurement of a certificate is unauthorized and void. A school taught by a teacher who is not legally qualified forfeits its public money.

Total yearly payments	$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

FAREWELL SERMON.

Preached in Christ Church, Crookston, Minn., February 23d, 1890.

BY REV. I. C. FORTIN.

"And Samson called unto the Lord, and said, O Lord God, remember me, I pray Thee. Or strengthen me, I pray Thee, only this once, O God!"—Judges XVI, 28.

In addressing you, my Christian brethren, for the last time as your appointed pastor, in this place, I have naturally felt some difficulty in the selection of the subject on which to address you After standing in this place the ambassador of Christ to you; after endeavoring in my weakness to make known to you the requirements of His law and the promises of His gospel, I cannot but feel that there has been laid on me an overwhelming weight of responsibility in speaking, as well as on you in hearing. It is not easy for me to look around on the present occasion without solemn thoughts as to the manner in which I may have been enabled to discharge my responsibilities, in delivering the message, and the manner in which you have discharged your responsibility in the hearing of that message. For myself, I can now say that I have kept back nothing that was profitable; have declared the whole counsel of God and fully preached the gospel of Christ. It is not for me to judge how you have discharged the responsibilities that have rested upon you. I feel, however, that as the gospel has been spoken in faithfulness, so the gospel may not be without its fruit, and that the increase in the number of our congregation, the steady attendance of its members, and the watchful and christian attention of all, may be regarded as some proof that as the gospel has "had free course among you," so the gospel has also "been glorified" among you.

I have felt a difficulty, however, in selecting a subject for the present occasion. To touch on any subject likely to excite your feelings, or my own, would be as unbecoming in me as it would be unprofitable to you, and I have therefore determined, as far as possible, to forget myself and the circumstances under which I address you, and remembering only that this is my last opportunity, to avail myself of it for preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, that as from the first, so to the last, I may be able to say with the apostle that "I have determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified."

I therefore turn to the text: "And Samson called unto the Lord, and said, O Lord God, remember me, I pray Thee, O strengthen me, I pray Thee, only this once, O God."

In the first place, it was the effort of a man who felt that his time was short and wished to improve it. He loved the people of Israel; he longed to strike a blow upon their enemies; he felt his time was short and that there was no time to be lost.

Oh! brethren, that we were always anxious to improve our opportunities. Here is an opportunity given me, for which I must give an account before the Judge of the quick and dead. Here are immortal beings, passing hastily through this world in their passage to another—some prepared to meet their God; many, totally unprepared, far from it, unacquainted with the knowledge of salvation or the remission of sins, and if they die as they are they will be eternally undone. Oh, brethren, behold the state of the case and offer up fervent prayers that my last effort may "not be in vain in the Lord."

But, secondly, here is the effect of a very bold and daring faith. True, there appeared nothing but difficulties. True, he himself was to be sacrificed, if the effort succeeded. But mark; it was by a supernatural agency that he was assisted in this matter. It was a bold and daring act of faith. Samson, in his blindness, while the Philistines were making fun of him, while they had him up, in order that they might treat him with ridicule and with contempt, there was a secret intercourse going on between God and his soul.

Brethren, I am quite sure if we were more daring for God, we should be more successful. We are often thorough-faced cowards; we are thrown in the way of worldly men; we have an opportunity of speaking for God; the occasion demands it; the men of the world expect it of us. They know what our principles are, and they know what our conduct ought to be. But we are afraid, we are afraid of giving offense, when he tells the patient that such and such means must be instantly adopted. Ah! why is he listened to so patiently, so thankfully? And why are his means, tho' ever so painful, readily resorted to? For this reason, that men know the value of their bodies, but, God knows, they do not know the value of their souls. No, men do not know the value of the never dying soul. Why then are we not more valiant for God? Why are we not more bold and daring to take the desired step, when called to do it in the way of duty?

Such, then, was the case of Samson. He did not go trusting in himself. It was a day of great trial; but it was a daring faith, of mighty effort in entire dependence upon God.

Brethren, what has brought us together? Assembled for the last time as a pastor and his flock, behold here we are gathered together; we must meet again; but for what purpose? To pray and to preach? No, to be judged for the deeds done in the body. The great white throne shall descend; the dead, small and great, shall appear before God; the judgment shall be set and the books shall be opened, and every soul of man that has ever lived shall be there. Brethren, are there not some, who, if they were to die to-night, would be eternally lost? I would to God I could think that that were not so. But, I pray you, remember the words; "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith!" Do not be satisfied except with satisfactory evidence. Go into the matter thoroughly. Try your own hearts; judge your own selves. For if we would judge ourselves we should not be judged of the Lord.

Samson, led by the Holy Spirit to punish the wickedness of the Philistines, was seeking their destruction. But, brethren, we seek your salvation. We do wish, indeed, to bring you down, but it is in order to raise you up. We do not wish to alarm you; but it is in order subsequently to comfort you. We do wish to show you your danger in order to lead you to flee for refuge to the hope set before you in the gospel.

Again, Samson came to avenge evil that had been offered unto him. I would come to return thanks for many acts of kindness shown me during my sojourn among you, and yet why do I not spend the greater part of my sermon in acknowledging these things? Because I feel I have something more important to do. It may be that some souls are at stake now within these sacred walls. I want to see them drinking of the cup of salvation, and see them tasting of the waters of life; to see them receiving the consolations of the Holy Spirit. I come then to make the effort. I know that all that man can do is vain, and therefore I say: Strengthen me, O strengthen me "this once, O God!" It is the last effort. Ah, brethren, if God be not with us we are met together in vain. I have lived long enough to know this, that the good that is done upon the earth, the Lord doeth it Himself; that vain are all human efforts. You may preach and you may pray, but unless it please Almighty God to send His Holy Spirit, all your efforts are in vain.

Further, Samson in offering up the prayer that he did offer, and in making the effort that he did make, spread death and desolation around him; we wish to spread life and salvation around us. We believe that if our people pray for us, our God will bear testimony to the word of His Grace. We believe that inefficient as we are, our God is able to send down such a rich effusion of his Holy Spirit as we have never known before in this place. Come, lift up your heart. Are there not some parents, whose children are here, feel that they are growing up without religion? Pray for them now. Is there not in cases more than one, two, three, five or ten, is there not the individual who is deeply interested about some beloved relative? The husband for the wife, or the wife for the husband? The parent for the child, or the child for the parent? The brother for the sister, or the sister for the brother? The word of God has been preached, they have been brought to attend upon it; they have heard the prayers of the church offered from time to time; they have heard sermons delivered, but alas! there they are, as far from God as ever. How can they be reached? If the truly devout, and truly sincere and consistent christians will lift up their hearts for a special blessing, and for a parting blessing, I believe, before God, that a parting blessing and a special blessing will be given.

Oh! but it may be replied by the men of the world: Why put yourself out of the way for us? Why should you be so concerned about our souls? I would not if you could be brought to be concerned about them yourselves But how many do I leave as worldly as ever! At church to-night, at cards to-morrow! In the house of God now, in the theatre or in the ball room at the earliest opportunity. Say, trifling, thoughtless creatures, passing rapidly through this world on their way to another, unconvinced, unconverted; and then by and by the stroke of death comes; they feel themselves powerless under its grasp; they try to shake it off, but there is no shaking it off; and what then? Then the clergyman is sent for; then all in a few hours the work of conversion is to be hurried through and persons are to be satisfied of their eternal state. Then they look for the consolation of religion. Ah, my dear hearers, do not deceive yourselves. If you lead a worldly life, you must expect to die a dreadful death. If you turn away your ear from listening to the gospel now, do not expect consolation from the gospel in the hour or moment of your deepest sorrow. "Because I have called and you refused; I have stretched out My hand and no man regarded, but you have set at nought all My counsel and would none of my reproof; I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh!" And you know whose words they are. They are, perhaps, the most dreadful words in the Bible, because they are the words of Almighty God, the God of infinite pity and of infinite mercy, making a "mock" of a sinner who had long refused His mercy before, making "mock" of a sinner in the day of his distress, and refusing to listen to his prayer. Brethren, do not trifle with God; do not trifle with a preached gospel; remember this is a matter for your life, and God Almighty gives you grace that you may listen to it.

It is now time for me to conclude. I have finished my subject and my ministry among you together.

My conscience is my witness, before God that I have preached this gospel unto you from the first. You yourselves are my witnesses that I have preached it unto the last. God forbid that now "I should cease to pray that He may teach you the true and the right way;" that He may "sanctify you in body, soul and spirit, and preserve you blameless unto the coming of the Lord Jesus;" that under His teaching you may learn to seek "whatever things are true, whatever things are pure, whatever things are honest, whatever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely and of good report." And oh! I pray that the gospel may long continue among you; that this gospel which has been heard in this place during the short time of my ministry, may still continue here; that the light which has been kindling and illuminating within this church, may long continue within these walls. What are our churches, brethren, without Christ? If there be not a full, a free and faithful and a fearless preaching of the gospel, away with it. There may be a preaching of anything and of everything, but if it be not Christ, away with it. In these days we have a sort of mixed theology from the lips of unfledged theologians, who are full of the vanity of their youth and the follies of their years, and opposed to Evangelical preaching because Evangelical preaching is opposed to the vanity of their youth and the folly of their years; but whatever is preached, if it be not a full and a faithful preaching of Jesus Christ, away with it. I had rather see the blind bat wheeling within the empty walls of this church than to see men who are more blind than the bat nestling within it. I had rather hear the cry of the owl within this place than the most musical and harmonious voice that ever uttered honied words, if those words are not the words of Jesus Christ. And for you, my brethren, to listen to any other gospel in this place—I might not only exclaim with the prophet: "Ah! that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night!" But I will say yet more; in the sterner language of the apostle, I say, standing here for the last time, in the fulness of my apostolic office,—"Tho' we or any man preach any other gospel to you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." It may come to you in the smooth accents of piety, or with the outward seeming of righteousness; but remember, it is no wonder that the ministers of Satan come clothed as the ministers of righteousness, "for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light."

Oh! may the gospel long continue in this place, and when he who now speaks shall speak it no more, when his lips shall be silent and his voice can be heard no more, may other tongues and other voices take up the same strain and proclaim the same gospel, and that many spirits may be made joyous, and many souls saved in the days of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Senator Stanford Advocates Loaning Government Money to all Who Can Give Security.

Pioneer Press.

Washington, March 10.—In the senate to-day Mr. Stanford offered a preamble and resolution instructing the commitee on finance to inquire what relief for the existing agricultural depression may be furnished by the United States government, and particularly whether loans may not be made by the government upon mortgages on real estate, independent of improvements, at such rates and at such an amount as will make the security to the government perfect—the government to receive some small rate of interest, from 1 to 2 per cent, and to be able to call in a percentage of the loans from time to time at its discretion. The resolution was referred to the committee of finance. Mr. Stanford, in advocating the resolution, said:

An abundant supply of money means to individuals of capacity a field for the use of their abilities in prosecuting their various callings of life, and will be particularly valuable to associations of individuals by affording them facilities for obtaining capital for the transaction of every kind of business. An abundance of money means universal activity, bringing in its train all the blessings that belong to a constantly employed, industrious intelligent people. Ample protection would be afforded the government if it limited its loan to one-half or one-quarter the actual value of the property given as security, and upon the appraisment of government officers especially selected for that duty. It seems to me that the great thought of humanity should be how to advantage the great multitude of laborers, increase their power of production and elevate their condition. We know that a great improvement is within the provisions of providence, and in the prosperity of the masses of the people the prosperity of all is assured. Man is the rightful heir to peace and prosperity, and very much depends upon the intelligence of governments to represent the associated capacities and interests of the whole.

Depreciated Farms.

Grand Forks Plaindealer.

Unfortunately the experience of Grand Forks farmers in the matter of profits from their labor is not shared by their fellow husbandmen in other states. In a recent article the New York commercial Bulletin stated that "all prices of farming products are 20 per cent, below the level of November 1860." This will be something of a revelation to that younger generation who have known little of ante bellum prices, except when quoted as marvels of cheapness by those who bought and sold thirty years ago. It is hard to realize that not only have those days of wonderful cheapness returned; but that the purchasing power of a dollar is far greater now than ever before. There is one class of producers, however, who do not need to be told that prices are way, way down, and that is the farmers. If the prices of farm products are low in the retail markets with the cost of transportation and profits of the middle man added, what must they be in the fields where are crops grown? A writer of authority in Minnesota gives these figures and adds a word of interest about hop culture:

"Wheat has averaged less than 60 cents per bushel, corn 20 cents, oats 16 cents, potatoes 15 cents, beef 1½ and 2 cents per pound and hogs but little over 3 cents per pound, and other farm products in proportion. The facts are that there is no longer a single profitable money-making crop, cereal on animal left to the Minnesota farmer. It is true that flax yields a fair price, but it is a local crop, and counts for nothing in the larger part of the state. And it is a serious question whether flax culture pays or not. It brings with it a sad penalty to the farmer in exhausted soils, and has been the prolific means of scattering mustard and every vicious seed wherever it has been sown. It is a robber of the land, and lives only on virgin soil."

The Vermont commisioner of emigration speaking of a region that was famous for its rich dairy farms thirty years ago says in his official report: "It cannot now be said how many farms there are in Vermont with empty buildings, but it is safe to say that they will number thousands, and there are other thousands with buildings gone and cellar holes marking their sites."

New England papers say that farms do not pay close by the factories on the Merrimac river in Massachussetts; the New York Evening Post says farms have shrunk 50 per cent in value in the world renowned "Geneseo country" of New York; another paper says, "The auctioneer's hammer has been very busy in knocking off the best farms in Buck's county, Pa," while the November Forum says that the corn lands west of the Mississippi have shared in the depreciation. It is also said that farms in the fertile Miami valley in Ohio have suffered a decline of one fourth their value within ten years.

These facts, while they tend to make the Grand Forks county farmers contented with his lot, or rather, quarter section, show that the class of producers who bear all the rest of the world on their shoulders, are not given a fair chance in the race for wealth. They are over taxed, almost unrepresented politically though casting at least one sixth of the total vote of the country and are often paying usurious rates of interest on their borrowed capital. The situation justifies the attention the present administration is giving it and demands the deepest consideration on the part of the farmers themselves.

I have a number of choice Holstein-Friesian cows and heifers which I will sell at figures far less than their actual value if taken soon. For particulars call at THE JOURNAL office.

A meeting of the State Farmers' Institute was held in the Court House on Wednesday last, attended by at least 300 farmers. The most important feature was the examination of samples of seed wheat by Prof. D. N. Harper, State Chemist, to ascertain the availability of our wheat for seed. Prof. Currier and Prof. Waugh gave interesting talks on their specialties and the meeting proved very entertaining and instructive.

Farmers, if you must borrow, and want a reasonable loan on your land at the very lowest rates, see GEORGE J. McMANUS, The Farmer.

The Richards Comedy Company appeared in this city on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week in "A Base Hit," one of the most comical productions presented in this city for many a day. The actors were well up in their parts and kept the audience in a constant uproar. Willard Simms, who has been here before, has lost none of his wit as his presentation of "Joe Nah" and "Katrina" proved. E. M. Kimball took the part of "Judge-Ment" to perfection, and the rendition of the old man's song has never been beaten on our stage. Miss May Vokes as "Mary Ann," brought the house down and she is deserving of the applause she got. Miss Kittie Beck is a clever little actress—A regular little "Miss-Chief." The company as a whole is a strong one and won very favorable comments. Prof. Casad, with his cornet, and Adolph Bruner, with his violin, assisted Prof G. E. Sinn (the musical director of the troupe) at the piano, furnishing a most excellent orchestra. The company may call again later, and they will meet a warm welcome should they do so.

The following letter from President Muir, which is very flattering to the editor of THE JOURNAL, shows so plainly the sentiment of North Dakota on the sub-treasury bill that we give it space in our columns. Mr. Muir thoroughly understands the intent of the bill, and his endorsement of it should have great weight. We trust that when the bill comes before our alliances it will have the consideration due so important a subject:

HUNTER, N. D., March 14, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I am very much pleased with your manly stand in favor of the rights of the farmers of the Northwest. Your paper is doing good work and deserves the hearty support of every farmer in the state. Your paper is among the first I desire to read. I am sorry the State Alliance did not endorse the sub-treasury bill introduced in Congress, and I do hope the local alliances will do the work themselves, for, as you truly say, it is the one measure that will bring us relief. I thank you for your deep interest in favor of principle and the rights of the people and wish your paper was in the hands of every farmer in your state, then all your farmers would be as wideawake as the farmers in Polk County. Success to you. Yours truly, WALTER MUIR,
President North Dakota Farmers' Alliance.

Doc. Van Dyke returned to civilization on Wedesday for a few days to settle up his business preparatory to going away for good, having decided to locate in Seattle. He will leave many warm friends in Polk County.

Charles Chinlquy and G. M. Barber arrived in the city on Saturday last on their way to Seattle. Barber seems to be sorry he left Crookston and we should not be very much surprised to see him return to engage in business at an early day. We notice that most of 'em feel that way when they have been away from us awhile.

Miss Emma Veronneau is back in her accustomed place in Mrs. Bangs' store after a pleasant visit to Duluth and Chicago, to which latter place she went to secure the entrancing styles in spring millinery goods. She got 'em, as usual, and grows eloquent in expatiating upon their beauties. But she can tell you more in a minute than we can in half a day. Go and see.

Frank G. Horton was in from Godfrey on Friday last. Says every farmer is talking alliance out that way, though all have not decided to take hold of it as yet. The fact that they are interested and thinking about it augurs well for the success of the plan, for all that is needed is for them to understand their power when combined with the great body of their brethren, to desire to enlist.

M. L. Vought, editor and proprietor of the Wadena Tribune, died at his old home in Pennsylvania last week. Mr. Vought was for a time a citizen of Crookston, in 1880, we believe. He was managing editor of the Carman Courier during its brief existence. He bought the Tribune of E. H. Love a few years ago and was making an excellent paper. He leaves a wife and child to mourn his loss.

Comrade Cleveland came down from Mentor last week and gave THE JOURNAL a pleasant call. He says our patriotic fellow-citizen, A. D. Stephens, has given the village of Mentor a deed to a lot upon which to put up a city hall, which structure will be built as soon as arrangements can be made. Mentor Farmers' Alliance is growing encouragingly, and they expect to have every farmer in the town enrolled soon.

C. B. Kittridge, one of the early settlers of Glyndon, was up to attend the Institute on Wednesday. Mr. K. first saw Glyndon when it was but a few weeks old, has worked hard to raise many a crop of wheat (that the other fellow always got the lion's share of the profit of,) and he is one of those earnest seekers after a better method by which he can raise wheat to fit the market, so that he may be a sharer in the profits. When we see the fact that there is big money in our wheat so plainly demonstrated by the big fortunes those who buy and those who grind it have made and are making, we are led to the belief that something else besides "better methods of cultivation" is needed to restore the equilibrium of things and place the balance of power where it belongs—in the hands of the producer. Mr. K. claims that he has not made money raising wheat, yet he realizes the fact that somebody has made money out of the wheat he has produced. To us it is perfectly plain that the evil lies in our system of marketing, and that the remedy is a free and open market wherein any man can buy our wheat and pay for it as much as his judgment dictates. We cannot say with truth that we have that kind of a market to-day.

A Sudden Death.

On Saturday last Mr. Charles Klinger, died at his home near Fisher, after an illness of only three days. On Wednesday he went up to Black River to assist his brother Adolph to move his goods down. On the return trip he complained of distress in his bowels and upon arrival home threw down the lines and went in and laid down on the bed. On Thursday morning the German physician of Fisher was summoned and later a physician from Grand Forks. He grew steadily worse until Saturday when an operation was decided upon, and Dr. Dunlop was summoned to assist, but too late, as poor Charlie died about 20 minutes after Dr. Dunlop's arrival. He was about 23 years old, a young man highly respected by all who knew him, and his sudden death casts a gloom over the community in which he lived. He leaves an aged mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn his loss. The funeral services were conducted in this city on Tuesday.

GRAND OPENING!

MISS AND MRS. J. L. BAILEY

Would respectfully invite the Ladies of Crookston and vicinity to attend their Grand Opening of New Spring Millinery,

Thursday, March 28th, 1890.

Simon C. Rice was up from the town of Garden last week to attend the farmers' institute and gives us the following result of the town meeting in Garden. The officers elected were:

Supervisors—Tollef Nelson, chairman; Simon C. Rice, Lars Higinson.
Clerk—John Hanson.
Assessor—Peter Olson.
Treasurer—C. F. Hanson.
Justice—Peter Johnson.
Constable—Frank Vogel.

Al. Kaiser, the 13 Towns boomer, was in the city on Friday last returning home on Saturday.

P. P. Bodine, of the McIntosh Tribune, was in the city on Friday, returning home on Saturday morning's train.

W. J. Nickle was in from the Woodside school on Friday. Nick is on deck for enumerator for some town in Polk, and it looks like he would count noses next June.

To renew old loans, pay up railroad lands, etc., etc., see George J. McManus. No loans made to dude farmers, nor on sloughs sand-ridges, alkali flats or hard head stone-quarries—but for good farmers, on good farms, he has the ready cash and lowest rates.

E. E. Adams, editor of the Fergus Falls Journal and census superintendent in the 4th District, was in the city last Friday on business connected with the census work. He informs us that assessors are not eligible and cannot be appointed. That the enumerator must be a resident of the town he wishes to work in; that the candidate must make application to him in the candidate's own hand-writing; that all that is necessary to obtain the job is that the enumerator must be competent. He expects to have the work all done in two weeks time. Upon receipt of application blanks will be sent the applicant to fill out and return. These blanks are to be forwarded to Washington for approval. Mr. Adams' address is Fergus Falls, Minn.

See notice of Auction Sale on the Schreiber estate, in another column. Mr. Schreiber, it will be remembered, is the man who was murdered by his nephew last fall while engaged in threshing on his farm. He was one of Clay County's most prominent citizens. The nephew was adjudged insane and is now in the care of the government at Washington.

Who Is The Farmer's Friend?

Hardly is one political campaign over till a new one is begun, and with it always in Minnesota comes a whole bevy of most ardent friends of the farmer. When his crops promise well or harvest has been bounteous he has hosts of friends among the implement dealers, store-keepers and even saloon-keepers. Where he would build, or buy, or give his vote he will find hosts of importunate, truckling, insinuating, toadying "friends." The office-seeker and his innumerable hosts of aids can readily show that all the farmer's ills arise from imperfect laws; that legislation will quiet his troubles and increase his gains; that is, such legislation as only he, the honest, only he the wise, only he the "true friend" of the horny handed can give. He gets the vote and results are too patent to require space here. The implement dealer who dotes on his "friend," and longs to make him comfortable urges upon him the necessity of new seeders, new-fangled drags, self-binding harvester, (to cut twenty acres) and steam-threshing outfit, all at prices double their true value. He buys, does the farmer, and the results again we know—why write them? The merchant bland and soft-tongued, urges upon his "friend" goods he could do without, sells him anything so long as he has a chance of pay: gives him a ticket of credit (well secured by chattel mortgage) in the balmy spring-time, and lets his "friend" have all the goods he wants on it, (at a profit of from 100 to 150 per cent.) But the heavy load that has accumulated, with December's cold chills the friendship between these twain—ah, willow! The money lender is now glad to have his "friend" the granger call on him. He will accommodate him with that little loan, oh, certainly! Lend him just as much as he wants, 10 per cent bonus? Oh no! Just charge him thirty dollars for time and trouble; but he is getting a large loan and can stand that. 'Tis done, and the "notices of mortgage sales," in the newspapers tell the bitter results of an over-dose of friendship here.

Experience, who has been in the educating line, these many days seems to be teaching even the farmer something from the hand-book "Every man his own friend," and the farmer has allied himself together for the purpose of carrying out the teachings of this most admirable book. Let him see to it that he is not hoodwinked by designing and interested professional politicians into giving them his vote. Let his representatives be farmers who have been proven true by years of trial and not by empty professions of the past few days. Let unnecessary goods and machinery alone; buy nothing on credit from the blythe agent or the bland store-keeper; but if he must make a debt let it be from the banker or money-loaner who will not charge him more than ten per cent to the 100 per cent charged by the two former. Let him work his farm like a thinking being, diversify his crops experiment always, but slowly, safely within his means; try all things that promise well. Let him work his farm as hard and faithfully as if the laws of the land were perfect and he will therein find his best friend,

GEORGE J. McMANUS,
The Farmers' Friend.

The sole idea of the framers of the sub-treasury bill was and is to provide a free and open market for wheat. Requiring elevators of 30,000 bushels capacity shuts out independent buyers, those who have not sufficient capital to build such, and the combination of interests of those who are able completely excludes competition. This class of capitalists do not like to lose the grip they have on the market, hence we see the desperate efforts they are making to defeat the sub-treasury bill. There is one way to defeat the bill and that way is to concede to the farmer, or any man who desires to buy wheat, the right to build any kind of a house he likes to accommodate his business. All the farmer desires is an equal show in the market, and certainly this is not unreasonable.

The present agitation among farmers presents an opportunity for rat establishments and schemers in big cities to attempt to work off old stocks of inferior goods upon the unsuspecting granger for their good cash, and hence we see stacks of circulars offering what purports to be unheard of bargains. Our friends should not be too quick to bite at every bait presented, and should remember that they have to pay their good money without an opportunity to examine the goods before they purchase. When they receive them it is too late to kick. We have examined many of these so-called great bargains and from what we know of the habits of our business men we are prepared to assert that farmers can do just as well for cash in this city, quality of goods considered, as they can by trading with any of these catch-penny concerns, and we do not hesitate to advise our friends to try any of our reputable business men for a proof of our assertions. You will find rascals in large cities as well as in smaller, and they are generally shrewd enough to take advantage of every opportunity to work off snide stocks at big figures, and they are always on deck among the first. Be not caught by chaff, but remember what Davey Crocket said about being RIGHT before you go ahead in these matters. We know that our dealers have opportunities for obtaining this class of goods to work off in this market, but if they should do so it would ruin the business of any one who should attempt it. All the stuff of that kind that seeks a market in our midst is found in transient auction rooms that never live to see the handsome countenance of the assessor in his annual rounds for business.

Approved this 14 day of March, 1890.

WM. WATTS,
Acting Mayor.

Attest: JOHN PATERSON,
Clerk.

The petition of Frank Ives, Nelly E. Ives and P. E. Misgen to the City Council of the city of Crookston, after having first been duly submitted to a committee, duly appointed by said City Council, at a regular meeting of said City Council, and said committee having acted upon said petition, and made their report thereof to said City Council, recommending that the petition should be granted as prayed for, and that Ives' First Addition to the City of Crookston should be vacated, it is therefore ordered by the City Council of the City of Crookston that Ives' First Addition to the city of Crookston be and is hereby declared vacated.

Moved by Alderman Steenerson, seconded by Alderman Morrisey, that the petition be granted as requested. Ayes, Aldermen Childs, Morrisey, Steenerson, Bjoin, Jerome, Buhn and Watts. Nays none. Carried.

Alderman Childs presented the following resolution:

Whereas, The statement of the County Auditor of Polk County, hereto attached, shows, 1st, The total tax levied and due the city.

2d, The amount of cash on hand in the County Treasury subject to the order of the city treasurer.

3d, The amount of money which the city may expect to receive during the balance of the fiscal year from the tax levy.

And claimed said statement showed that there not only is no floating indebtedness against the city, but that when the tax is collected there will be a considerable surplus in the treasury, and for this reason he asked that this statement be spread upon the records and published in the proceedings of the council for the information of all who may vote at the coming election in the matter of voting bonds to pay the floating indebtedness.

Resolved, That said statement with this preamble, be published as a part of the proceedings of this council for the information of the electors of said city. Carried.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., MARCH 20, 1890.

The English Milling Syndicate.

Prairie Farmer.

Will this result with any good to the farmer by enhancing the value of wheat? There cannot possibly be any gain to the farmer to sell his wheat to the syndicate mills, which they can extract the best grade of flour and the largest money value from per bushel, and leave the offal to be consumed in this country, principally by farming and labor-classes. This, like all great milling corporations, which do an export business, tends to leave the consumer at home, or in any other country where flour is exported, a low grade of flour to be consumed at home, in order to keep up a first-class trade in the great cities in this and foreign countries; and in justice to the farmer[s] who use their flour under the exchange system, it would be well to say (notwithstanding their claims to the contrary) they get but little first class flour, if any at all, from the patent process or roller-mills, but take, in most cases, a low grade of re-bolted flour in exchange for good, sound wheat.

Now, the most feasible plan is, for the consumers on the line of the English-American system to return to the old system of stone-grinding, and get a stronger grain of flour and more lbs. to the bushel, as by the old process 43 to 44 lbs of strong flour can be made from 60 lbs of sound wheat, whereas the roller and patent-process mills are having the face to require the farmers, under the exchange system, to take for good, sound wheat (and they will take no other) 36 to 38—and if the farmer has more than the usual amount of wrath depicted on his countenance he may possibly get 39 lbs—of the above named 2d-grade flour to the bushel, but no bran or middlings, which is giving one-tenth toll, and 13 lbs to be accounted for after allowing 2 lbs for waste.

The use of low grades of flour and the loss attending their use falls the heaviest on the labor and farming-classes that depend on the housewife's system of raising bread without yeast! and owing to the uncertainty of such flour the result is a poor, dry and partly-sour product, of which a large per sent finds its way to feed chickens, hogs, and other animals of the farm, whereas, if they were to use a whole-grain flour, honestly ground and bolted, there would be little or no loss to the consumer by the above course. Your correspondent looks upon this and other of England's purchasing schemes as a final freezing-out process of all American farm industries in or by a combination of capital, to the sooner place the farmers of the United States in the condition of Russian serfs—which will at no distant day be at hand, under the present monopoly and class legislation rule. We, as farmers, are machinery-cursed: First, by self-binders and other too high-priced machinery, and 2d: By roller and patent-process, and other high-toned milling macinery, which must come out of the farmer in the end.

Jackson, Mich. F. J. W.

Unjust Assessments.

Farm Stock and Home.

A business man of Waseca county, Minn., recently made the following statements in the office of Farm, Stock and Home: "This winter I took a two year-old scrub colt from a farmer, on a debt. I took it at $60, though I would not have given over $50 for it in cash. On investigation I found the colt was assessed last spring at $65!" again: "A firm in our town had a judgment against a farmer for $600; one of the members went out to look at a lot of cattle the farmer had, with a view to taking them in satisfaction of the judgment; but the real value of the lot would not justify such an exchange. Investigation revealed the fact that that same lot of cattle was assessad last spring at $875!" Continuing, our informant said: "To my certain knowledge our part of the state is full of instances of this kind, varying in degree somewhat but, reeking with injustice in every case."

From Renville county we have a list of prices at which stock was assessed last spring, and alongside of it the prices at which much of the same stock has since been sold, which show conclusively that the property was assessed at more than its actual cash value; notwithstanding it is the custom to assess personal property in towns and cities at from 5 to 83⅓ per cent. of its spot cash value. From other counties in the state we have similar figures, and more are coming in every day, constituting an array that is absolutely appalling in its injustice and inhumanity.

Our single tax brothers, will, of course, tell us that their system would wipe out iniquities of this kind; but we can't stop now to even argue that point, much less to wait for the fulfillment of their gospel. These unjust assessments must be reformed now, this coming spring. The reform must be realized in the next assessment! common justice demands it, and the present condition of farmers pathetically pleads for it.

If the stocks of country merchants were assessed at their full cash value they would consider themselves ruined at once, yet it is safe to say that merchants find more profit in their stocks than farmers do in their live stock. Let us have a radical reform in this matter, and let us realize that it can't come too quickly.

Albert Lea Standard: After having helped to rob the farmers through the Minneapolis Millers' Association for a score of years, Fred C. Pillsbury has got himself elected President of the state agricultural society, for the purpose it may be assumed, of making partial reparation for the sins he has committed. But he will hardly restore to the farmers any of their ducats when they visit the state fair, and he is not likely to embody in his annual address the report of the experts of the English syndicate on the profits of the Minneapolis mills.

Teachers' Examination.

The spring examination of teachers will be held in the following places:

At Fisher, in the school house, March 21st and 22d.

At Crookston, in the court house, March 24th and 25th.

At Red Lake Falls, in the school house, March 27th and 28th.

At McIntosh, in the school house, April 1st and 2d.

All teachers expecting to teach in the county during the present year, must be present at one of these examinations.

In the hiring of teachers, school boards will observe the following: A contract made with a teacher who does not hold a certificate which is valid in the district where she is to be employed, is void. A contract cannot extend beyond the validity or life of the certificate. A contract made by the teacher prior to the procurement of a certificate is unauthorized and void. A school taught by a teacher who is not legally qualified forfeits its public money.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Inequality in Taxation.

Pioneer Press.

The extraordinary inequality in the burthens of taxation, is creating widespread feeling among the farmers, because they believe, and with good reason, that the system in operation is not fair to the granger element. They have long entertained this opinion, and the depression in prices of farm products urges present consideration of the subject. The question is now in progress of discussion in all the states where the alliance is established, for the evil seems to be general. The farmer is willing to pay taxes on what he possesses, provided every one else is made to pay tax on what he possesses, and that all shall sustain an equal proportion of the burthens. Our tax laws and the practices under them discriminate against the farmer in an extraordinary manner. The constitution of the state (Art. 9, sec. 1) provides that "all taxes shall be equalized and uniform throughout the state." In spite of this authoritative provision, these is a very large aggregate of property now escaping taxation by hook or crook, in the hands of moneyed men, corporations, manufacturers, merchants, and such, which should be placed on the duplicate. Now the farmer's land his personal property in horses, cattle, hogs, sheep, implements, etc., are open and visible to the assessor, and cannot in their nature be concealed. All the farmer has is caught in the assessor's net. But in the city, where invisible property is the rule, stocks, bonds, notes, money, and all like property can be concealed, and withheld from the assessor. Every one knows that if this invisible property could be fairly reached it would add millions to the tax list, and by so much reduce the unjust burdens on the farmer's property. This is the general allegation, and it is true. Heroic treatment only will reach the liars and evaders who will not justly return invisible property. Let it be provided that all notes, bonds, etc., liable for taxation, shall not be held valid except that they bore the stamp and signature of the assessor, that they had been duly listed for taxation.

Farming lands are valued too high, in proportion to present valuation. The great shrinkage in the prices of farm products has correspondingly reduced the value of farm lands, as shown in our first paper. But in our leading cities real estate has very largely increased in value. Like a see-saw, the city end has gone up and the granger end down. It was demonstrated by a prominent real estate man before the late dairy-man's convention that real estate in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth had appreciated in the last few years over 1100 per cent. Farming lands, on the contrary, have depreciated at least 25 per cent. But the tax duplicate does not show any such relative change. Again while the farmer's personal property is found and taxed at a substantial valuation, the personal property of merchants of all classes, is not so taxed. It can be readily demonstrated that taxable values of the latter properties are not one-forth of their insurable value. The fires which have occurred in our cities have brought to light facts which are startling. Stocks of groceries and all manner of merchandise carried, on which returns for taxation made were so low as to excite comment, when burned have been found to carry fire policies four or five times as great as returned to the assessor. I have before me, as I write, facts and figures which fully sustain this statement. If full publicity was given these things as I know them from official facts to exist, it would demonstrate how wide are the lines of justice between the farm and the city. While a partial exemption from taxation might enable the merchant to sell his goods lower, yet he is in no wise compelled to make lower prices for that reason, and with the natural avarice of human nature, you cannot predicate any such result. Nor does this practice give that equality in taxation which the constitution guarantees. The evil could be cured by a law forbidding a greater insurance upon such property than its assessed valuation. One pretext for this minimized system of listing wholesale houses in our state is that they must do it to compete with Chicago, whose great merchants notoriously do the same thing. This fact only demonstrates how wide the evil is. The farmer secures no exemption for any such reason, but made to compete with his commodities with all the world. In many respects the existing law itself is as radically unjust as are the practices under it. The law authorizing the deduction of debts from credits is wholly wrong.

It is framed as if intended to strike directly at the farmer. That class in cities who have their property chiefly in credits, lawfully deduct their indebtedness, and are taxed only on the balance. And promptly do they avail themselves of this open door, for nothing is easier than to create debts and so avoid assessment. But when you come to farm property this provision of law works essentially different. There is no enactment which enables the farmer to deduct his indebtedness which avails for him. His personal property is comprised in horses, cattle, hogs, machinery, etc, and though he may owe for these properties one-half or the whole value in notes or otherwise, his special class of property has still to pay taxes in full, as though he owned it all free of debt. Nor does the person who holds the obligations of the farmer for this class of property pay tax on these obligations, for of the hundreds and thousands of chattel mortgages which secure this class of debt on file with the town clerk none of them appear on the assessor's list. This class are also the usurers, and of all men these should be taxed. The chattel mortgage business is the paradise of perjury. If the farmer's land is mortgaged the law works the same injustice, for the law permits no deduction on account of the mortgage. If the taxing of the mortgage is a double taxation, as is so often alleged, then there is a very plain remedy in exempting the farm from taxation to the extent of the mortgage. Relieve the farmer at once, and catch the mortgage holder afterwards. Singularly enough, we tax the mortgages held at home and let the foreign money loaner go free, thus affixing a penalty to those of our own people who have money to loan. All mortgages should be listed for taxation and the mortgaged property be exempted for a like amount. A constitutional amendment compassing this object should be insisted upon by every farmer in the state. I have heard of an instant, in a border county, where a firm in Minnesota and a firm in Iowa, having each $100,000 in mortgages, just stepped over the line and exchanged mortgages till they were through with the assessor.

Even if mortgages were exempt from taxation, there would be no resulting benefit to the farmer, for his interest would be no less, as is often urged, for money loaners are not governed by such considerations. The farmer justly asks to be relieved from paying taxes on indebtedness. The demand is just, and should be heeded. The tax laws of Minnesota, as at present enforced, simply give the moneyed class the opportunity of unloading their share of taxes upon the farming class. It is strange that the farmers have borne it so long. There are many other inequalities in administering the law. For instance, a bank is assessed at 75 per cent of its par value; but the stock of the older and richer banks is generally worth much more than its par value, so that all above par escapes taxation. We do not so much arraign the law as the practices under the law. There is a wholesale ignoring of the absolute requirements of the law. The assessors primarily, and the town and county boards, and the state board of equalization itself are all remiss in their duties, resulting in defects of administration along the whole line. But, wherever the faults may lie, the important fact still remains that the invisible property, chiefly in the cities, by its nature and extent, are properties which mostly escape due taxation.

One great source of revenue belonging to the state tax is that upon the gross earnings of the railroads. If any one chooses to analyze the sum of over $700,000 which the roads now pay into the state treasury he will find that about 75 per cent of the commodities carried are the products of the farm or articles going to the farmer as a consumer. The railroads simply add the tax upon gross earnings to their fixed charges, and collect it from the people. It is like a tariff tax; the method of collecting it hides the essential facts. When you pay your fare and freight bills you pay the railroad tax; when you buy your sugar, salt and glass, you pay the tariff tax. The form of collecting it seems to equalize the burdens of our railroad tax. Besides Minnesota has become a central route for through traffic, and we collect something from freight and passengers. If no other more radical reform offers I would add one cent more to this gross earnings tax and raise it from 3 to 4 per cent. Then add to this something more on the insurance tax, and a proper amount on the gross earnings of sleeping car and express company earnings, the stocks of which are of enormous value, and you will have thus secured an amount equal to the expense of the state government, which is about $100,000 per month. But the inequalities of our tax law, as administered, fall mainly upon the farmer, and that class should never rest until they have given the question of taxation heroic treatment all around.

J. H. BAKER.

In "Peterson" for April, the ladies will find the very freshest and prettiest of spring styles, with ample directions for their make up. There are also numerous costumes for the children and plenty of new needle-work patterns. "Queen Louise, of Prussia, and her Sons," is a beautiful engraving, and the full page wood illustration, "Starting Off" is a very striking picture. "What Easter Brought," is a charming story and unusually well illustration, Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper's capital serial, "A Magnificent Marriage," ends in this number, and Miss Alice Bowman's "Story of Dagma," admirably as it opened, grows better and better. The short stories and poems are all good, most of them fare above the average, the department of "Things Worth Knowing," proves most interesting and useful. "Peterson" steadily improves and by its excellence and versatility gains each year a deeper hold on public favor. Terms, $2.00 a year. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

Red Lake Falls Gazette:

Too much praise can not be given to Hon. S. G. Comstock for the honest and energetic efforts he made in obtaining the opening of the Red Lake reservation. A little hanging back or shifting of responsibility on his part would have laid the matter over for months and perhaps years. Mr. Comstock is the first representative Northern Minnesota has ever had, and of him she has every reason to feel proud.

Wide Awake for April opens with a burst of Easter beauty and hope, the frontispiece by W. L. Taylor, "Easter Offerings" embodies the spirit of youth and bloom and gladness, while Mr. Butterworth's beautiful story, "The Pilgrims' Easter Lily, ought to go far to settle the question of Americas national flower. W. J. Rhees of the Smithsonian Institute, under the title, "What's in a name?" gives a brief history of the English founder of the famous institution, at Washington, with three portraits of Smithson, and then goes on to give fifty or more explanations of the mistaken ways in which people address letters to the Institute. "The Difficulties of a Darling" by Mrs. L. B. Walford, is an amusing story of the way a little sister proved her devotion. "How Simon Sanco Panza helped the Revolution," is a first-rate true historical story by Oliver Risley Seward. "Work and play," by Mrs. Fremont, is another true story of this number, showing a delicate woman's business energy and success. "Nervy's Wicked Summer," by Lucia Chase Bell is also true, evidently, the kind of story that children read eagerly. "The Fugitives of French Cross" is a pathetic Acadien story, true also, by Grace Dean Mc Leod.

Miss Sallie J. White has a second crisp article on "Newspaper Workers," written for girls who intend to become "Journalists"; Mrs. Francis A. Humphrey has a pretty open-air paper on "The English Promise." The farm-boy hero of Mr. Stoddards seriel, "Gid Granger," conducts operations with rapidity, and shrewdness that would do credit to Wall Street. The young hero and heroine of Mrs Catherwoods new seriel, "Bony and Ban," have won the interest of readers and seem likely to hold it to the end. The poems of the number are by Edith W. Thomas Harriet Prescott Spofford and Emilie Poulson; the illustrations for Mrs. Spofford's are very beautiful, including a full-page of famous Donati comet. "Men and things" is delightfully readable, full of original anecdotes and reminiscence.

Rushford Star Correspondent: Hon. Solomon G. Comstock represent the Fifth District intelligently and well and has a large amount of business to look after. His long experience in the Minnesota Legislature, however, qualifies him for his arduous duties. He is a very popular man in Minnesota, in Washington and wherever known. Speaker Reed recognized his ability in placing him on three of the best committees in the house.

The Alliance, its Opportunity.

Northwestern Farmer.

The past month has been marked by meetings of the Farmers' Alliance in most of the western states; and, so far as we have had opportunity to become inform of the results, we feel that that organization has cause to congratulate itself. True, the meetings have not been wholly free from the influence of those seeking to use the association for the advancement of their own political fortunes, but those have found it far more difficult than usual to control the assembled farmers. The proceedings show that farmers have been doing their own thinking, and are less willing to follow demagogues, who value their votes far more highly than their material welfare; who are zealous in their service during electioneering canvasses, but ignore their existence as soon as they themselves have attained to the political holdings for which they have abored.

We are glad of this. A somewhat extended observation and experience has convinced us that ordinarily intelligent farmers are really better reasoners and more profound and comprehensive thinkers, than the average hustings politician. The difficulty is that they undervalue their own and exaggerate the abilities of stump speakers. Take, for instance, the tariff question; how many farmers, having reasoned that out and convinced themselves that a high tariff necessarily involves the imposition of unjust and oppressive taxes upon their own labor, have afterwards allowed themselves to be persuaded by some smooth tongued political orator that their conclusions were wrong? Not because his arguments satisfied them, but simply because they credited him with possessing more information about, and therefore, a fuller understanding of the subject than themselves. On such topics as slavery, the war against rebellion, the rights of the negro, and several others equally foreign to the politics of the hour, the speaker had their sympathy; and through that attraction were induced to give assent against their better judgments to his views concerning the only live and vital issues involved.

It is far from being true that political orators are always apt to know more about questions involving public finances, than intelligent farmer or mechanics, although they can talk about them more glibly and with an assumption of superior wisdom. In nine cases out of ten they are "coached" for the occasion, and only repeat what somebody else has prepared for them to say. If, by questioning, you attempt to draw one of them aside from his line of argument, beyond the depths he can readily fathom, he will turn upon you with some nonsensical anecdote or stale joke and discomfort you by raising a laugh at your expense. He crams himself with such anecdotes, and jokes for the very purpose of silencing troublesome catechisers. Farmers are coming more generally to understand this oratorical legerdemain, and while they will as patiently as ever listen to and laugh at the buffoonery, they are presuming more and more to criticize the argument offered and place greater reliance upon their own judgments. This is a result of frequently meeting in the grange, farmer's club, local alliance, etc., and discussing political topics, when there are no recognized political leaders present to hinder the free expression of thought.

That this will speedily lead to the release of farmers from thralldom to designing and make them more self-reliant, can hardly be doubted; and with freedom of thought and action accorded them, they will soon be able to discover the directions in which their interests lie and compel those who control the government to administer it for their benefit, and for that of the people generally. They will soon discover that "class" legislation, whether for the benefit of manufacturers, silver miners, bankers, railway companies, or those of any other distinct avocation, must result injuriously to the community at large, including ultimately even those whom it was designed to benefit. That, therefore, what farmers really need is not so much legislation for their especial advantage, as the repeal of all "beneficiary" legislation, for promotion of any and every special interest. This is what the alliance will lead to if the farmers are wise enough to retain control of it, and use it, not as a political party, but as the master and director of all political parties.

Teachers' Examination.

The spring examination of teachers will be held in the following places:

At Fisher, in the school house, March 21st and 22d.

At Crookston, in the court house, March 24th and 25th.

At Red Lake Falls, in the school house, March 27th and 28th.

At McIntosh, in the school house, April 1st and 2d.

All teachers expecting to teach in the county during the present year, must be present at one of these examinations.

In the hiring of teachers, school boards will observe the following: A contract made with a teacher who does not hold a certificate which is valid in the district where she is to be employed, is void. A contract cannot extend beyond the validity or life of the certificate. A contract made by the teacher prior to the procurement of a certificate is unauthorized and void. A school taught by a teacher who is not legally qualified forfeits its public money.

At the meeting of Crookston Alliance on Saturday, the question of a starch factory was discussed and a proposition was submitted that 400 shares, at $25 per share be taken by the farmers, the subscriber having the privilege of paying for his stock in potatoes at 25 cents a bushel. A good start was made and a committee appointed to solicit subscriptions to stock. This is an opportunity that any can embrace who are able to raise potatoes.

"MCMANUS gone out of business?"—Oh, no! He has not been buying as many farms as some—but he lends a reasonable amount on good lands at the lowest terms. Money paid when note is signed. J. G. MCMANUS, The Farmer

Mr. I. U. Jennings returned from Tacoma on Friday evening after an absence of nearly three months. He has looked that country over pretty thoroughly and become pretty well posted upon its resources and prospects. He says when one has a good business here he can see no object for removal, but if one has nothing to do here he can better himself by going out there as there is lots to be done there, and no one need be idle for lack of something to do. He reports the Crookston colony nearly all well and doing nicely. Thinks some of disposing of his interests here and going back in the fall. Farming lands are held at from $200 to $300 per acre and not abundant. The cost of clearing wild lands is about $100 per acre. Real estate has been booming mildly for some time and the end does not appear to have been reached yet.

Baby carriages, all kinds. A good large carriage, parasol top, and well made, for $8.00. Others cheap.

J. L. Cossette writes THE JOURNAL that at a meeting in the town of Terrebonne, on Saturday, March 21st, a good start was made for an alliance. E. E. Abbott and Geo. Trip, of Mentor Alliance, made ringing speeches in favor of the farmers organizing, and after a petition for a charter had been signed the following officers were elected; President, Louis Perreault; Vice-President, Giles Lizee; Secretary, J. L. Cossette; Treasurer, Edward Perusse. Delegates to County Alliance, Thomas Crompe, John Clement and Cyrille Beaudin. Forty-one farmers signed the application for the charter and Terrebonne Alliance starts in with very flattering prospects. A motion was made to give two dollars each to the gentlemen who so kindly came over from Mentor to assist but they declined to receive compensation for their services, so a rousing vote of thanks was extended them.

CITY CONVENTION.

Notice is hereby given that a city convention will be held at the City Hall on Friday evening, March 28th, at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of putting in nomination candidates for the following offices, to-wit:

One Alderman in the 1st ward.
One Alderman in the 2d ward.
One Alderman in the 3d ward.
One Alderman in the 4th ward.
Two Aldermen in the 2th ward.

I. U. JENNINGS,
T. G. THOMPSON,
J. G. MCGREW,
E. D. CHILDS,
J. O. MILNE.
City Central Committee.

CITY CAUCUSES.

The ward committees met in City Hall on Monday evening and issued call for caucuses in the various wards for Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock.

1st ward at the City Hall; 4 delegates.

2d ward at Watts' office; 4 delegates.

3d ward at Commercial Hotel; 2 delegates.

4th ward at St. Louis Hotel; 5 delegates.

5th ward at Carman Hotel; 1 delegate.

Sheriff Paulsrud informs us that he went down to St. Paul during the meeting of the State Alliance on purpose to go with the Polk County delegation to wait on the Governor in behalf of those upon whom the carrying out of the seed grain law will work an injury.

I don't want to buy a farm, so if you wish to sell don't bother me! I will lend you one-third the cash value of your farm on easy terms—if you are a pretty good sort of a fellow. GEORGE J. MCMANUS, The Farmer.

Prof. Casey welcomed the teachers and the prospective teachers of Polk County at the court house on Monday morning and proceeded with the regular order of examination. It is said that the Prosessor is indefatigable in his efforts to advance the interests of our schools.

A farm loan made to a farming farmer, on a farm as is a farm, can be closed up by George J. McManus as quick as you'd buy a bill of groceries.

That the Polk County farmers mean business is shown by the manner in which they are joining the alliance and the independence they manifest in their manner of doing so. They are fully alive to the evils that exist in our market system aro are determined to correct them if possible.

To renew old loans, pay up railroad lands, etc., etc., see George J. McManus. No loans made to dude farmers, nor on sloughs sand-ridges, alkali flats or hard head stone-quarries—but for good farmers, on good farms, he has the ready cash and lowest rates.

Elsewhere we present the ideas of Senator Sanford on a measure of relief to farmers by issuing money on lands. As with every other measure that promises relief to the farmer, the opposition to this measure is strong and determined, but the farmers should not be fooled by such chaff. This measure if properly gotten up would be if incalculable benefit not only to the farmers of the county, but to the whole country itself. We do not think it of as much importance as the sub-treasury bill but still it would help very materially and therefore we should be prepared to welcome and aid to the best of our ability.

Mr. Sylvan Bergevin came down from Lambert on Tuesday to present the cases of several parties who are distressed on account on the seed wheat payment due with personal taxes. These parties suffered a partial or total loss of their crops last fall, and should the county press the claims they will be ruined, but should they have an opportunity to raise another crop they might be able to pay up. If no chance is given them, the county will be obliged to pay for all the wheat the parties had, and as there are many similar cases, the Board will try and devise some means for temporary relief. The Sheriff, we are told, offers to remit the costs he will be obliged to make, and all other officials feel likewise, and the Board seems heartily in favor of extending all the relief in its power.

One good object has already been attained by the farmers' alliance, that is in calling the attention of our legislators in Congress to the fact that agriculture needs the earnest attention of our lawmakers, and already several important bills have been framed and men are hard at work on others. Farmers should now take hold of the work with strong faith, and every alliance member should urge his neighbor who is not a member to join at once, and their efforts should not cease until every farmer in the United States is a member of the farmers' alliance. Then the passage of these bills in Congress should be urged with all the power of our united strength, then, and not till then, will be made manifest the full power of the alliance. Let every alliance man be a missionary from henceforth until this grand result is accomplished.

Somebody in the St. Paul Daily News jumped onto the neck of Dr. Fish in an extremely vicious manner, piling up billingsgate till you can't rest. He says that the doctor is a "coward" and proceeds to tongue-lash him in a fearful manner, but evidently to his article as a brave, honorable opponent would do, which underhanded proceeding leaves the impression in the mind of the reader that the writer thereof is a greater coward than the man he attacks. He claims that the doctor was raising heaven and earth during the whole session for the office of secretary. We know better for just before dinner Dr. Fish handed the writer hereof a lot of blank pieces of papers with the request that we write the name of "John Lathrop", for secretary upon. We heard him request a dozen or more of his friends to work and vote for Lathrop. During the dinner hour a warm personal friend of the doctor suggested the name of Doctor Fish for secretary, as, in his opinion, the only man who could down Haigh. That idea took like a prarie fire and after dinner the doctor was asked if he would accept. It was not until the convention assembled for the afternoon session that we learned of the doctor's acceptance and when he did accept he went into it with the full strength of his enthusiastic nature as he does into every thing he undertakes, and the splendid vote he got, coming in at so late an hour, when many who would have liked to vote for him had he been early in the field, could not do so having by that time pledged to vote for Haigh, is not a matter for any man to be ashmed of, but on the other hand he may well be proud of it. Here-to-fore we have tried hard to think that the doctor might be mistaken in his charges against certain officials of the alliance—we have hoped he was mistaken in some way but these attacks upon him (which we are forced to believe by their bitterness originates with the parties accused) have forced us to the conclusion that the doctor is not only right but that he has not told all that he knows. It is very evident to the ordinary observer that some deeply laid plans were wrecked at that meeting and the bitterness of the attacks upon the doctor by somebody, who, for some reason conceals his name leads to the conclusion that the doctor is the chilling frost that nipped those cherished plans in the bud. Hence these tears.

Poplar River Alliance No. 729.

Poplar River Alliance effected a permanent organization on March 17th. Mr. Cyprien Demers addressed the meeting, giving a brief review of the good work done at the St. Paul meeting and urging all to take hold of the good work. Mr. Joseph Laframboise followed in an eloquent speech showing the importance of the work and the necessity for all to lend an assisting hand. Cyprien Demers was elected president, Alphonse Paradis vice-president, Arthur Toupin, secretary, and Rock Fortier, treasurer. Alphonse Paradis and Arthur Toupin were elected delegates to the county convention. Poplar River Alliance now has forty members.

THE TWINE TRUST.

That an attempt was made last year to form a twine trust we have no doubt, and that it was a wretched failure is as apparent; so much so that we very much doubt that there is or will be any attempt to repeat the experiment this year. The Minneapolis Evening Journal of March 22d, says:

"Twine is now quoted from 11 cents a pound for jute, to 16 cents for manilla, which was the quotation last year. Who makes the profit? It is not the alleged twine trust if brokers' lists are reliable. One of these lists sent out from New York last September quotes the raw manilla and sisal hemp at 11¼ cents a pound. The manufacturers figure on 2 cents a pound as the cost of manufacture and his profit, which jobbers regard as reasonable. The jobber adds another 2 cents, and claims that he cannot transact the business on a less margin, considering the possibility of a crop failure and of carrying the country dealers until crops can be harvested. This brings the price to the farmer from the retailer at about 16 cents. The cordage company figures that as a combine they can buy the raw material perhaps a half cent less a pound, which they assert does not affect the price to the farmer one way or the other, for if they didn't combine the farmer would have to pay 16 cents, and if they do combine he pays no more; that there would be no object in a combination to the manufacturers, unless they could make by it—they certainly would not combine for the pleasure there might be in it.

Is there a remedy for the high price of twine within reach of the farmer? One farmer says there is through the medium of jute twine, which is cheaper than manilla or sisal, and also poorer. But its use would turn the demand away from manilla and, the raw material would have to be sold cheaper to insure its sale."

"That is all right as a theory," said another dealer, "but it cannot be put in practice. The northwestern farmer has to harvest his crop in six or seven days, and he cannot afford to take any chances from trouble with twine or thinks he cannot. I tried two years ago to introduce American hemp to the farmers because it is cheaper, but they would have none of it. Until they are willing to try something else they must pay the price of manilla twine. The American hemp is good and it is cheap. I finally got out about 500 pounds in this way. I shipped a sack of manilla and a sack of American to each farmer who agreed to try it. He was to try the American first and if it failed to at once put on the manilla without loss of time, return the American and get a sack of manilla in its place. The American worked well, yet last year the farmers wouldn't touch it. In Ohio they will have nothing else."

The jobber argued that he was working solely in the interest of the farmer. It did not pay him to bother with the American hemp, but the farmer did not dare try it, fearing there would be a break when put in the harvester that would cause delay.

A thing that has a tendency to keep the price of twine up is the delay in making purchases. Everything is left until the last moment. The farmer does not like to buy until he sees his crop flourishing. The jobber holds back on his stock until he hears from the farmer. The manufacturer does not wish to go it blind, and after putting out a conservative product, waits for returns. If the crop should prove to be large there would at once be a scarcity of twine and prices would probably go up. Had there not been a large supply of twine held over last year, it is asserted that there would have been an advance. The manufacturer is not now realizing as profit, it is claimed, over one-third of what he did five years ago. The increased cost of the raw material has cut it down. This is a survey of the twine situation as seen through the dealers' estimates."

There is a point in the above to which we wish to call attention, and that is the efforts that the farmers are really making to down the twine trust. Some of them are, but more of them don't seem to be taking any especial pains to better their condition. Last year Mr. M. R. Brown procured several bales of jute and hemp twine which he distributed among such prominent farmers as Capt. H. W. Donaldson, of Kittson Co., Hon. Geo. R. Roberts, of Marshall Co., and in Polk County, E. S. Corser, G. M. Fisk, Edward Lanctot, E. E. Lommen, E. D. Childs, F. Rauenbuchler and Charles Johnson, with the express understanding and agreement on their part that they would give the samples a faithful trial and report the result, whatever that result should be, sometime before Jan. 1st. Mr. Brown's idea was to obtain a twine that would do the work cheaper than manilla, and he wanted the report in time, so that if it was found that jute and hemp would do the work there would be plenty of time to manufacture in sufficient quantity for our use. Mr. Brown informs the writer that Charles Johnson alone reported the result, though he has written the others letters of inquiry, not a word in reply has he received. This shows an unpardonable lack of interest or neglect that is surprising in a matter of so much moment to the farming community, and at a time when we are diligently seeking for some means of escape from the general depression.

The County Alliance.

The County Alliance met pursuant to adjournment on Friday, March 21st, at the Court House, at 2 p. m. OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., MARCH 27, 1890.

Something Must be Done.

The Western Rural.

The government of the United States, as we have sometimes before said, must give its attention to the deplorable condition of our agriculture. There is nothing about which we sit down to write that so humiliates and disheartens us as the lack of our agricultural prosperity. There always appears to be a hand before us pointing to Ireland when we contemplate American agriculture. Yet this is the grandest agricultural country in the world. Our farmers have built our cities and railroads and telegraph lines and palaces and colleges and made the America of to-day the proud, rich powerful nation that it is. And the men who have made the wealth are themselves poor! How like the world in all the ages past. But in this country justice is supposed ever to be sitting on her throne. But the time is here when radical innovations must be made, though they shake our prejudices and do violence to our usual mode of thought. We have got into the habit of thinking that government is a sort of ornament. But we must begin to think that it is a thing of utility. For long years the government has assumed the duty of helping develop our manufactures. The tariff is based upon the theory that it is the right and duty of government to protect its own citizens and its own industries. But if the danger of injury from foreign competition is sufficient to arouse the government to stand at our ports of entry to keep out foreign products, the danger of privileged classes and cut-throat business methods that are now common in the United States, is sufficient to prompt the government to guard our farms from the thieving conspiracies. This government, which cost the farmer so much to support scarcely turns its hand to help the farmer, and if it goes through the motions of helping him the result is a barren ideality. Manufacturers and railroads and Wall Street capitalists get pretty nearly everything they want at Washington. As farmers we are asked to pay to support the money sharks of the East, to pay to support every manufacturer in the land, to pay to protect this industry and that industry, and while we are doing this our own business is going to ruin, and the government leaves us to struggle by ourselves.

The money lender has his grip upon the throats of the men who have gone into the new West to develop farms for the enriching of the nation; his big, grasping claw covers the new West; adversity is upon great numbers of our producers and it really seems to be getting darker instead of becoming brighter. And what is the government doing? It is compelling us to pay something upon every necessary of life in order to protect the business of other classes, but is not even lending a willing ear to a description of our condition and the utterance of our demands. Well, what can the government do, do you ask? The answer is can do anything that it chooses. It can certainly drive back the horde of corporate cormorants who have fattened for years upon the very lives of our farmers. It at least can exercise police control of thieves in broadcloth, as well as it can exercise control of thieves in rags. It can ask what the farmer needs. It can ask what agriculture—without which grass will grow in our streets—requires to make it prosperous, and whatever it needs, this great rich government can do, and this great, rich government must do. It may be possible that some of the millions that are lying idle in the public treasury will be required to restore prosperity to agriculture. If they are needed out with them and set farming upon its feet. The man who does most to make the American government possible must be given a chance.

Down With Them.

Duluth Daily Tribune.

The bucket shops must go. Long enough have they played havoc in the community. There are all sorts of schemes for obtaining money under false pretenses, a fact of which the law has branded as punishable. The bucket shop process is one of the best and most [illegible] of those the arm of the law does not reach properly—best for the schemer, worst for the victims. The President of the Chicago board of trade is good authority on this subject. He is quoted as calling a spade a spade in these vigorous terms:

The bucket shops, which were made possible a few years ago, by the introduction of the "ticker," have multiplied until they are scattered through every city and town in the country. They are sucking the life blood from trade. They annually divert millions of dollars from legitimate business to the worst sort of gambling. A faro bank is not half as bad as a bucket shop. The latter is more dangerous because it is more public and seemingly more respectable. In a square faro game a man has some chance to win, but in bucket shops he plays against loaded dice.

This comparison between bucket-shop and faro bank is striking. The point that the bucket-shop is the more dangerous because everything appears to be above board and respectable is worthy of special emphasis. Many a young man, scrupulous as to his associations and companions, will avoid the gambling den as he would a viper, but will walk into a bucket-shop with [illegible] conscience. Even if the bucket-shop cannot be totally suppressed, as it probably cannot, it should at least be placed so under ban and advertised in its true light to such an extent that the element of respectability shall be entirely eliminated.

The movement of the Chicago board [illegible] is commendable. Opinion seems to differ as to the effectiveness of the abolition of the "ticker" in suppressing the bucket-shop. Probably it will accomplish less than the most sanguine hope, and more than the skeptical expect. It can hardly fail to bring forth some good fruit in the direction indicated.

The effect of the new policy, which is to be inaugurated March 31st, on the business of the board of trade is a minor matter. Here again opinion vary, though the general trend of sentiment seems to be that business will not only not injured, but is likely to be benefited. This is certainly the most rational view. The suppression of illegitimate business can hardly be otherwise, than helpful to legitimate business, in the long run.

The direct bearing of the farmer's finances on general business is a well established fact. The statement of another Chicago board of trader is to the point right here.

Every farmer who buys in a bucket-shop—and they all buy—thinks he is "bulling" the market. But he is really "bearing" it, because he is putting just so much capital into the bucket-shop man's hands to "bear" it here in Chicago. The farmer's money, instead of giving a natural stimulus to prices, is used against him to lower prices. With the country full of bucket-shops, the laws of supply and demand are powerless to regulate prices and trade is a ship with out a rudder.

Down with the bucket-shops! If they cannot be downed entirely, keep them just as low down as possible.

It has been suggested by no less a light than Chas. A. Pilsbury that after the Chicago board of trade gets through with the bucket-shops it would do well to call a halt on gambling on its own floor. The suggestion is rather rough on the Chicago reformers, but, to a man up a tree, it appears in order.

The Holstein-Friesian Register.

The subject of healthful milk, is beginning to attract public. We have often called the attention of our readers to it. We believe that it ought to be followed up "line upon line and precept upon precept." We further believe that no breed of cattle furnishes milk of equal healthfulness to that of the Holstein-Friesian. As evidence of this, we point to the healthfulness of the breed above others, to its constitutional vigor that prevents it from being affected by influences that produce diseases in others, to the size and vigor of its calves, to their growth and healthfulness while being fed on the milk of their dams. We do not propose to draw comparisons with other breeds. Such comparisons would not be in good taste in a journal devoted to a special breed. But we have the right to challenge investigation, to call upon scientific men to study the milk of different breeds in its relation to the health of consumers, and we have the right to ask dairy commissioners to go back of the amount of solids and inquire into the healthfulness of milk over which they have supervision. This subject, as we have repeatedly said, is of a thousand-fold more consequence than the amount of fat, caseine and sugar that milk contains. It is all right for our scientific men and dairy officers to inquire into this, but back of this, the healthfulness of milk, its effect on the young and its liability to transmit disease, looms up as a mountain in the presence of a mole-hill.

Holstein-Friesian Register: That's right, Mr. Bulletin, kick as much as you like; call it a farce, etc. but the fact remains just the same, that the Holstein are the favorites for butter, cheese, milk and beef.

Jersey Bulletin: It would be infinitely better, more proper and bear some weight, if some proof was given instead of mere assertion. Even in this, their own paper, seldom is there to be found a bona fide seven-day butter test, and as to a yearly record of a herd of this breed never is one seen. One looks in vain for reports of the work of whole herds of Holstein cows made in real dairy work, for which so much is claimed, but none appear. It would be pleasing to read a few reports of the cream sold or butter made from a herd of Holsteins. There are some phenomenal yields reported. Lady Baker made a grand good record for herself. She is certainly a fine, dairy cow, perhaps one of the best of the breed, but to prove that they are the "favorites" for the quartet of virtues named by our contemporary, something more than "say-sos" are needed very badly just now.

The trouble with the Jersey men is not an absence of proof of the merits of the black-and-whites, we would suggest to the Bulletin, but the overwhelming evidence that the Holstein-Faiesian is fast becoming the favorite cow for the practical farmer. There have been bona fide seven-day tests enough, dear Bulletin, to cause great fear in the ranks of the admirers of the gentleman's cow. There are quite too many to permit our Jersey friends to rest in peace, and then the public tests at the fairs. Just read the overwhelming records for the fair season of 1889 in this line, and if you are still desirous of seeing a "bona fide" seven-day test, read that of Clothilde 2nd also in this issue, and to steady yourself, and as a finisher, read the list of tests made by Lakeside herd, 90 of these very cows are in that herd to-day. We never saw any record of a Jersey herd that could compare with it. Ninety cows in one herd whose average butter record is 17 lbs. in seven days, and 19.98 lbs of milk to a pound of butter. Forty-two of these record are those of two and three-year old heifers. If the Bulletin has looked in vain for the work of whole herds, we can only offer our sympathy for its poor eyesight. Look over your file of the Register again, and then turn to the Advanced Register, and if you don't feel quite satisfied just write to our advertisers. "Ask and it shall be given you." If the Holstein-Friesian were as long established as a breed, as the Jerseys are in this country, the demonstration of their great butter qualities would have been so conclusive that no intelligent dairyman would dare ask which breed yielded the most butter in a year, for fear of exposing his ignorance.

D. 1884, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of and for said County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the fifth day of November A. D. 1884, at eleven o'clock and fifteen minutes in the forenoon in book "R" of mortgages at pages 594, 595, 596 and 597, mortgaged to John Knuppe of said County and State, mortgagee, his heirs and assigns, all the following described tract of land, lying and being in said County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit: The south one-half of the southeast quarter (S½ of SE¼) of Section numbered six (6,) and the north one-half of the northeast quarter (N½ of NE¼) of Section numbered seven (7,) both in Township numbered one hundred fifty-one (151), north, of Range numbered forty-two (42) west, of the fifth principal meridian, being one hundred sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the United States Government survey thereof, said mortgage being given to secure the payment of one certain promissory note in the sum of two hundred twenty dollars ($220) made by the said mortgagor, Emeline Gosselin, and payable to the order of John Knuppe, the mortgagee aforesaid, on the first day of November, A. D. 1887, with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum, payable annually.

And whereas, said John Knuppe, the mortgagee aforesaid, on the tenth day of February A. D. 1885, duly assigned the said mortgage, and the note and debt secured thereby, to Gerrit W. Vis of Saint Paul, Ramsey County, Minnesota, by instrument in writing bearing said date of February tenth A. D. 1885, and recorded in the office of the said Register of Deeds in book "V" of mortgages at page 192, on the seventeenth day of February A. D. 1885 at ten o'clock in the forenoon

And whereas, said Gerrit W. D. 1888. And whereas, the said mortgagor failed and neglected to pay the taxes on the said mortgaged premises for the years 1886, 1887 and 1888, so that said premises were sold for non-payment of taxes, and the said Martha Vis was obliged to, and did, on the eighteenth day of February A. And no suit or other proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover or collect the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed, by sale at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, of the said mortgaged premises, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay and satisfy the amount now due on said mortgage, and the amount so paid for taxes as aforesaid, with interest thereon, and twenty-five dollars ($25) attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the legal costs and disbursements of such foreclosure and sale, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, of said Polk County, in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on Friday the eleventh day of April A. Money to Loan.

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance.......$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest.......... 80 00

Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years.........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest.........$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of........ 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years........ 1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest........$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00

Total........$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

BASED ON LAND WEALTH

Stanford's Plan to Establish a Standard for Monetary Values.

LAND IS BETTER THAN BULLION

Locking Up of Money Would Be Impossible with Such a Standard—No Panics.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Herald's Washington special says: I interviewed Senator Stanford upon his financial standard resolution, which was introduced in the senate recently. He said that it was the duty of the government to issue currency upon the value of real property or to authorize the establishment of national banks, with power to put legal tender notes in circulation upon such security which should be guaranteed in their redemption by the treasury of the United States. And why not, he asked. If a national bank purchases bonds issued by the government and, to the extent of 90 cents on the dollar, is authorized to put notes in circulation as currency, of which the general government guarantees the payment; if bullion from the gold mines may be taken to the mint and have its value fixed by the impression of a die; if silver bullion may be accorded free coinage because of its standard and fineness, why may not a farmer, a town property of established, fixed and certain value be used as a basis of a sound and healthful currency?

"I can see no reason," Senator Stanford went on, "why land or town property, having attained a permanent value as indicated by the assessor's estimate or ascertained by impartial valuators, might not be used as currency with as much confidence as the paper obligations of government as the metals produced from mines. I have seen the financial world twice driven from its propriety by the fear lest the excessive production of metals should prove valueless for use of money. When the immense output of gold from the placers of California and Australia reached their maximum the financial world underwent a panic lest gold should become too plentiful for safety, and when the large discoveries of silver in Nevada began to be felt the same alarm pervaded financial circles lest the white metal should become too plentiful for any other use than in the arts.

"The best money is that based upon the wealth of the nation and prosperity and honor of all its people. Currency that has for its security the real property of the country is more surely guaranteed than by bullion produced from the mines and stamped at the national mints. The country owns no mines, and who shall say that the time is distant when private ownership shall hold in trust all the mines and be entitled to all the royalties? And of what value will be the constitutional provision that gives government the right to coin money if it has neither gold nor silver to coin and stamp?

"To coin and issue money for circulation is not the most important function of government. When it is considered that the congress of the United States, the legislatures of the several states and the municipal bodies of incorporated cities are armed with the power of taxation and individual assessors are clothed with the right of valuation for purposes of taxation, and that for the non-payment of taxes the tax collector may sell, without reservation of the rights of minors, absent persons or persons of unsound mind, how much less significant seems the power to coin money and control its volume of circulation.

"That a currency based upon real estate values under limited estimates would increase activities in all industrial employments I have no manner of doubt; nor do I think such a volume of currency would recall the days of George Law, reproduce the Mississippi bubble or the Dutch tulip speculation. Why should the man who has mortgaged for one-half or one-quarter its value the accumulations of his life be more careless in the expenditure of his resources than he would be if he had hypothecated his property under an interest bearing mortgage to a usurer for coin, the interest of which he must pay whether he uses his money or not?

"Such an issue of national currency to the extent of limited millions properly distributed would have for its first effect a quieting of all apprehensions of panic or financial disasters that are sometimes more hard to bear and more ruinous in their consequences than the resulting calamities. There would be no financial panic possible, and all disastrous probabilities be made avoidable. Business activity would have breathed into them new life. The danger of money panics locks gold and silver, in coin or bullion, in the vaults of the banker and money lender, and while gold and silver coin is unusable it is valueless—no man is rich and no community prosperous with hoarded gold. Money, like any other property, is worthless until actively employed."

"Have you spoken with any of your colleagues in the senate in regard to the proposition?" I asked.

"I have gone over it in a general way with a number of senators. They were all apparently well pleased with it."

"It would seem to me senator," I said, "that this plan would give an unusual advantage to people who were possessed of a fair amount of property. For example, if a man's farm were appraised at $50,000 and he were allowed to mortgage it for $20,000 could he not loan this money to his less fortunate neighbor at a good rate of interest—say 6 per cent per annum—and make a handsome profit out of the transaction? To carry the inquiry still further, would this not put the plan in disfavor with those who had no property to mortgage?"

"The man who had the farm could loan the money possibly, but it would be necessarily at a low rate of interest. But grant, for the sake of argument, that he gets 6 per cent. This would give him a net interest of 4 per cent. Is it not quite as proper that the farmer should have this privilege as that a man with $100,000 should be permitted to invest that amount in government bonds, and after depositing the amount with the government have $90,000 in legal tender notes issued to him to do with as he pleased? There is no difference between the two propositions so far as I can see. In each case the credit of the government is pledged to the redemption of the notes. In each case, too, the government is amply protected against loss. But as I have said, the result of this increase in the volume of currency will be to cheapen the rate of interest so that the borrower could make but little by the transaction if he chose to put the money out at interest. It is because the plan will cheapen the rate of interest that capitalists will oppose. On the other hand, the effect of low interest will be to make it popular with the debtor or borrowing class."

"How would you put your plan in operation?" I asked.

"I would have inspectors appointed to appraise the property, and make the loan on the decision rendered by them. The interest which the borrower would pay would furnish a sum sufficient for all the expenses connected with the plan."

"Your idea, then, as I understand it, is not to loan this money from whatever surplus there may be in the treasury, but to issue legal tenders for the amount of the mortgage, as in the case of the national bank."

"That is it precisely."

"How long will this mortgage run?"

"For the man's entire life, if need be, unless, as my resolution states, the government should deem it wise to call in the loan after a certain period."

Bogus Products.

The Western Rural.

One of our contemporaries says that if oleomargarine is bad, its manufacture should be prohibited, instead of taxing the product or so-called product. As we think and know it is bad, we will agree that its manufacture should be stopped. But to advocate that a thing should not be licensed or taxed in any other way because it is good—which is the inference from the remark that our contemporary makes—is a curious doctrine. We are licensing, and have been licensing for a century in this country, things that are both good and bad. The protection of our "infant industries" is a theory which applies to this subject of taxing butterine, however good it might be. The advocates of a protective tariff say that it is better for our whole people to protect our manufacturing interests. The theory may be both right and wrong. There are industries in this country which we believe should be encouraged—the sweet producing industry, for instance, although it would, in our opinion, be much more efficient for the government to offer a bounty for sugar production than to impose a tariff upon imported sweets. But we do not believe that there is any one who will say that there are industries that need special encouragement. Agriculture is one of these industries, and the first one of all; and it is the industry that has received mighty little protection or encouragement. It will be agreed among all people that to abandon our farms would be the ruin of the country. The farming should be protected from ruinous competition. City capital and scientific ingenuity and despicable greed should not be permitted to imitate an important product of the farm, when the farmer absolutely needs the income from that product to keep himself afloat, and we go so far even as to declare that this should not be permitted, though the imitation product was better than the natural.

Farming should be encouraged; farming must be encouraged. We lay that down as an indisputable fact. Well, how is it to be encouraged? Here comes capital and inventive genius and originates something that looks like butter and has the flavor of butter. It can be produced cheaper than butter, and if the government permits its unrestricted manufacture and sale, it will drive butter out of the market and the farmer out of dairying. Can the farmer stand this? Suppose he can. Suppose he can make enough profit from grain growing and meat production and from his other products to make him prosperous. But now comes another block of capital and sells cotton seed oil for lard; another concern starts up to manufacture bogus vinegar; another finds a mixture for flour and heaven only knows where this adulterating business will stop if left to itself. The first thing the prosperous farmer knows, city greed is putting on the market an imitation of most of his products. His prosperity is destroyed. If it is not the province of government to step in and protect an industry that government cannot be sustained without, from such a competition, then the first law of nature—self-protection—is not applicable to government.

But how much more need of such protection at a time when agriculture is not prosperous, when it is going down, instead of up hill. The farmer cannot afford to be driven out of any branch of his business; he needs every cent he can get from his grain from his meat producing animals, from his eggs and from his butter. Talk of protecting our manufacturing interests! It is of vastly more importance that our agriculture should be protected, and taxing oleomargarine is in the line of protection.

Government Railroad Ownership.

The Western Rural.

Mr. Blackstone, President of the Alton railroad, in his annual report says that the government might with propriety own the railroads, and he lays down a plan by which the government might operate them. It is not likely that Mr. Blackstone was very sincere in what he says. It is more probable that he intended to protest against government interference with the management of the roads. He says that of 620 railroad corporations only eighty-three were able to pay dividends in 1888. That is the old song that has been sung, without variation, for several years. What of it, if but eighty-three roads did pay dividends in 1888? How much did they pay and what proportion of the stock on which they paid dividends was watered stock? If the watered stock of the roads that paid dividends had been eliminated, would not the profits of these eighty-three roads have been sufficient to pay a very handsome dividend upon all the real railroad stock of the country, if it could have been distributed? And if that is true, is it not the fact that there are eighty-three railroads in this country that are robbing the life out of our industries and especially our agriculture?

What right has Mr. Blackstone to speak for all the railroads of the country when speaking of their aggregate profits? What right has he to take into consideration in this connection the Nickel Plate—an expensive system that was no more needed than a coach needs a fifth wheel; or the Illinois end of the Santa Fe, which came here to share the business which other existing roads were abundantly able to do, or the railroad from Tombigby to Podunk, which was never needed. The fact is—and Poore stated it in his railroad manual two or three years ago—that the earning of all the railroads are sufficient to pay ten per cent upon the cost and equipment of all the roads. So far as Mr. Blackstone is concerned, it is the earning of his road that the people are interested in.

The people of this country mean to be treated justly by the roads, however, even if the government acts upon Mr. Blackstone's suggestion and becomes the owner of the roads. It may come to that yet. It ought to come to it, if there is no other more practical way of stopping railroad robbery.

Acknowledgment of the Situation.

The Western Rural.

It is with a high degree of impatience that we ever witness an attempt upon the part of anybody to make it appear that the farmer's present condition is the result of his own imprudence, or to show that all the talk about the lack of agricultural prosperity is nothing but moonshine. Such attempts are made, and sometimes by agricultural journals, which as professed representatives of the farmer, ought to be willing to tell the whole truth. A few days since we saw the statement made that the farmer who was out of debt was not complaining to the unprofitableness of agriculture. The inference naturally was that farming was profitable enough, but that the debtor farmers were compelled of use all their profits in the payment of their debts, and having nothing left, were harping upon the alleged fact that farming did not pay. It is true enough, we suppose, that the farmer who owes nothing and a bank account to carry him along, is not complaining like one who has nothing. That is natural. But that fact does not show that farming is a good paying business. Nothing can show that, for it is not a fact. When it costs a State millions of dollars more to grow a crop than the producers can get for it; when cattle are sold in the market by the thousands for less than it costs to produce them; when interest is eating the very life out of the agricultural industry; when all classes with whom the farmer deals are combined to rob him and do rob him; there is no sophistry that can make the dark picture bright even in spots.

The farmer is down in the valley; he is down at the bottom of the ladder; his condition cannot be much worse than it is, and it will never be made better by the effort upon the part of any portion of the press that pretends to represent him, to hide this state of the fact that agriculture is the chief industry of the country. Those who generally act as if they did not recognize it, are driven by the force of circumstances occasionally to acknowledge it. This recognition is greatly in our favor; it favors the work of reform; and if we are faithful and keep the real and deplorable condition of agriculture prominently before the people, we shall certainly secure reform. When we can show that the bankruptcy of the farmer means the bankruptcy of the merchant and manufacturer, and the paralysis of all other industries; when it is realized that the safety of society itself depends upon prosperous tillers of the soil, we shall have the co-operation of all classes—except the professional plunderers—in instituting measures that will result in a better state of things on our farms. Brethren of the agricultural press, let us be faithful to our trust; let us recognize the plain, unmistakable fact that our agricultural prosperity must be revived and on the line of reviving it let us hold the fact that farming is the poorest paying business in this country to-day constantly before the people.

The Right Kind of Politics.

Lake Superior News.

The Northfield News makes the following observation concerning the Farmer's Alliance.

If this combination of farmers is kept from politics, as it is claimed will be done, great good will result to the farmers, in more ways than one.

If our contemporary means "partisan politics," The News agrees with them. But if he means that the Alliance shall take no part in the discussion of the political questions of the time, this journal differs with him. The very object for which the Alliance has been formed would be defeated by such a course. The Farmers' Alliance of Minnesota should be neither Republican or Democrat, but it should be in a position to help improve the character of both parties and aid in securing such legislation as will result in the best good to the people in general.

In a broad sense, no citizen and no organization of citizens, should keep out of politics. Politics has to do with the welfare of every individual, and the man who neglects it is false to his own private interests as well as to the public weal.

The Farmers' Alliance has much to do with politics, and The News hopes to see it not the machine of the demagogue or the agent of partisan selfishness but a strong, conservative, independent power for the people's good.

BASED ON LAND WEALTH

Stanford's Plan to Establish a Standard for Monetary Values.

Locking Up of Money Would Be Impossible with Such a Standard—No Panics.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Herald's Washington special says: I interviewed Senator Stanford upon his financial standard resolution, which was introduced in the senate recently. He said that it was the duty of the government to issue currency upon the value of real property or to authorize the establishment of national banks, with power to put legal tender notes in circulation upon such security which should be guaranteed in their redemption by the treasury of the United States. And why not, he asked. If a national bank purchases bonds issued by the government and, to the extent of 90 cents on the dollar, is authorized to put notes in circulation as currency, of which the general government guarantees the payment, if bullion from the gold mines may be taken to the mint and have its value fixed by the impression of a die, if silver bullion may be accorded free coinage because of its standard and fineness, why may not a farmer, a town property of established, fixed and certain value be used as a basis of a sound and healthful currency?

"I can see no reason," Senator Stanford went on, "why land or town property, having attained a permanent value as indicated by the assessor's estimate, or ascertained by impartial valuators, might not be used as currency with as much confidence as the paper obligations of government as the metals produced from mines. I have seen the financial world twice driven from its property by the fear lest the excessive production of metals should prove valueless for use of money. When the immense output of gold from the placers of California and Australia reached their maximum the financial world underwent a panic lest gold should become too plentiful for safety, and when the large discoveries of silver in Nevada began to be felt the same alarm pervaded financial circles, lest the white metal should become too plentiful for any other use than in the arts.

"The best money is that based upon the wealth of the nation and prosperity and honor of all its people. Currency that has for its security the real property of the country is more surely guaranteed than by bullion produced from the mines and stamped at the national mints. The country owns no mines, and who shall say that the time is distant when private ownership shall hold in trust all the mines and be entitled to all the royalties? And of what value will be the constitutional provision that gives government the right to coin money if it has neither gold nor silver to coin and stamp?

"To coin and issue money for circulation is not the most important function of government. When it is considered that the congress of the United States, the legislatures of the several states and the municipal bodies of incorporated cities are armed with the power of taxation and individual assessors are clothed with the right of valuation for purposes of taxation and that for the non-payment of taxes the tax collector may sell, without reservation of the rights of minors, absent persons or persons of unsound mind, how much less significant seems the power to coin money and control its volume of circulation.

"That a currency based upon real estate values under a limited estimate would increase activities in all industrial employment I have no manner of doubt, nor do I think such a volume of currency would [illegible] George I. [illegible] the Mississippi bubble or the Dutch tulip speculation. Why should the man who [illegible] mortgage [illegible] one half [illegible] accumulations [illegible] less in the [illegible] than he would be [illegible] hypothecated his property under [illegible] mortgage to a [illegible] whether he [illegible] money [illegible]

"Such an issue of national currency to the extent of limited millions properly distributed would have for its first effect a quieting of all apprehensions of panic or financial disasters that are sometimes more hard to bear and more ruinous in their consequences than the resulting calamities. There would be no financial panic possible, and all disastrous probabilities be made avoidable. Business activity would have breathed into them new life. The danger of money panics locks gold and silver, in coin or bullion, in the vaults of the banker and money lender, and while gold and silver coin is unusable it is valueless—no man is rich and no community prosperous with hoarded gold. Money, like any other property, is worthless until actively employed."

"Have you spoken with any of your colleagues in the senate in regard to the proposition?" I asked.

"I have gone over it in a general way with a number of senators. They were all apparently well pleased with it."

"It would seem to me, senator," I said, "that this plan would give an unusual advantage to people who were possessed of a fair amount of property. For example, if a man's farm were appraised at $50,000 and he were allowed to mortgage it for $20,000 could he not loan this money to his less fortunate neighbor at a good rate of interest—say 8 per cent per annum—and make a handsome profit out of the transaction? To carry the inquiry still further, would this not put the plan in disfavor with those who had no property to mortgage?"

"The man who had the farm could loan the money possibly, but it would be necessarily at a low rate of interest. But grant, for the sake of argument, that he gets 6 per cent. This would give him a net interest of 4 per cent. Is it not quite as proper that the farmer should have this privilege as that a man with $100,000 should be permitted to invest that amount in government bonds, and after depositing the amount with the government have $90,000 in legal tender notes issued to him to do with as he pleased? There is no difference between the two propositions so far as I can see. In each case the credit of the government is pledged to the redemption of the notes. In each case, too, the government is amply protected against loss. But as I have said, the result of this increase in the volume of currency will be to cheapen the rate of interest, so that the borrower could make but little by the transaction if he chose to put the money out at interest. It is because the plan will cheapen the rate of interest that capitalists will oppose. On the other hand, the effect of low interest will be to make it popular with the debtor or borrowing class."

"How would you put your plan in operation?" I asked.

"I would have inspectors appointed to appraise the property, and make the loan on the decision rendered by them. The interest which the borrower would pay would furnish a sum sufficient for all the expenses connected with the plan."

"Your idea, then, as I understand it, is not to loan this money from whatever surplus there may be in the treasury, but to issue legal tenders for the amount of the mortgage as in the case of the national bank."

"That is it precisely."

"How long will this mortgage run?"

"For the man's entire life, if need be, unless, as my resolution states, the government should deem it wise to call in the loan after a certain period."

Bogus Products.

The Western Rural.

One of our contemporaries says that if oleomargarine is bad its manufacture should be prohibited instead of taxing the product so called. As we think, and know it is bad, we will agree that its manufacture should be stopped. But to advocate that a thing should not be licensed or taxed in any other way because it is good—which is the inference from the remark that our contemporary makes—is a curious doctrine. We are licensing, and have been licensing for a century in this country things that are both good and bad. The protection of our infant industries is a theory which applies to this subject of taxing butterine, however good it might be. The advocates of a protective tariff say that it is better for our whole people to protect our manufacturing interests. The theory may be both right and wrong. There are industries in this country which we believe should be encouraged—the sweet producing industry, for instance, although it would, in our opinion, be much more efficient for the government to offer a bounty for sugar production than to impose a tariff upon imported sweets. But we do not believe that there is anyone who will say that there are industries that need special encouragement. Agriculture is one of these industries, and the first one of all, and it is the industry that has received mighty little protection or encouragement. It will be agreed among all people that to abandon our farms would be ruin of the country. The farming should be protected from [illegible] competition [illegible] capital and scientific ingenuity [illegible] when the farmer [illegible] income from [illegible] down as an indisputable fact. Well, how is it to be encouraged? Here comes capital and inventive genius and originates something that looks like butter, and has the flavor of butter. It can be produced cheaper than butter, and if the government permits its unrestricted manufacture and sale it will drive butter out of the market and the farmer out of dairying. Can the farmer stand this? Suppose he can. Suppose he can make enough profit from grain growing and meat production and from his other products to make him prosperous. But now comes another block of capital and sells cotton seed oil for lard, another concern starts up to manufacture bogus vinegar, another finds a mixture for flour and heaven only knows where this adulterating business will stop if left to itself. The first thing the prosperous farmer knows, oily greed is putting on the market an imitation of most of his products. His prosperity is destroyed. If it is not the province of government to step in and protect an industry that government cannot be sustained without, from such a competition, then the first law of nature—self protection—is not applicable to government.

But how much more need of such protection at a time when agriculture is not prosperous, when it is going down, instead of up hill. The farmer cannot afford to be driven out of any branch of his business; he needs every cent he can get from his grain, from his meat producing animals, from his eggs and from his butter. Talk of protecting our manufacturing interests! It is of vastly more importance that our agriculture should be protected, and taxing oleomargarine is in the line of protection.

Government Railroad Ownership.

The Western Rural.

Mr. Blackstone, President of the Alton railroad, in his annual report says that the government might with propriety own the railroads, and he lays down a plan by which the government might operate them. It is not likely that Mr. Blackstone was very sincere in what he says. It is more probable that he intended to protest against government interference with the management of the roads. He says that of 620 railroad corporations only eighty-three were able to pay dividends in 1888. That is the old song that has been sung without variation for several years. What of it, if but eighty-three roads did pay dividends in 1888? How much did they pay, and what proportion of the stock on which they paid dividends was watered stock? If the watered stock of the roads that paid dividends had been eliminated would not the profits of these eighty-three roads have been sufficient to pay a very handsome dividend upon all the real railroad stock of the country if it could have been distributed? And if that is true, is it not the fact that there are eighty-three railroads in this country that are robbing the life out of our industries, and especially our agriculture?

What right has Mr. Blackstone to speak for all the railroads of the country when speaking of their aggregate profits? What right has he to take into consideration in this connection the Nickel Plate—an expensive system that was no more needed than a coach needs a fifth wheel, or the Illinois end of the Santa Fe, which came here to share the business which other existing roads were abundantly able to do, or the railroad from Tombigby to Podunk, which was never needed? The fact is—and Poor stated it in his railroad manual two or three years ago—that the earnings of all the railroads are sufficient to pay ten per cent upon the cost and equipment of all the roads. So far as Mr. Blackstone is concerned, it is the earning of his road that the people are interested in.

The people of this country mean to be treated justly by the roads, however, even if the government, acting upon Mr. Blackstone's suggestion, should become the owner of the roads. It may come to that yet. It ought to come to it if there is no other more practical way of stopping railroad robbery.

[illegible]

The Western Rural.

Fred Anderson returned from his trip to Butte, Montana last week much enamored with that country. He saw Prof. Thompson who tells him that he is making $25 a week. Fred says business is lively there and it is a Butteful city.

Ladies did you call at Mrs Bangs' yesterday? If not don't fail to do so to-day and see those lovely hats and filagrees. Mrs. B. is determined not to be outdone in her line and her goods speak for themselves.

F. LePage returned last week from a visit to Duluth, Superior and St. Paul. He went with a view to looking up a place to locate a wholesale fruit business and returns convinced that Crookston is the place for it. He will commence business about May 1st.

"Oh, Louise, where did you get that love of a hat? Been to New York?" "Oh, no, I don't have to any more since Minnie and Mrs. J. L. Bailey opened their new store on Broadway. And so reasonable, too, Oh my! You just ought to see that store!"

Farmers, if you must borrow, and want a reasonable loan on your land at the very lowest rates, see George J. McManus, The Farmer.

August Walters is so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to get out as far as the office. He looks as thin as a shad and shows plainly that he has been through a severe siege. He seems to be gaining encouragingly and we hope this may continue.

The Journal has received through the kindness of Hon. S. G. Comstock some No. 1 Hard Red Fyfe wheat for seed. This wheat was raised last year near Regina, in the Assiniboine country, N. W. T., and is said to have yielded 80 bushels per acre. It is a handsome sample and we shall take especial pains to see what it will do for us here.

"McManus gone out of business?"—Oh, no! He has not been buying as many farms as some—but he lends a reasonable amount on good lands at the lowest terms. Money paid when note is signed. J. G. McManus, The Farmer

Geo. Denniston and W. N. Godfrey came in from Maple Bay on Monday. Mr. Godfrey informs The Journal man that he would like to correspond with some good cheese maker with a view to establishing a cheese factory. There are 400 cows in that vicinity and farmers think cheese would beat a creamery business all hollow. Mr. Godfrey's post office address is Maple Bay, Polk Co.

Baby carriages, all kinds. A good large carriage, parasol top, and well made, for $6.00. Others cheap.

Last week the sad news of the sudden death of Pet Bonnell, youngest daughter of engineer John Bonnell was received. She was visiting her aunt in St. Paul and was under a physician's care. The cause is given as heart disease. Miss Bonnell was well known in this city having spent much of her childhood here and many friends sincerely mourn her early death. It is said that her parents are nearly crazed with grief at their terrible bereavement.

Potato Starch Factory.

At the meeting of the Crookston Farmers' Alliance on Saturday last the potato starch factory was the most important question under discussion. About one-half the necessary stock has been subscribed for. All who wish to make a market for potatoes in Crookston, should attend the meeting next Saturday and look the matter up. In a few days seeding will be commenced and then nothing can be done until that is over when it will be pretty late in the season. Turn out to the meeting.

"Just Too Sweet for Anything."

That's what the ladies say of Mrs. I. U. Jennings' new millinery establishment on Robert street. Have you called? If not you have missed a pretty sight.

The following letter was handed us by A. N. Hixon, secretary of the Polk County Farmers' Alliance:

State of Minnesota,
Executive Department,
St. Paul, March 28, 1890.

A. N. Hixson, Esq., Secretary Crookston Farmers' Alliance Crookston:

Dear Sir:—Referring to the communication addressed to me by yourself and associates, in behalf of the beneficiaries under the Seed Grain Act, who now find themselves unable to comply with the requirements of the law, in making payment to the state for the grain furnished, I have to say that, after submitting the matter to the Attorney General, with an earnest desire to find some means by which the State could be authorized to extend needed relief, I find that I am utterly powerless, as governor of the State, to offer any aid, or do anything which shall rebate the terms of the bill, or cause the matter to be held in obeyance until a better condition of things exists.

It is with sincere regret that this conclusion has been reached, after the matter has been thoroughly canvassed by the Attorney General of the State.

In a communication addressed to me the Attorney General, after covering the law points involved, says: "If there was any way in which you could relieve these persons from the distress of the situation I would gladly suggest it, but I very much regret that no authority which you could invoke would offer any relief." Respectfully,

W. R. Merriam, Governor.

Rosebud alliance is the first to take action on the sub-treasury bill. They have forwarded to Comstock a resolution endorsing the bill.

August Wentzel has rented the Cleveland and will be the jolly mine host in the future. August is a good man and knows how to keep hotel.

A farm loan made to a farming farmer, on a farm as is a farm, can be closed up by George J. McManus as quick as you'd buy a bill of groceries.

A. K. Olds, brother of A. A. Olds arrived this week on his way from Hudson Wis., to Spokane Falls, whither he is going to see a sick brother.

The city caucasses and convention were very quiet affairs with scarcely a ripple to disturb the deep serenity. Pat Russel says it is because he was there.

Mason and Robinson (at Herb's old stand) put in a new cigar case this week and have filled it with the choicest brands. The boys are on deck for a rushing business this season.

Reports from the different starch factories in the State show that all made money last fall and that farmers received a good price for their potatoes. We should have a factory here.

T. K. Torgerson was making his usual rounds last week and of course dropped in to renew for The Journal, "for" said he. I have just been re-appointed dept. collector and I must keep posted on what is going on.

The weather for the past week has been a reminder of an old-time winter, not very encouraging for early seeding. Old-timers say that it augurs well for a good crop year and are busy predicting an old-fashioned 25 and 30 bushel crop.

Charlie Bailey has decided to try farming this year and is boss of the Pioneer Dairy. Says he can supply a few more quart customers with nice rich milk at panic prices. Drop him a card at the Carman office if you want some nice milk.

E. C. Davis, who is one of the oldest settlers in Polk County, having seen the first bushel of wheat ever raised in this county, says that he hopes this will be a late spring. Such a spring causes sufficient moisture for the crops and is never followed by early frosts. He predicts a good crop year.

Grand Forks Daily Herald: Mr. Dobson, of Crookston, came over here this morning and after stepping into his friend Rae's store, commenced undoing a parcel of oatmeal cake received directly from Scotland. Jim ate, Dobson ate and blessed the land o' yule and bannocks between mouthfuls.

H. C. and Wm. Tatro and L. D. Felsing began work on their new steamboat on Maple Lake last week. The new craft is to be 12 feet bottom flaring to 16 feet and will be 16x50 overall. The boys are also talking of building a summer hotel. The boat will be in readiness for the opening of the season.

W. G. Hunt was down from King last week and reports alliance work progressing nicely. The alliance now numbers 44 members and growing at every meeting. They have rented a hall for their meetings and are now independent. He thinks there will be no opposition to endorsing the sub-treasury bill when that bill is submitted for action.

A. Sture's sale at Black River last Friday was well attended, but not a very great success. Mr. S. says that farmers are buying nothing that they can by any possibility do without.

Every farmer in this vicinity should turn out to the alliance meeting on Saturday to consider the Starch factory plan. A good steady market for potatoes would help out wonderfully.

Elmer E. Adams, editor of the Fergus Falls Journal, who is supervisor of the census, has made up the list of enumerators for Polk County, and no more applications are desired. The enumerators will not be announced until about May first.

Mr. J. S. LaDue, of Fertile, has purchased of Wilcox & Liggett two fine imported Holstein-Friesian cows and a young Aegis Netherland Prince bull; also a fine span of Percheron mares. Mr. LaDue intends to have one of the finest stock farms in the county.

Parties from Grand Forks have been over trying to make arrangements to buy cream for their institution during the summer.

Mason & Robinson will change the front windows around to the west side and put in an entirely new front to accommodate their large and growing trade.

N. H. Fulton left for Hawley last evening to take charge of the new creamery at that place. The patrons of that creamery are to be congratulated upon securing his services.

J. H. Benedict of Fergus Falls is in the city this week visiting with his friend Fred Rauch and sizing up the country with a view to location.

To renew old loans, pay up railroad lands, etc., etc., see George J. McManus. No loans made to dude farmers, nor on sloughs sand-ridges, alkali flats or hard head stone-quarries—but for good farmers, on good farms, he has the ready cash and lowest rates.

If the efforts of the farmers to obtain a free and open wheat market has any political significance make the most of it. Have they not a RIGHT to take such steps as they see fit? And who is to be the judge of what they SHALL or what they SHALL NOT do. We notice some demagogue sheets are just now in terrible bot water least the farmers shall make a mistake and wring in the cold deck politically, and they are profuse in advice. Never mind.

In the efforts to belittle the farmers' alliance movement, you can see the anxiety of some schemer who is terribly nervous for fear somebody is going to step on his cornfield. The farmers are pursuing the even tenor of their way, regardless of the squealers. The object they seek, a free and open market, is of far more importance to this country than the political preference of any one man or any set of men in it. It is by long odds the most important subject now before the people.

"Give us a free and open market," is the just and reasonable demand of the farmers, and this they must obtain or quit raising wheat. They should draw up a pledge and compel their candidates for the Legislature to sign it and swear to keep it, before they will endorse him; which pledge should bind the candidate in case of election to work for a bill compelling railroads to take care of wheat offered for shipment just the same as they have to care for other goods; also to compel the roads to allow flat houses to be built on their right of way.

The Moorhead News suggests the propriety of selecting a candidate for Governor from the Fifth District, and names, among others, Hon Knute Nelson. Hon. S. G. Comstock and Hon. H. Steenerson, any one of whom would be fully competent, but the only objection to Mr. Nelson is that he has emphatically declared that he will not under any circumstances accept an office. Mr. Comstock we want right where he is, which leaves Mr. Steenerson heir to the News nomination, and the News might go farther and do a great deal worse. Mr. Steenerson is a man fully identified with the interests of the great Northwest, where he has built up a good business, and we believe he would creditably fill the position should he be called upon to do so. He is all right upon the tariff and other leading questions of the day. We second the motion.

A Peculiar Institution.

In the anti-bellum days there was an institution in vogue commonly alluded to as a "peculiar institution" by kid-gloved gentry and the super-sensitive high-toned people—the common people called it slavery. It was an institution that legally required one set of human beings to toil incessantly for the favored few, with no remuneration save food and clothing. This institution was legalized and protected by our free government, and the groans and the cries of the poor oppressed, down trodden laboring men ascended to heaven apparently unheeded. "The mills of the gods grind slow, but they grind exceedingly fine," and in time a few philanthropists began to inquire into this matter and to agitate it among the people. At first, so deeply seated was this iniquity, those who dared to oppose this system were cast out of the synagogue, were ostracised by society, were "lost" mysteriously, but public sentiment was at last thoroughly aroused and the great evil was slain. To-day another "peculiar institution" exists like unto the first in that our wheat raisers are allowed their food and clothes (if they are shrewd and "economical,") but the profits of all the toil which they take under the sun goes elsewhere, and the institution grows more peculiar year by year. Last fall the fiat went forth, "grade no wheat No. 1 Hard" in "the bananna belt." Our millers made the usual amount of No. 1 Hard flour, and there was no lack of "Pillsbury's Best" in all the land. Dissatisfied with this "peculiar" market, some pilgrim, more weary than the rest, sends his wheat to Minneapolis or to Duluth to be graded by the farmers' friend, the State Board—No No. 1 Hard wheat there, either, but he did get a better deal than if he had sold on his offer of No. 3 Northern, or rejected, or something like that. If any miller here had dared to offer the farmer more than the price named by the "peculiar institution" lo, there would straightway be a mill for sale or the audacious customer would have to crawl back into his shell too quick, becomingly suddenly aware that he was becoming too fresh for the system. A few weeks ago the farmers took a day off and went down to St. Paul to see that magnificent old ruins that has cost the state a round sum to build and operate, and there the "peculiar institution" showed the honest granger a sample of No. 3 Northern and told him he was a darned fool, not to raise such stuff if he expected to get No. 1 Hard for it! Poor consolation to him when all of the wheat in the country was in second hands to learn that grades are easier. To-day the institution grades wheat at 64 cents, but go to an elevator to buy it for seed and you have to pay 80 cents for it. Last fall the miller or the independent buyer who dared offer the farmer even a few cents more per bushel for his wheat would be driven out of business, and yet there are people who are filled with wonder that the farmer objects—that he is combining with his brother farmer to secure a free and open wheat market so that he may retain enough of the profits of his toil to pay the interest on his mortgages and his store debts, at least. And there are those who sneer at him and belittle his efforts to benefit, not only himself, but the trade of the vicinity in which he lives, and every one who dares to raise hand or voice in his behalf is straightway vilified and made the subject of ridicule and persecution. The old-time abolitionists fared somewhat worse, for they were tarred and feathered and ridden on rails, but the enlightened sentiment of the present day forbears to treat these "agitators" in this way, quite, and moreover, circumstances are fast driving all to a realizing sense of the fact that the farmers' demand for a free and open market, is a just one, and soon will be the popular idea—when it is accomplished, then will those toad-stool obstructionists shout with one acclaim: "See how me an' Betsy killed that b'ar!" You can't put your hand on a man today who was not an abolitionist befo' the wah!

(Communicated.)

The farmers of the Northwest begin to feel as though it was high time that they took matters in their own hands, instead of letting the milling associations, railroad monopolies, elevator companies and political schemers of every kind own them. We have kept still and been led like the lamb and the bullock to the slaughter, dumb and speechless, and have had the very life's blood sucked from our veins long enough. Quite enough men have been made millionaires off the sweat and toil of honest industry, and while honest laboring farmers, their wives and children, have been compelled to live and subsist upon what they could not sell, and been forced to take almost nothing for their choicest productions, the kid gloved speculators and elevator companies, together with milling associations and railroad monopolies, have been rearing monuments of of wealth and filling their wallets to bursting with the gold they have wrongfully taken from the poor farmer. It is no wonder that when they appear at their rich banquets and social festivities, in company with their wives and daughters, that they are laden with pearl necklaces and decorated with diamonds, the product of honest toil; wrongfully taken in the way of grades, weights and prices made by speculation upon the farmers' products, while the farmer, his wife and children are toiling hard from early morn till late at night, half clad, half fed, and then if compelled to go to town to pay the interest upon their farm, which is mortgaged, because of the robbery perpetrated, or to borrow money upon the little personal property they have in order to procure seed that they may raise another crop, to be robbed of by the class above mentioned, then if one of these dignified, hell-deserving robbers happens to be on the train, they say by their shifting uneasiness, "Why don't these dirty farmers go a foot, or why are they allowed to intrude upon us? Why, they should ride in a box car or on a carload of wood. Why are they allowed the comforts of a coach, even if they do pay full fare; why, we are favored with a pass or reduced rates, and we don't want to inhale the perfumes of the stables on the farm; all we want is the clean wheat with all the chaff blown out; we like fresh eggs and butter, but we don't want to associate with honest producers nor pay no more than half the value of their products!" Well, we will shortly see whether they will continue to steal them or pay the real worth of them and to the proper persons.

ALLIANCE.

MAPLE BAY, March 30, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I will send you an account of our last meeting which please insert in your paper if you can find room. At a meeting of Godfrey Farmers' Alliance, No. 651, held March 1st, 1890, the following business was transacted: Meeting called to order at 12, noon, by T. M. Nelson, temporary chairman. B. S. Bale, John Goodmandson and John O. Kilvik were appointed a committee on credentials. P. W. Horton was elected president, B. S. Bale vice-president, D. T. Mitchel, secretary, and P. S. Medchill, treasurer. T. M. Mekson, John Goodmandson and D. T. Mitchell were appointed financial committee; also to act as committee on resolutions. W. N. Godfrey, John Hanson and D. T. Mitchel were appointed a committee on by-laws.

March 29, 1890.

By-laws read by the secretary but not fully adopted, being reserved for further discussion at next meeting. An appropriation was made to buy the necessary books for the alliance. A discussion about the practicability of starting a cheese factory led to W. N. Godfrey being appointed to open communication with men who are, or were, in that line of business. The available cows were reckoned at between three and four hundred.

D. T. MITCHELL, Sec.

We notice a disposition on the part of some business men in different parts of the county to regard the alliance movement with suspicion. There is nothing in it that any one satisfied with a legitimate profit need be afraid of—our farmers only seek to better their condition through an open market for their wheat, and this is to the advantage of all.

FOSSTON, March 29, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: I will send you a few lines to let your many friends know how Rosebud Alliance, No. 666, is progressing. We have now 98 members; 24 joined at last meeting held on Saturday, March 22d. A resolution was passed instructing the president to write our members in Congress urging them to support the sub-treasury bill. This alliance has under consideration a project for building a grain warehouse. The subject was brought up for discussion and laid over till next meeting, April 5th, at which time we expect our alliance will be above par—i. e. over 100. Everybody is talking and thinking alliance now days. Come out and see us. Yours truly,

HANS O. SAMPSON, Sec.

ONSTAD, March 30, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: Onstad and Russia Farmers' Alliance, No. 677, met in school district No. 91, town of Liberty, March 27th. Seven new members were enrolled. Our organization now numbers 44 members. And so goes on the good work. Friend farmers, carry the alliance to your neighbors if they will not come to it. Our next meeting will be held on Saturday, April 5th, 1890.

W. A. MARIN, Sec.

Edna's Suit Fails.

Daily Globe: Judge Brill has decided that Edna P Webb is not entitled to relief in her action against Robert P. Lewis et al., and that the mortgage in question was duly foreclosed. The findings of facts show that in 1882 Isaac W. Webb executed a promissory note in favor of Richard H. Laimbeer for $4,000. In 1877 Webb and wife gave Laimbeer a mortgage on the land, and in 1878 conveyed the same by a deed in fee to Robert A. Smith as receiver, in pursuance of an order of court. In 1879 Smith, as receiver, with consent of Isaac Webb, conveyed the land to the plaintiff, Edna P. Webb. The mortgage was foreclosed to satisfy a claim aggregating $4,653.86. The land at the time of the foreclosure was worth $5,000, and now is worth $75,000.

The Wadena Tribune: The farmer who makes a success of his own business can, as a rule, take proper care of any public business entrusted to him, which he is willing to undertake. It is a misfortune that these solid business men are not the kind generally put forward. They are modest and not self-seeking. They attend conscientiously to their own affairs, while the loud-mouthed jaw-wagger who makes a failure of everything he attempts, usually foists himself on his neighbors so persistently, that he cannot be shaken off without a neighborhood row, in which but few self-respecting men care to engage. Hence the failure of relief measures year after year. If the level-headed farmers, of which there are plenty, were put to the front regardless of the clamor of these professional "reformers" and tongue-wobblers, there would be less cause for complaint.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., APRIL 3, 1890.

McIntosh Times.

The King Alliance met at Solberg's hall Sasurday afternoon, 17 members were presdnt. Nine new members joined the alliance which now has a membership of 44. Daniel Carroll was elected Vice President to fill a vacancy. C. E. Southmayd, of Lindsey, was present and explained the difference between the methods used in docking wheat by the local elevators and those used by the state inspection force, and exhibeted one of the sieves used for that purpose by the force, he says that some wheat from which only one pound of dirt can be cleaned out through the sieve used by the inspection force will clean out seven pounds through the sieve used by the elevator companies. The committee on resolutions and by-laws made its report, which was unanimously adopted with a few slight amendments. John Crythen addressed the meeting in relation to the work done by the state alliance at St. Paul and by the county alliance at Crookston, and emphatically endorsed the temperance plank in the alliance platform. We see that many oi the farmers seem to feel that the merchants are opposed to the alliance and its work, but this should not be the case, the primary object of the alliance is to better the condition of the agricultural classes, and as whatever improves the condition of the agricultural classes is a substantial benefit to the merchants of an agricultural community, there should be no friction between the merchants and the alliance. Let the merchants take hold and help the alliance to obtain a better market and better prices and they will reap their reward in better customers and larger sales.

TOPEKA, KAN., March 17.—The Farmers' Alliance, which has within six months become the most powerful farmers' organization Kansas has ever known, has through its president, addressed an open letter to the Kansas deligation in congress, calling their attention to the alarming condition of the agricultural interests of the state and demanding legislation for their relief. The letter says:

"We call attention to the fact that a single law firm in one city in Southern Kansas now has the contract for the foreclosure of 1,800 mortgages. This means 1,800 homesteads transferred from the hands of so many industrious families to the hands of capitalists, either domestic or foreign. The foreclosure of these mortgages is in accordance with a preconceived purpose to gain possession of these farms and people them with a more severe tenantry imported from foreign lands for this especial purpose. Foreclosures and evictions are taking place in very many parts of our state, and we need not go all the way to Europe to witness scenes of cruelty in matters of this kind. All over the state the homes of people are imperiled. They are struggling against edverse circumstances and almost against hope to sustain themselves until relief shall come.

"The people believe that these conditions are largely due to vicious legislation. They have been promised by each of the great political parties that something would be done for their relief; both parties have been tried, and both have thus far failed even to attempt any measure contemplating a betterment of the condition of the industrial masses. They have seen that while they have been compelled to sacrifice their products in many instances absolutely below cost of production in order to procure the common necessities of life and in the effort, in many cases unsuccessful, to keep the sheriff from invading their homes, their representatives in congress are engaged in the consideration of every imaginable question except such questions as contemplate relief of the distress of their constituents. There are measures which the farmers demand shall have immediate consideration. These relate to question of money, of transportation, and to their ownership of American lands.

"The distress of the people is crying aloud for relief. They believe that very many of the questions that are receiving the attention of congress are far less urgent than this, upon which the safety of their homes and the wellfare of their families depend. They believe that the white citizens of Kansas have some rights as well as colored citizens of the South. They believe that fallen heroes, both white and black, in past struggles for liberty and the perpetuity of our instutions, can afford to wait for one moment until the rights of living heroes in the present struggle for American homes receive some recognition by the men who have been chosen to represent them in congress. Behind these demands are more than 100,000 ballots in the state of Kansas, and the time is coming and is not far distant when legislators will heed the voice of their constituents."

Each year on his loan for interest 80 00

Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years.........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest .... $ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of.......... 500 00
When the loan is due he pays. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years.......................... 1500 00

As much within $184 40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest.................................$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00

Total.....................................$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he diee during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Report of Seed Wheat.

How to Obtain It and How to Kill Weeds, Etc.

BY W. M. HAYS AND D. N. HARPER OF THE EXPERIMENT STATION, UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA, ST. ANTHONY PARK.

Originally the conditions for raising wheat in the Red River Valley were nearly perfect. The wheat matured earlier, filled better, and was of highest value for milling. But frosts, rusts, weeds, too loose a condition of the soil, winds, droughts, poor seed, and in many cases poor methods for cultivation have all worked to produce poorer wheat. Doubtless there will be better seasons than the last two but the farmers have a very important part to perform in assuring good crops. Unfavorable conditions must be fought; weeds may be destroyed by cultivating their seeds into the surface of the stubble land by means of a cutaway, a disk or other harrow so they will sprout in the Spring before summer-fallowing. Millet or other quickly growing crops may be sown in the Spring and thus besides helping to kill the weeds the land is enriched by a crop of green manure. Raising annual forage crops as millet, corn, or peas and oats mixed (2½ bu. of peas to 2 or 3 pecks of oats) will not only help to kill weeds and take the place of summer fallowing, but will also make valuable forage. So timothy and possibly other perrennial meadow and pasture plants in short "grass-lays" furnishing valuable feeds, will rest and compact the soil and kill the weeds. On nearly all soils the press-drill greatly assists germination and gives the plant its best conditions by putting the wheat in well without disturbing most of the surface of the soil. Harrowing or rolling wheat when four inches high compacts the soil, kills weeds and directly does the wheat good. Stock are of great importance as they compact and manure the soil while they make use of hay, pasturage and other crops grown in restful rotations. Any side line if it merely pays expenses, which rests the soil and leaves it in good condition for wheat, will be profitable to the wheat growing farmer. He can even invest some labor to caring for stock during the winter, without hope of direct return, if it will enable him to raise wheat more profitably.

Just now good seed is of most immediate importance. Twenty-five to fifty cents increase in cost per acre, invested in thoroughly good wheat will yield several hundred per cent on the investment. The recent institutes have confirmed the former observations that "frozen" wheat has yielded wheat of similar appearance and worthlessness. Such wheat contains no gluten or only small quantities of very inferior quality, and wheat containing such grains should never be used for seed. In some cases it may pay to clean out these grains and use the balance but as a rule it is safest and most profitable to not do so but to get good new seed. The mere fact of wheat growing is no assurance of a good yield. If the grain has a sound germ and the proper kind and quantity of food it will grow and produce well, unless conditions in nature, over which we have no control, prevent. But if the germ is not sound or the proper food not there even the most favorable conditions will not assure a good crop. Some wheat that does not mill well may yet contain a considerable quantity of good seed which can be cleaned out but it needs good judgment and caution to determine. It is safest to seed the heaviest, plumpest, strongest wheat which is the best. For seed we want first of all the heaviest grains and then the largest; and by cleaning we can get these. Such wheat offers greater resistance to unfavorable conditions. All seed should be thoroughly cleaned to remove the small grains as well as the weed seeds and dirt. This can be done by several of the wheat cleaning mills, exceptionally well by the Beeman wheat grader. The blast of the ordinary fanning mill does this fairly well if the motion is high, the wings opened to their full capacity, and the sieves arranged so that the wheat is separated mainly by blowing and not so much by shaking. A seed wheat cleaning mill is needed, which separates first the large kernals and then by a blast removes all but the heaviest of these. In some wheat only a small part of the larger grains need to be blown out, while in other cases more than half of the larger grains will, upon trial, be found light. If enough heavy wheat cannot be obtained out of that saved for seed it is wise to change seed. But there is usually no need and no wisdom in paying fancy prices. "Variety is the spice of life" for plants as well as animals, and an occasional change of seed is a grand thing for the wheat and for the farmer —because it pays. It has been shown by numerous very careful experiments, patiently carried out, that every kind of plant has what we might call a digestion peculiar to itself. Man may improve by a change of food or a change of surroundings and a plant does the same thing. We want to make sure that when we change wheat we get such as has been previously healthy and at present sound. It is well for a farmer to continually use his own seed but it is not well for him to attempt to pedigree it on the same farm under the same local climatic conditions. The farmers having farms considerably apart under different local conditions and different kinds of soil can continually exchange and thus pedigree their wheat. That will be the best insurance that either of them can possibly have. The farmers clubs may be instrumental in carrying this out. The most intelligent seedgrowers the world over make this changing from one good soil to another a principal of their business and it is a large factor of their success. It has been found beneficial to change timber wheat to prarie soil, wheat grown on sandy land to heavier land, wheat grown on heavy bottom land to prarie, etc.

Just now it may be well to cut down the acreage and pay closer attention to the selection of seed etc.

Don't crop your land so often in succession particularly with the same wheat.

Prof. Harper makes report of the samples of wheat submitted for examination. They are conservative statements but are not, of course, guarantees of good crops in any case. Where your wheat is the product of poor frozen wheat of 1888 it will be wise to get new seed; even if by cleaning what you have a fair qulity can be gotten. It has been proven in various places that by sowing good seed well cleaned to get the densest, the crops yielded have immediately greatly increased. By continuing this practice the wheat has maintained its first improvement.

"Frozen" wheat includes both that which is the crop from the frozen wheat of 1888 and that which was actually frozen last year. In cleaning make sure to get all of these grains out.

Jas. P. Marcum, Crookston; 1888 wheat; frosted and best not use any of this; but if absolutely necessary clean out not less than one-third.

Jno. Dryer, Red Lake Falls; 36 per cent. all right, 36 per cent. frozen, balance badly shrunken; badly degenerated and none should be used for seed; every reason for a change.

Andrew Larson, Valley P. O.; good; clean for density.

H. C. Scribner, Carman; ditto.

J. W. Kelley, Sletten P. O.; 30 per cent. frozen; 30 per cent. badly shrunken and immature; balance O. K.; cannot safely be cleaned and for every reason best get new seed.

Ole Rosenwater, Fisher; looks run out and best get new seed; otherwise clean not less than one-third.

Frank Bivins, Crookston; shows frost last year; 2 per cent. frozen, balance all right; clean out at least one quarter.

Jno. Amundson, Crookston; about one-third frozen and one-third badly shrunken; not safe to use any of this and there is every reason for a change of seed.

J. Finn, Gentilly; 55 per cent. frozen; 25 per cent. sound, rest badly shrunken; not safe to use any for seed.

A. D. Berry, Red Lake Falls; 20 per cent sound, one-half the balance badly frozen; not safe to use any; every reason for a renewal of good seed.

Job Dougherty, Crookston; a few frozen grains but otherwise sound; in some grains the germ is injured by bleaching; clean out at least 25 per cent.

Theo. Greenhalgh, Crookston; looks to have run out and best change for new sound seed; otherwise clean out at least one-third; a few frozen grains.

J. P. Bullan, Crookston; about like above but poorer; a change of seed is very desirable, but if impossible to do this, clean 20 per cent.

E. D. Childs & Co., Carman; 30 per cent. frozen and some grains show effect of frost this year; 20 per cent. sound, one-half of balance badly shrunken and blistered; ought not to be seeded.

Vila Major, Gentilly; 56 per cent. frozen, rest badly shrunken; no sound grains in sample and none of it should be seeded; in an exceptionally favorable season 20 per cent. of grains might produce a passable wheat but it is too hazardous to try; make a change.

M. E. Bartlett, Crookston; 16 per cent. frozen and 48 per cent. O. K., balance badly shrunken; looks worn out and best change, but if used, at least 50 per cent. ought to be cleaned out.

H. O. Tatro, Woodside; Timber wheat and prime for seed; clean for density; a good change for some one on prairie.

Jno. Gilbert, Fisher; clean out 15 to 25 per cent. to get out shrunken grains and for density.

O. G. Tracy, Glyndon; O. K.; clean for density to at least 10 per cent., and better if more is separated.

L. J. Regeimbal, Crookston; an occasional frozen grain; balance O. K.; clean for density 10 per cent. or even better.

D. W. Hughes, Crookston; some grains show the effects of frosts this year; an occasional frozen grain; clean out at least 25 to 30 per cent.

L. Davis, Crookston; 14 per cent. frozen, 48 per cent. sound and rest badly shrunken; clean out at least 60 per cent., but best change for other seed; general degeneracy.

Fred Copp, Excel, Marshall Co. 70 per cent. frozen and product of frozen grains and 16 per cent. O. K., balance badly shrunken; ought not to be sown and there is every reason of a renewal of good seed.

P. Martell, Gentilly; in some grains germ has started to unfold; some frozen grains, but for the most part O. K.; at least 25 per cent. ought to be cleaned out.

Henry D. Sweet, Fisher; O. K.; only necessary to clean for density.

Adolph Reichel, Red Lake Falls; about 30 per cent are crop from frozen grains and about one-half of the rest are O. K.; ought not to be seeded as at least 60 per cent would need to be cleaned out, and then no assurance of it being first class; Second sample not so good. Every reason for a renewal of good seed.

Chas. Regeimbal, Crookston; No. 2; ought to clean out 15 per cent to 30 per cent; may be most economical to change.

H. C. Scribner, Carman; clean out at least 20 per cent for density.

C. Baillargren, Crookston; a few grains, about 5 per cent that might grow and produce good wheat, but the balance are for the most part frozen. None of this should be seeded; every reason for a renewal of good seed.

Jens K. Pederson, Carman; all right. Clean for density.

N. Brosseau, Gentilly; clean out at least 25 per cent for density; an occasional frozen grain.

Lyman Clark, Rocksbury, St. Hiliare; cannot be safely used for seed as 75 per cent is frozen; should get new seed as there is every reason for a renewal.

C. Houston, Fairfax; O. K. if 25 per cent is cleaned out.

A. C. Merril, Fisher: looks to have run out on the farm; best change but otherwise clean to get the heaviest.

G. M. Fisk, Carman; may make good seed if 25 per cent is cleaned out; about 5 per cent is frozen.

J. R. McMahan, Fairfax; looks run out and best change; otherwise clean out at least 40 per cent.

D. Scully, Gentilly; every reason to make a change seed now; otherwise clean out at least one-third. about 5 per cent are frozen.

Robert A. Rose, Fisher: some poor grains; clean out at least 25 per cent for density.

E. A. Sweet, Fisher; an occasional frozen grain; best change for new seed; but if impossible clean out at least one-fourth.

A. Berthiaume, Gentilly; about 20 per cent. sound, one-half of the balance frozen; none should be seeded and every reason for a change.

J. E. Chilback, Crookston; No. 2; a few frozen grains and many badly shrunken; best to change, but may be able to make fair seed if at least one-quarter is cleaned out.

Thos. Wallan, Crookston; about one-third frozen and 20 per cent. sound, balance badly shrunken; looks run out; impossible to clean out to make good seed; every reason for a change.

J. McKeegan, Gentilly; 10 per cent. frozen, half the balance badly shrunken; every reason for a change, but if impossible, at least one half should be cleaned out.

W. H. Martin, Crookston; germ injured in many cases; about one-fifth of the grains are sound and capable of producing good wheat and half the balance is frozen; not safe to try to clean any of this for seed; every reason to change.

John Sylvesterson, Fairfax; one-quarter frozen and half the balance very poor; not safe to use any of this; every reason for a change.

D. Scully, Gentilly; 17 per cent frozen and most of the balance unfit for seed; looks run out on the farm; change is needed.

Frank Martelle, Gentilly; some frozen grains and the whole looks to be run out; although many grains are sound it is better to renew with good seed, if impossible to clean out at least one-half.

Jas. Dercolder; some frozen grains; would be best to make a change, but otherwise clean out at least one-third.

F. G. McNulty, Mallory; about ten per cent. ought to be cleaned out; better if more.

I have received samples of good seed wheat which, of course, wants to be cleaned for the heaviest, from the following persons:

Hallock—M. Glah, Henry R. Anderg, L. B. Riddell.

Wadena Tribune: The farmer who makes a success of his own business can, as a rule, take proper care of any public business entrusted to him, which he is willing to undertake. It is a misfortune that these solid business men are not the kind generally put forward. They are modest and not self-seeking. They attend conscientiously to their own affairs, while the loud-mouthed jaw-wagger who makes a failure of everything he attempts, usually foists himself on his neighbors so persistently, that he cannot be shaken off without a neighborhood row, in which but few self-respecting men care to engage. Hence the failure of relief measures year after year. If the level-headed farmers, of which there are plenty, were put to the front regardless of the clamor of these professional "reformiers" and tongue-wabblers, there would be less cause for complaint.

Great West: Your country never cried more loudly for MEN than at the present hour. Over 400 millions of your money has already been legislated out of the national treasury for the support of the political hierarchy 32,000 men in this country own three-fifths of the walth and 60 millions are struggling for the balance. Four men dictate the price of your cattle. A board of trade puts your grain in the market at the turn of the dice. If you have MEN, bring them out this year. Keep in the field yourself to do battle for justice. Let no weakness overcome you—let no assaults upon your friends deceive you. Let patriotism rise above partyism.

Winter Wheat Damaged.

The Damage Ranges from 10 to 50 Per Cent.

CHICAGO, March 18.—The Farmers' Review will publish the following: The reports of our crop correspondents show that the recent cold wave severely damaged winter wheat in a great many localities. Our Illinois reports, almost without exception, estimate the damage ranging from 10 to 50 per cent. The heaviest damage appears to have fallen upon the central portion of the state, more than a dozen correspondents in that section reporting a loss of from 20 to 50 per cent.

In Indiana the wheat fields in central and southern portions of the state appear to have been the greatest sufferers from the cold wave, the damage ranging from 10 to 30 per cent.

In Ohio the damage from winter killing does not appear to have been as general or severe as in either Indiana or Illinois. The crop has been damaged in localities by excessive rain, many fields being covered with water in the central and southern portion of the state.

Kentucky makes the best record thus far of any state in the winter wheat belt. The Kansas wheat fields are in fair condition. The prospects are not very bright for winter wheat in Michigan and Wisconsin at this writing.

We summarize reports of our correspondents relative to the condition, as follows: Illinois, 90 per cent; Indiana, 91; Ohio, 94; Missouri, 90; Kentucky, 99; Kansas, 95; Wisconsin, 86; Michigan, 76.

The Thief River Falls Press says that the St. Hilaire branch will be extended to that city by June 1st. The preliminary arrangements are now being made.

The Bulletin says that Hugh Thompson returned from St. Paul last week, and on Saturday left for Hot Springs. He was feeling very much better and very hopeful.

All that is necessary to get a crowd at one of Bill Nye's entertainments is to announce the date that he appears. He will be at the Opera House in Crookston on Thursday evening, April 24th, with his company. Popular prices.

Call in and see our new stock of revolvers. Prices are lower than you can imagine.
[51-52] Stewart & Spottswood.

Many farmers commenced dragging last week and a few commenced to seed. Much wheat will go into the ground this week if the weather is suitable. The condition of the ground this year is far more favorable for a crop than it was last year.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings will have an opening of spring and summer millinery from the 15th to the 20th of April. Her line of pattern bonnets, hats and toques &c., are on the way and will be of the latest productions. The ladies of Crookston and vicinity are cordially invited to call and inspect goods and prices.

Mr. A. A. Dickenson, of Stephen, last week received a telegram summoning him to the sick bed of his father at Minneiska, Minn. Mrs. D. accompanied him as far as Crookston to remain with friends until his return. Mr. Dickenson did not arrive at Minneiska in time to see his father alive.

H. G. Palmer and his son Ray came over from Tacoma a few days ago and closed a deal by which they take possession of the cold storage house at Fargo, where they will handle butter and eggs for Laurence & Palmer. Ray goes back this week and H. G. is attending to matters on his farm at Warren. He expects to rent to a man who will put in a cheese factory there. H. G. will have charge of the Fargo house and expects Mrs. Palmer in about two weeks. He reports our boys in Tacoma all doing a good business. Says that Dr. Van Dyke dropped right into a big practice the first thing upon his arrival, all owing to a difficult surgical operation that he was called upon to perform soon after he got there. He says that the papers were filled with accounts of the operation, and doc awoke one morning to find himself famous in that country and his services in great demand. With his usual modesty the doctor has not even mentioned this matter to his friends since his arrival here.

Seeding is somewhat later this year than last, but the prospects are better, as the ground is very much more moist and will not be apt to be damaged by high winds, should we have them.

We are told that the surveyors on the C. D. & N. R. R. take the field this week to finish the survey to Keystone, and that work on the bridge will soon be commenced. The road will be pushed to completion at the earliest possible date.

We saw our old time friend, Pat Connery, of Edna, up in the town of Liberty last week. Pat is now one of your true blue alliance men, into the very hottest of the fight with his sleeves rolled up, to obtain an open market for his wheat for, he says, no man can stand the likes o'this.

Chas. M. Lowe says he has plenty of money for good farm loans, and always has the cash for the best of them. No delay or trouble.

W. H. Irish, the jolly blacksmith of Audubon, was in the city on Friday enroute home from a seven week's trip up to the Rosseau country. W. H. started out with a cutter but is returning on horseback, having shipped his cutter from Pembina when the sleighing played out. This was his first visit to Crookston and he thinks we have a fine city.

J. E. Morrisey is fixing up the old Ritchie building, near the Great Northern depot, by building an addition in front extending to the sidewalk. The building will be used for an office and store room with a work shop in the rear. He thinks of bringing the foundry over also. This location will be handier for his business than the old one.

New, large and complete stock of revolvers, fishing tackle, target rifles, pocket knives, scissors, shears and razors, at [51-52] Stewart & Spottswood.

Chas. Vanse came down from Thief River Falls last Wednesday, remaining until Friday morning. Charlie says business is beginning to revive with the coming seedtime and farmers predict big crops. He is on deck for a position on the surveying corps, when the reservation is ready for survey. He is one of the old settlers and a true blue republican worker and every way competent to fill the position.

Liberty township organised an alliance with 23 members on Thursday last, with Nels Clementson, president; A. Boddy, vice-president; Nels Muus, secretary, and H. Erickson, treasurer. This alliance is composed of the solid, thinking men of the town, men who are the most successful of any in their line of business, and they have been forced by circumstances to combine in order to obtain justice in the markets. This is the character of all who have yet joined the alliance throughout the county; they are the earnest business farmers who have found out that they are not obtaining justice in the markets. They realize that it is the power of combination that has manipulated the market against them and they are resolved to try the effect of combination in their own defense. If they are true to their own interests they will win. Liberty alliance adjourned till Saturday, April 5th, at which time they expected to take in several more who had been prevented from attending the preliminary meeting.

During our stay in Liberty last week we were entertained by J. S. Nichols, Esq., whose fine farm lies four miles west of Fertile. Mr. Nichols came from Rockford, Ill., to Polk County in 1880, very much out of health. He had been engaged in the newspaper business and, as is too frequently the case, had worn himself out by overworking. He rented a section of land near Beltrami, for five years, had to run in debt for teams at $400 per span, and machinery at proportionate rates. At the close of the five years he moved upon the land which now constitutes his farm, went to work for himself and now has a fine, comfortable residence, several fine brood mares with fine colts from a week old to two years old, a number of good cows, and he is owing about $500, where, with his method of farming, he should have been entirely out of debt with money in the bank if he could have obtained in the market his rightful share of the products of his toil. Mr. Nichols has a fine garden spot in which may be found all kinds of vegetables incident to the climate in their season. He has a fine strawberry bed which annually supplies his table with that delicious fruit, and his currant bushes always bear abundantly. He showed us a bushel of onion seed that he raised last year, which reminded us that if any of our readers desired to obtain reliably fresh onion seed, here is your chance. Mr. N., in addition to wheat and oats, raises rye and black barley, which latter yields enormously. He is a careful, prudent, economical farmer, a hard worker, and his wife is a true help-meet, and when such people and such methods fail to produce more than a bare living it is proof positive that something is wrong. They toil hard, early and late, they raise abundant crops of excellent grain that brings big money to some one, but the producer is never the one. They have worked harder for the pittance they are able to get for their grain than have those who have made fortunes out of it. Give them and all such an equal chance in the markets and then you will see this country blossom as the rose, then will the dawn of true prosperity break, and this country will assume its rightful place in the grand triumphal march of progress. The alliance will give that market.

A Good Workman.

Joe Gouche had an old-fashioned flint lock that he desired to have changed to use percussion caps, so he took it to Mr. Schmidt, (father of the new alderman in the 2d ward,) who transformed the gun so perfectly that its own mother would not know it. The work was as perfectly done as it could have been in the best of shops and Joe feels proud of it in its changed condition. He says Mr. Schmidt contemplates opening a gun shop in Crookston.

BOYS!

Don't forget that we are headquarters for fishing tackle this spring. Two lines and two hooks for 5 cents.

Replying to a letter of inquiry from John McLean in relation to the tariff on potato starch, Hon. S. G. Comstock writes as follows:

House of Representatives, }
Washington, D. C., March 24, '90. }
John McLean, Crookston, Minn.

Dear Sir: I have your letter of the 20th inst. relative to a duty on potato starch. I will investigate the matter. My impression is that there is a duty already on starch sufficient to prevent its introduction from Canada. I agree with you fully that if the potato itself is dutiable, its starch should be also. I am glad to hear that a starch factory is to be established at Crookston. I have no doubt it will be a good thing. The present tariff is two cents per pound on starch. I will see what the new bill does for it. Yours truly.

S. G. Comstock.

Onstad, April 7, 1890.

Onstad and Russia Farmers' Alliance, No. 677, is still on the increase. Saturday, April 5th, we secured eight members, making in all 52. A resolution was passed instructing the secretary to write our members in congress that we heartily endorse the sub-treasury plan, and believe, if allowed to become a law, it will benefit the producers of the United States, and urging them to support that measure. We also hope that every sub-alliance in this county will endorse that bill, for we think that it will give us a freer and more open market in which to sell our produce.

Judging from all that we can learn from reports in the leading daily papers we are led to the belief that for some time to come cheese factories will be more profitable than creameries. It looks as though the cheese maker will have a bonanza for awhile.

Harry Ives returned from Washington on Sunday morning looking well and hearty. Harry reports his railroad bill in good shape and bound to pass. He says that congressman Comstock is the best man in the House. Says he thinks Washburn is making a rattling good senator.

At the meeting of Crookston Alliance last Saturday not quite stock enough to secure the factory was pledged. A committee was appointed to secure the balance needed. We hope the project will not fall through as it is of so much importance to the city and vicinity. Every farmer in this vicinity should be willing to take 100 bushels worth of stock at least.

$100,000 to loan.
John McLean.

The new council met on Tuesday evening and the following nominations by the Mayor were confirmed: For Comptroller, E. W. Wile; for City Attorney, Martin O'Brien; for Chief of Police, Louis Gonyea; for Patrolmen, M. B. Hayes and Andy Locken. The nomination of Dan. McDonald for Street Commissioner was not confirmed. Postponed to next regular meeting.

Cyprien DeMers, President of Poplar River Alliance, No. 729, was in the city this week and gave The Journal a pleasant call. He reports seeding commenced and being actively pushed. The cheese factory will be completed in time for the season's work. He says great interest is manifested in alliance work, numbers joining at every meeting. At last meeting 17 joined. He expects the membership will go very much over one hundred in early summer.

Our fellow townsman, David R. Carr, who was a member of the 3d Minn. Battery during the rebellion, has received a letter from the pension department at Washington informing him that he has been granted a pension dating from his discharge for injuries incurred while in the military service of the United States. He receives the tidy and deserved sum of $1,300 back pension and is now rated at $12 per month. 'Tis well. We are glad to see the boys who wore the blue during those dark and stormy days in our national history, compensated in a measure. Men who gave their services and many of them their lives that the nation might live are deserving of consideration.

Three Dollars Reduction.

The Red River Lumber Company quotes the following prices:

1st Com. Boards and Dimension,	$15.00
2d	13.00
3d	11.00

The grade quoted above at $13 is good stock, suitable for all ordinary building purposes, and is the best lumber ever sold in this market at the price named. They have also plenty of short lumber at low prices on account of length.

In his greed for items this week our reporter picked up on the street the following which appears to be a business letter, written by one business man of Tacoma to another. We reproduce it as nearly as type will do it, except the names. Our sympathy is entirely with the man who had the bolts to sell:

Bill Was Funny.

The Denver Republican.

Bill Nye and his company attracted about 1500 auditors to the Coliseum last night thro' the lecturer's popularity and the widespread publication of his writings in The Republican.

Mr. Frank Downey, the pianist, opened with a transcription of Verdi's "Rigoletto," and later on played Lisz's second rhapsodie. He has a fine touch and his tecnnique is good but his interpretation in passages is rather new and possibly capable of improvement. He received considerable applause, however, and was followed by the irrespressible Bill himself, who told in his calm, unassuming way two funny stories—one about Mayron W. Reed, who presided over the entertainment.

THE BUTTONS FLY.

These anecdotes were funny as the large audience laughed inordinately. His second selection was a story about his adventures in pugilism, and his third was his reading of a little story called the "Grammatical Boy," which was well read with a peculiar intonation and halting style of speech peculiar to the country school boy who stands at the head of his class in the third reader. In his anecdotes Mr. Nye was very ludicrous, and the audience encored every experience. His last encore, which was a story of his encounter with a congressman, both in pursuit of a boy who had rung their respective door bells, was full of nonsense, some of which has been heard before, but seemed to excite the risibles of his hearers.

Mr. Thalberg, the tenor, sang Denza's popular solo, "Star of my Heart," and as an encore gave "With all her Faults." He has a good voice and sings with good expression.

A FAVORITE.

Of the musicians Miss Ollie Torbett, the violiniste, was deservedly a favorite. She gave an air from DeBeriot and a concerto of Rode, and as encores played a bercease by Musin and an air with variations by Dancla. She is but an amateur, but plays with good tone, and in good style and accuracy of intonation. Her performance was excellent. The audience was highly pleased and applauded every number.

At the Opera hous on April 24th

Grand Forks Daily Herald: Conductor Alexander, of the Great Northern railway, that pretty, dark eyed fellow as the ladies used to call him, has severed his connection with that company and will in all likelihood locate in the west and go into business for him self. Success to him.

Standard Works.

Wm. Clements has novels from such standard authors as Dickens, Thackeroy, Scott, Pope, Charlotte Bronte, Cooper etc., etc. Those books are solidly and neatly bound in cloth and are sold at prices that are the lowest ever offered in this city. What an elegant Christmas present you can get for a very small cost. Don't fail to see these books and get prices. [51-tf]

"Farmers can't do anything!" Who says that! Well, it is mostly those who don't want him to and who hope he cannot.

Another Dred Scott decision—that in the milk cases—and it is liable to kick up a large sized row before we see the end of it. When it gets so that the creature is greater than the creator, it is time to find out why.

Farmers should have no time for men who cannot surrender their own personal opinions for the good of the cause. The object of the alliance is not to build up any one man, but to build up an open market for wheat. Don't forget that.

The Mankato Journal, a neat little five column quarto paper published by A. M. Morrison, appears on our table. The paper appears to be a grand alliance worker. The following extract from its columns we believe to be true of the alliance in Polk County:

"If we understand the sentiments of the farmers' alliance of Blue Earth County aright they do not care who are or may be the county officers; yet they wish to choose men as county commissioners and members of the legislature who are known to be in hearty sympathy with the principles of the alliance. In a great measure relief, if it comes at all, must come through legislative channels, state as well as national, hence their effort to control these great avenues. In this effort the farmers cannot hope to succeed by antagonizing candidates of both parties for county offices. Concentrate all forces and all the strength of the alliance on securing laws that will benefit the great majority and not a favored few."

From every alliance in Polk County comes the reported great accessions at every meeting, and every week since the meeting at St. Paul one or two alliances have been formed. About one hundred alliances have been formed in the state since that meeting, which shows that Polk County is more than up to the average, and still the good work goes on, despite the efforts of some who are built up by the present system of marketing, who are trying to throw cold water upon the efforts of the farmers to obtain an open market. It is natural that they should try to kill off the movement, for if the farmers are united and firm they will surely obtain an open market and a good price for wheat, and then those who have fattened off the labors of the farmers must be content with less plunder. Let every farmer stand firmly up to the work and try to induce all his neighbors to join. Then, working shoulder to shoulder for the common good they will be sure to win.

Everywhere throughout the State, those who are reaping rich harvests from the toil of the farmer are just now assidously laboring to sow dissension in the ranks of the alliance. Wherever they see any slight point of difference upon minor questions between members of the alliance, they straightway magnify it into a mountain and do all they can to break up the organization; but the farmers should not allow such things to obtain a foothold, and no true farmer will; the object he seeks is too high, is too sacred for them to allow it to be defeated by petty jealousies, by petty dissentions. Every member cannot have everything his own way, but every true man will be willing to make great concessions for the good of the order. One danger lies in the fact that there are some men in the ranks so constituted that they seem to think that they know it all and that any other way to do the business besides the one they think is correct must necessarily be wrong, and so they get on their car and say: "We know how this thing should be run, and if you farmers are too independent to do as we distate we will wreck the alliance!" Now, this principle is all wrong, and no one man should be allowed to control the work of the alliance, but every man should work for the common good. We don't expect the organization will be perfect, but we should all strive to make it as perfect as possible, and when we find a man who threatens to destroy the institution because he happens to think it is not run just right, it is time to sit down on that man emphatically, as the principle of the order is of too much importance to be sacrificed at the whim of any one man. The organization is greater than the private interests of any man in it. If the farmers are true to their own interests they can secure a free and open wheat market, and they should allow nothing to interfere to prevent the accomplishment of this object. Remember, farmers, that this is your own organization and you should manage it yourselves, uninfluenced by any man who may have some private motive in trying to make you do as he dictates. You should select your own officials in the alliance of tried and true men in your own calling, and you should be especially careful in the selection of the right kind of material for your legislature, for upon the character of that body depends largely your future success. Because a man wants the job is no good reason why you should give it to him, for you have important work to do, and you should select only such men as you are well convinced will do that work. We want a reformation of our tariff laws, the restoration of some of the tax upon capital, incomes and wealth, and a corresponding reduction upon all articles of universal consumption and absolute necessity, and a reduction of the rate of taxation to the indispensible needs of the government, economically administered. The complete remonetization of silver, placing it upon a perfect equality with gold as to coinage, bullion and certificates, and a further enlargement of our circulating paper currency. A law to compel railroads to receive and care for our wheat the same as other goods, also to compel them to allow the building of flat houses by any one who wishes to do so. Lower transportation charges and any amendment to the Inter-State Commerce law that is just and necessary to accomplish this purpose. An amendment to the constitution, if necessary, to outlaw and absolutely prohibit trusts and combines that control the prices of farm animals, and to declare gambling in futures or selling that which does not exist, a felony, and a rigid enforcement of the laws passed in conformity thereto. All this is of more importance to the country than the gratification of private ambitions to serve in the Legislature, and when you find a man so very particular upon mere technical points that he is willing to see the grand results the alliance hopes to accomplish sacrificed rather than to yield his views to the majority opinion, you have just cause to suspect that man's motives. No true alliance man will assume that he knows more about the business than any one else and insist that it must be run according to his notions, or not at all.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., APRIL 10, 1890.

Loans from the Government.

The Western Rural.

In a letter received last week from a subscriber, he says that The Rural says nothing about the Cullom bill providing for the loaning of money to the farmers by the government. He asks if we do not favor it. The Rural has discussed the bill several times. Our position, as repeatedly stated, is just this: It is the duty of the government to come to the assistance of our agriculture in some way. It has permitted other interests to devour the prosperity on our farms until the agricultural industry is about ruined; and as our farms are the support of the nation, common sense would show that the government must protect their interests in some manner. We have not the slightest objection to the government loaning money to farmers. If that is the best way to aid agriculture, we unhesitatingly say that we favor it. But we desire to call attention to the fact that there is no sort of use in the govenrment supplying the farmers with money if it intends to permit robbing railroad corporations and thieving trusts to sit by the farmer's grain fields and cattle yards and swine pens to take all that he can produce. Immediate relief might come from loaning money at two per cent, but corporate greed and trust theft must be checked before we can find complete relief. We must be saved from the necessity of paying dividends upon millions and billions of dollars of watered railroad stock; decent transportation rates must be absolutely assured; stock yards and beef combines must be brought under stringent legislation that will put a stop to their robberies; elevators and millers must be so efficiently regulated that they will not gobble all our profits; coal monopolies and oil monopolies and the adulteration of foods must be stopped. In a word government must be something besides a bauble; it must do its duty, and the chief duty of the government is to protect society from the rascality of men, individually and collectively.

(First publication Feb. 6th, 1890.)

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of seventy and 97-100 dollars, ($70.97) which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by John Proulx, (unmarried) to The Loan and Guarantee Company, of Connecticut, bearing date the first day of October, A. D. 1888, with a power of sale therein contained, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of October, A. D. 1888, at 11 o'clock a. m., in book 35 of mortgages, on page 385 etc.

And, whereas, the said mortgagee and holder of said mortgage has elected, and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and, whereas, there is actually due and payable thereunder, at the date hereof, the sum of seven hundred and twenty and 97-100 dollars ($720.97); and, whereas, said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the premises described in and covered by said mortgage, viz: The east half of the southwest quarter (e½ of sw¼) of Section ten (10), and the east half of the northwest quarter (e½ of nw¼) of Section fifteen (15) all in town one hundred and fifty (150) of Range forty-two (42) west, in Polk County, and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances will be sold at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes (if any) on said premises, and fifty (50) dollars attorney's fee, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 19th day of April, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$ 168 44

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

The Farmers' Opportunity.

The Northfield News.

Minnesota is an agricultural State. While a large number of people in the cities are engaged in manufacturing industries the majority of the population is engaged in agricultural pursuits. The richness of the lands of the State and the ease with which the man with limited capital can become possessed of a farm has led to the condition of affairs which we now see. In years past, when a large yield of wheat was certain, and the price showed a large percentage of profit, the farmer, as a rule, took very little interest in the schemes of the politicians who desire to fill the offices of the State. As long as he was regularly nominated and belonged to the farmers' political party he received the votes of the farmers, and they trusted to the politicians' promises and pledges that the duties of the offices would be faithfully performed. This was a comfortable condition of affairs and the farmers' political duties were attended to in the same manner as the religious duties of many men are performed—some one else did the work regardless of the consequences. Gradually it has become apparent to the farmer that all was not right, business was not as brisk as formerly, what crops were raised did not bring as much as they were worth, the railroad companies were allowed to carry on their business as they pleased and at the expense of the farmer in many cases. Under promises of such reforms as would prove a remedy for all evils which afflicted the farmer, various political parties have availed themselves of the farmer's vote, and in some cases the promises have deen fulfilled to a certain extent, but disappointment has often followed the placing in office of a professed liberator. The farmer should not be discouraged by the many disappointments suffered. In union there is strength, and in the early organization of farmers which we have just seen there seems to be a determination to stand by their guns in the political battle, the same for which is approaching, and gain advantageous victory in conventions and at the polls. It will be the object of some who aspire to be leaders to awaken strife and create discord among the great army of farmers, and such men should be summarily dealt with and placed in the same class with professional political workers, where they belong. It will not be so much of a "fine Italian hand" as a farmer's hand, that will be seen when the votes are counted next fall.

Bill Nye and the Farmer.

Wabasha Herald.

While traveling on the cars recently Bill Nye met a farmer and attempted to tell him something about the beauties and independence of farm life. But the farmer who had been there himself rather turned the tables on Bill by telling him a few things about farming and the tariff. The following is a portion of the interview:

"Well, farmin' is like runnin' a paper in regards to some things. Every feller in the world will take and turn in and tell you how to do it, even if he don't know a blame thing about it. There ain't a man in the United States to-day that dont secretly think he could run airy one if his other business busted on him whether he knows the difference between a new milch cow and a horse hayrake or not. We had one of these embroidered night-shirt farmers come from town better'n three years ago. Been a toilet soap man and done well, and so he came out and bought a farm that had nothing to it but a fancy house and barn, a lot of medder in the front yard and a southern aspect. The farm was no good. You couldn't raise a disturbance on it. Well, what does he do? Goes and gits a passle of slim-tailed, yeller cows from New Jersey and aims to handle cream and diversified farming. Last year the cuss sent a load of cream over and tried to sell it at the new crematory while the funeral and hollercoat was goin' on. I may be a sort of a chump myself, but I read my paper and don't get left like that."

"What are the prospects for farmers in your state?"

"Well, they are pore. Never was so pore, in fact, sence I've ben there. Folks wonder why boys leave the farm. My boys left so as to get protected, they said, and so they went into a clothing-store, one of 'em, and one went into hardware and one is taking protection in the legislatures this winter. They said that farmin' was gittin' to be like fishin' and huntin', well enough for a man that has means and leisure, but they couldent make a livin' at it, they said. Another boy is in a drug store, and the man that hires him says he is a royal feller."

Kind of a castor royal feller," I said, with a shriek of laughter.

He waited until I had laughed all I wanted to and then he said: "I've always hollered for high tariff in order to hyst the public debt, but now that we've got the national debt coopered I wish they'd take a little hack at mine. I've put in fifty years farmin'. I never drank licker in any form. I've worked from ten to eighteen hours a day, been economical in cloze and never went to a show more'n a dozen times in my life, raised a family and learned upward of two hundred calves to drink out of a tin pail without blowing all their vittles up my sleeve. My wife worked alongside o' me sewin' new seats on the boys' pants, skimmin' milk and even helpin' me load hay. For forty years we toiled along together and hardly got time to look into each others' faces or dared to stop and get acquainted with each other. Then her health failed. Ketched cold in the spring house, prob'ly skimmin' milk and washin' pans and scaldin' pails and spankin' butter. Anyhow, she took in a long breath one day while the doctor and me was watchin' her, and she says to me, 'Henry,' says she, 'I've got a chance to rest,' and she put one tired, wore-out hand on top of the other tired, wore out hand, and I knew she'd gone where they don't work all day and do chores all night. I took time to kiss her then. I'd been too busy for a good while previous to that, and then I called in the boys. After the funeral it was too much for them to stay around and eat the kind of cookin' we had to put up with, and nobody spoke up around the house as we used to. The boys quit whistlin' around the barn and talked kind of low by themselves about goin' to town and gettin' a job. They're all gone now and the snow is four feet deep on mother's grave up there in the old berryin' ground."

Then both of us looked out of the car window quite a long while without saying anything.

"I don't blame the boys for going into something else long's other things pays better; but I say—and I say what I know—that the man who holds the prosperity of this country in his hands, the man that eats three good, simple, square meals a day and goes to bed at nine o'clock, so that future generations with good blood and cool brains can go from his farm to the senate and congress and the White House—he is the man that gets left at last to run his farm, with nobody to help but a hired man and a high protective tariff. The farms in our state is mortgaged for over seven hundred million dollars. Ten of our Western states—I see by the papers—has got about three billion and a half mortgages on their farms, and that don't count the chattel mortgages filed with the town clerks on farm machinery, stock, waggins, and even crops, by gosh! that ain't two inches high under the snow. That's what the prospects is for farmers now. The government is rich but the men that made it, the men that fought perarie fires and perarie wolves and Injuns and potato bugs and blizzards and has paid the war debt and pensions and everything else and hollered for the Union and free schools and high terriff and anything else that they was told to, is left high and dry this cold winter with a mortgage of seven billions and a half on the farms they have earned and saved a thousand times over."

"Yes; but look at the glory of sending from the farm the future President, the future Senator and the future member of Congress."

"That looks well on paper, but what does it really amount to? Soon as a farmer boy gits in a place like that he forgets the soil that produced him and holds his head as high as a holly-hock. He bellers for protection to everybody but the farmer, and while he sails round in a highty-tighty room with a fire in it night and day, his father on the farm has to kindle his own fire in the morning with elm slivvers, and he has to wear his son's lawn-tennis suit next to him or freeze to death, and he has to milk in an old gray shawl that has held that member of congress when he was a baby, by gorry! and the old lady has to sojourn through the winter in the flannels that Silas wore at the riggatter before he went to congress. So I say, and I think that congress agrees with me, damn a farmer, anyhow!"

He then went away.

Population and Representation.

Moorhead News.

The population of Minnesota by the state census of 1885, was 1,117,798. In 1880 the population of the state was 780,773. The gain from 1880 to 1885 was 337,025, or 4316 per cent. If the same ratio of gain is made during the period of five years from 1885 to 1890, the population of the state will be found on June 1st next to be 1,600,239

The population of the Fifth congressional district of Minnesota in 1885, by the same authority, was 223,920. In 1880 its population was 117,880. The gain in the five years from 1880 to 1885 was therefore 106,031, or .800 per cent showing that the population of the Fifth district increased during that period more than twice as fast as the population of the whole state. If the increase has been as great during the past five years as during the five years from 1880 to 1885 the population of the Fifth district is now, 425,224, or more than one fourth of the population of the entire state.

The population of the First congressional district in 1885 was 168,463. In 1880 its population was 168,112. The gain in five years was only 351 persons. The per cent of gain may be expressed thus .00205 If the same rate of increase has been maintained during the past five years the district has gained 250 in her population and it will count up now 168,713. The population of the Fifth district is two and one half times as great.

The population of the Second congressional disorict in 1885 was 193,128. In 1880 it was 166,468, showing a gain in five years of 26,660, or .16 per cent. If the same rate of increase had been maintained during the past five years the population of the Second distict is now 221,328, or a little more than half as many as that of the Fifth district.

The population of the Third congressional districf in 1885 was 175,583. In 1880 it was 155,091. The gain in five years was therefore 20,492, or .132 per cent. If the same rate of increase has been maintained during the past five years its population is now 198,760, or materially less than one half that of the Fifth district.

The population of the Fourth congressional district in 1885, was 353,332. In 1880 it was 169,294, which shows a gain in that period of 184,038 or 108¾ per cent. If the same rate of increase had been maintained during the past five years the population of the Fourth district is now 737,580.

We have taken the statistics of population by counties from the Legislative Manual of 1889 and added them together to ascertain the population of each congressional district. It will be observed that the aggregate of population reckoned by district will show a variation from the census of the state thus.

This aggregate is 3,372 less than the state population as given in the manual. We are unable to say where the discrepancy lies. It may be in errors of printing in the manual, or in our figuring.

There is another discrepancy which we are unable to account for at this writing namely. The rate of increase for the entire state in the period from 1880 to 1885 was .4316, which if maintained would produce a population of 1,600,236 in 1890. The rates of increase for the several congressional districts as we have figured them out when applied to the population of 1885 in each congressional district separately and aggregated would produce a much larger population in the entire state than 1,600,239. Those fond of figures are welcome to work it out.

We have been to the trouble to figure out the results stated above in order "to point a moral and adorn a tale," which we shall attach to the latter end of this effort. Before doing so let us remark upon the probabilities whether the gain in the past five years in the several districts is as much or as little as we have estimated. As to the Fifth district. It is well known that the immigration into the western and northern counties of that district has been steady during all the time. Duluth has grown rapidly. The mining regions on the east side have added many thousands to their population. There has been a steady growth in all the cities and villages throughout the district, and we think the increase has exceeded that of the five years between 1880 and 1885, rather than fallen off therefrom. And what will support the argument and demand which is below made even in more forcible manner, is the probability that during the next two or three years there will be a still more rapid increase by the rush of immigrants into the opened Indian reservtions and in the regions to be traversed by new lines of road now under construction and to be constructed.

In the First district, which barely held its population from 1880 to 1885, there has been no cause to accelerate the increase of population, and as many have emigrated therefrom to the Fifth district and to North and South Dakota and the Pacific coast the probabilities are that the census soon to be taken will reveal a falling off instead of an increase in the First district. The same reasoning applies to the Second and Third districts.

The increase in the Fourth district is due to the enormous growth of the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul. It is probable, we think, that the rate of increase shown between 1880 and 1885 has not been maintained in the last five years.

Sometime ago the News hinted that the Fifth district should ascertain its political rights in the way of representation in the public service, and prepare to demand its just share and make the demand good. This suggestion was met with [an ill concealed sneer and derision in some quarters, and elicited the allegation that the district had already her share of the offices. It is not so. Of the elective offices on the state roster we have the attorney general and the clerk of the supreme court, and these were forced from the convention of 1886. The time has now come for making larger demands. A district which comprises a territory of nearly one half of the state, that has a population of close on to half a million; that is almost doubling its population every five years, and is developing its material resources in the most rapid manner, is entitled to a more potent voice in the state chuncils and in congress than it has heretofore enjoyed. It seems to us that the Fifth district is entitled to demand, not arrogantly, but courteously and firmly as a matter of right, the governorship of the state for the next term, or if it is deemed best to give Governor Merriam another term, then in that case, the lieutenant-governorship and the U. S. senatorship first to fall vacant. Senator Davis is a good senator, an able and learned man and all that, but St. Paul and Minneapolis should not be allowed any longer to appropriate all the great and influential offices. They are entitled to much and we will concede them much, but not in sacrifice of our own just claims. If one of the senatorships is to be wrested from the Twin cities, there is no portion of the state that can make so good a claim upon it as the Fifth district, and there is just as good material in that district out of which to make senators as can be found elsewhere.

Government Loaning Money.

The Prairie Farmer.

In your good paper, that I am glad to note has come out so breavely and well in the interests of the great class it represents, I have just read on page 168 (March 15, 1890) your criticism of your Michigan correspondent, Mr. Geo. Thomas, in which he advocates that our Government issue money "direct to the farmers on proper security," and you say, "It would be unfortunate, under our political system, if the Government should go into the business of loaning money to the people."

I would like to ask if the Government is not now, and has it not been for years, loaning money to one class of its people, and at a charge of only one per cent for its use at that? (With bills now before Congress to loan it absolutely free.) Take two men at the close of the war; one buys a farm for $10,000, the other buys government bonds for $10,000. Both are investments, the farm and the bonds; both represent value, and have a buying and a selling value. The money in the bonds, without any labor of the holder, has paid a much larger interest, it is true, than has the money in the farm, with all the hard work of the farmer and his family.

Those favored few, the special class "of the people" who own the bonds, can take them to Washington, deposit them in the Treasury (say $100,000), they are safer there than at home, the interest on them never stops, it is regularly and promptly paid; and on these bonds as security Uncle Sam loans this special class "of the people," $90,000 in money which they take home and as middlemen, loan government money to the farmers and others "of the people," at six, eight, ten, twelve, or more per cent interest. Now why not let the farmer have the same chance with his property? If the bankers loan the money they have obtained from Uncle Sam to a farmer on his note and he fails to pay it, don't they take his farm if necessary?

In my State, New Jersey, for many years past the State (the government) has loaned its school moneys to farmers with their farms as security, and with entire success and satisfaction.

In England a number of years ago the government loaned large sums of money on long time and very low rates of interest to farmers, for the purpose of draining their land.

How many hundreds of millions of dollars has our government loaned to another class "of the people" to help them build railroads that are now too often used to oppress the farmers?

It simply makes a difference who is doing it. U. S. Senator Stanford, of California, has within a few days introduced this matter in the Senate, and the world moves and farmers are awaking and commencing to move with it.

"All citizens shall be equal before the law," says our National Constitution, and that means finance laws, tariff laws, and all laws. Let us think on these things.

MORTIMER WHITEHEAD.

[The Prairie Farmer asserts, on broad grounds, that government should not go into the business of loaning money at all; certainly not to one class to the exclusion of others.—ED. P. F.]

Foreclose the Mortage.

Chicago Sentinel.

For years we have been telling the people about the great land steal which was engineered by the syndicate which built the Pacific roads. We have time and again explained;

First, how the government voted money to build the roads—and then threw in 200,000,000 acres of land besides.

Second, how it has consented to accept a second mortgage for its first mortgage, for the $200,000,000 which it advanced.

Third, how it has been compelled to pay the interest on its bonds (for the $60,000,000 which it advanced) in order to protect its own credit, till it has paid out over $50,000,000 of interest.

Fourth, that Uncle Sam now stands in on $60,000,000 of principal (to be paid) and $50,000,000 interest (already paid) and a first mortgage of $30,000,000 to take up, making a grand total in round number of $140,000,000.

All for a road which cost only about 30,000,000 to build originally!

Suppose it now forecloses its mortgage and takes the road. It will have cost 80,000,000 acres of land and $140,000,000 cash, for a $30,000,000 railroad.

Great scheme of financiering!

Great robbery of land!

Great head plundering the people.

And now what?

Why the robbers have had the audacity to go into Congress and ask for a continuance of their indebtedness to the government.

And there are thieves and scoundrels in Congress who propose to grant the request! Bills have already been favorably reported by a Senate committee extending time to payment fifty years at three per cent for the Union Pacific, and at two per cent for the Central.

The Farmers' Opportunity.

The Northfield News.

Minnesota is an agricultural State. While a large number of people in the cities are engaged in manufacturing industries the majority of the population is engaged in agricultural pursuits. The richness of the lands of the State and the ease with which the man with limited capital can become possessed of a farm has led to the condition of affairs which we now see. In years past, when a large yield of wheat was certain, and the price showed a large percentage of profit, the farmer, as a rule, took very little interest in the schemes of the politicians who desire to fill the offices of the State. As long as he was regularly nominated and belonged to the farmers' political party he received the votes of the farmers, and they trusted to the politicians' promises and pledges that the duties of the offices would be faithfully performed. This was a comfortable condition of affairs and the farmers' political duties were attended to in the same manner as the religious duties of many men are performed—some one else did the work regardless of the consequences. Gradually it has become apparent to the farmer that all was not right, business was not as brisk as formerly, what crops were raised did not bring as much as they were worth, the railroad companies were allowed to carry on their business as they pleased and at the expense of the farmer in many cases. Under promises of such reforms as would prove a remedy for all evils which afflicted the farmer, various political parties have availed themselves of the farmer's vote, and in some cases the promises have been fulfilled to a certain extent, but disappointment has often followed the placing in office of a professed liberator. The farmer should not be discouraged by the many disappointments suffered. In union there is strength, and in the early organization of farmers which we have just seen there seems to be a determination to stand by their guns in the political battle, the same for which is approaching, and gain advantageous victory in conventions and at the polls. It will be the object of some who aspire to be leaders to awaken strife and create discord among the great army of farmers, and such men should be summarily dealt with and placed in the same class with professional political workers, where they belong. It will not be so much of a "fine Italian band" as a farmer's hand, that will be seen when the votes are counted next fall.

Bill Nye and the Farmer.

Wabasha Herald.

While traveling on the cars recently Bill Nye met a farmer and attempted to tell him something about the beauties and independence of farm life. But the farmer, who had been there himself, rather turned the tables on Bill by telling him a few things about farming and the tariff. The following is a portion of the interview:

"Well farmin' is like runnin' a paper in regards to some things. Every feller in the world will take and turn in and tell you how to do it, even if he don't know a blame thing about it. There ain't a man in the United States to-day that don't secretly think he could run airy one if his other business busted on him, whether he knows the difference between a new milch cow and a horse hayrake or not. We had one of these embroidered night-shirt farmers come from town, better'n three years ago. Been a toilet soap man and done well, and so he came out and bought a farm that had nothing to it but a fancy house and barn, a lot of medder in the front yard and a southern aspect. The farm was no good. You couldn't raise a disturbance on it. Well, what does he do? Goes and gits a passle of slim tailed yeller cows from New Jersey and aims to handle cream and diversified farming. Last year the cuss sent a load of cream over and tried to sell it at the new creamatory while the funeral and holler-out was goin' on. I may be a sort of a chump myself, but I [illegible] per and don't get left like that. [illegible]

[illegible] said, and so they went into a clothing store, one of 'em, and one went into hardware and one is taking protection in the legislature this winter. They said that farmin' was gittin' to be like fishin' and huntin', well enough for a man that has means and leisure, but they couldn't make a livin' at it, they said. Another boy is in a drug store, and the man that hires him says he is a royal feller."

"Kind of a castor royal feller," I said, with a shriek of laughter.

He waited until I had laughed all I wanted to and then he said: "I've always hollered for high tariff in order to hyst the public debt, but now that we've got the national debt coopered, I wish they'd take a little hack at mine. I've put in fifty years farmin'. I never drank licker in any form. I've worked from ten to eighteen hours a day, been economical in close and never went to a show more'n a dozen times in my life, raised a family and learned upward of two hundred calves to drink out of a tin pail without blowing all their vittles up my sleeve. My wife worked alongside o' me sewin' new seats on the boys' pants, skimmin' milk and even helpin' me load hay. For forty years we toiled along together and hardly got time to look into each others' faces or dared to stop and get acquainted with each other. Then her health failed. Ketched cold in the spring house, prob'ly, skimmin' milk and washin' pans and scaldin' pails and spankin' butter. Anyhow, she took in a long breath one day while the doctor and me was watchin' her, and she says to me, 'Henry,' says she, 'I've got a chance to rest,' and she put one tired, wore out hand on top of the other tired, wore out hand, and I know she'd gone where they don't work all day and do chores all night. I took time to kiss her then. I'd been too busy for a good while previous to that, and then I called in the boys. After the funeral it was too much for them to stay around and eat the kind of cookin' we had to put up with, and nobody spoke up around the house as we used to. The boys quit whistlin' around the barn and talked kind of low by themselves about goin' to town and gettin' a job. They're all gone now and the snow is four feet deep on mother's grave up there in the old berryin' ground."

Then both of us looked out of the car window quite a long while without saying anything.

"I don't blame the boys for going into something else long's other things pays better; but I say—and I say what I know—that the man who holds the prosperity of this country in his hands, the man that eats three good, simple, square meals a day and goes to bed at nine o'clock, so that future generations with good blood and cool brains can go from his farm to the senate and congress and the White House—he is the man that gets left at last to run his farm, with nobody to help but a hired man and a high protective tarriff. The farms in our state is mortgaged for over seven hundred million dollars. Ten of our Western states—I see by the papers—has got about three billion and a half mortgages on their farms, and that don't count the chattel mortgages filed with the town clerks on farm machinery, stock, waggins, and even crops, by gosh! that ain't two inches high under the snow. That's what the prospects is, for farmers now. The government is rich but the men that made it, the men that fought perarie fires and perarie wolves and Injuns and potato bugs and blizzards and has paid the war debt and pensions and everything else and hollered for the Union and free schools and high terriff and anything else that they was told to, is left high and dry this cold winter with a mortgage of seven billions and a half on the farms they have earned and saved a thousand times over."

"Yes, but look at the glory of sending from the farm the future President, the future Senator and the future member of Congress."

"That looks well on paper, but what does it really amount to? Soon as a farmer boy gits in a place like that he forgets the soil that produced him and holds his head as high as a holly-hock. He bellers for protection to everybody but the farmer, and while he sails round in a highty-tighty room with a fire in it night and day, his father on the farm has to kindle his own fire in the morning with elm slivvers, and he has to wear his son's lawn-tennis suit next to him or freeze to death, and he has to milk in an old gray shawl that has held that member of congress when he was a baby, by gorry! and the old lady has to sojourn through the winter in the flannels that Silas wore at the riggatter before he went to congress. So I say, and I think that congress agrees with me, damn a farmer, anyhow!"

He then went away.

Population and Representation.

Moorhead News.

The population of Minnesota by the state census of 1885, was 1,117,798. In 1880 the population of the state was 780,773. The gain from 1880 to 1885 was 337,025, or .4316 per cent. If the same ratio of gain is made during the period of five years from 1885 to 1890, the population of the state will be found on June 1st next to be 1,600,230.

The population of the Fifth congressional district of Minnesota in 1885, by the same authority, was 223,920. In 1880 its population was 117,889. The gain in the five years from 1880 to 1885 was therefore 106,031, or .900 per cent, showing that the population of the Fifth district increased during that period more than twice as fast as the population of the whole state. If the [illegible] during the past five years [illegible] from 1880 to 1885 the population of [illegible] 425,224 [illegible] one-fourth of the population [illegible]

[illegible] sional district in 1885 was 168,463. In 1880 its population was 168,112. The gain in five years was only 351 persons. The per cent of gain may be expressed thus .0021. If the same rate of increase has been maintained during the past five years the district has gained 250 in her population and it will count up now 168,713. The population of the Fifth district is two and one-half times as great.

The population of the Second congressional district in 1885 was 193,128. In 1880 it was 166,468, showing a gain in five years of 26,660, or .16 per cent. If the same rate of increase had been maintained during the past five years the population of the Second distict is now 221,328, or a little more than half as many as that of the Fifth district.

The population of the Third congressional district in 1885 was 175,583. In 1880 it was 155,091. The gain in five years was therefore 20,492, or .132 per cent. If the same rate of increase has been maintained during the past five years its population is now 198,760, or materially less than one half that of the Fifth district.

The population of the Fourth congressional district in 1885 was 353,332. In 1880 it was 169,204, which shows a gain in that period of 184,088 or 1081 per cent. If the same rate of increase had been maintained during the past five years the population of the Fourth district is now 737,580.

We have taken the statistics of population by counties from the Legislative Manual of 1889 and added them together to ascertain the population of each congressional district. It will be observed that the aggregate of population reckoned by district will show a variation from the census of the state thus:

First congressional district	168,462
Second " "	193,128
Third " "	175,583
Fourth " "	353,332
Fifth " "	223,920
	1,114,426

This aggregate is 3,372 less than the state population as given in the manual. We are unable to say where the discrepancy lies. It may be in errors of printing in the manual or in our figuring.

There is another discrepancy which we are unable to account for at this writing namely. The rate of increase for the entire state in the period from 1880 to 1885 was .4316, which if maintained would produce a population of 1,600,236 in 1890. The rates of increase of the several congressional districts as we have figured them out when applied to the population of 1885 in each congressional district separately and aggregated would produce a much larger population in the entire state than 1,600,239. Those fond of figures are welcome to work it out.

We have been to the trouble to figure out the results stated above in order "to point a moral and adorn a tale," which we shall attach to the latter end of this effort. Before doing so let us remark upon the probabilities whether the gain in the past five years in the several districts is as much or as little, as we have estimated. As to the Fifth district. It is well known that the immigration into the western and northern counties of that district has been steady during all the time. Duluth has grown rapidly. The mining regions on the east side have added many thousands to their population. There has been a steady growth in all the cities and villages throughout the district, and we think the increase has exceeded that of the five years between 1880 and 1885, rather than fallen off therefrom. And what will support the argument and demand which is below made even in more forcible manner, is the probability that during the next two or three years there will be a still more rapid increase by the rush of immigrants into the opened Indian reservations and in the regions to be traversed by new lines of road now under construction and to be constructed.

In the First district, which barely held its population from 1880 to 1885, there has been no cause to accelerate the increase of population, and as many have emigrated therefrom to the Fifth district and to North and South Dakota and the Pacific coast the probabilities are, that the census soon to be taken will reveal a falling off instead of an increase in the First district. The same reasoning applies to the Second and Third districts.

The increase in the Fourth district is due to the enormous growth of the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul. It is probable, we think, that the rate of increase shown between 1880 and 1885 has not been maintained in the last five years.

Sometime ago the News hinted that the Fifth district should ascertain its political rights in the way of representation in the public service, and prepare to demand its just share and make the demand good. This suggestion was met with an ill concealed sneer and derision in some quarters, and elicited the allegation that the district had already her share of the offices. It is not so. Of the elective offices on the state roster we have the attorney general and the clerk of the supreme court, and these were forced from the convention of 1886. The time has now come for making larger demands. A district which comprises a territory of nearly one-half of the state, that has a population of close on to half a million, that is almost doubling its population every five years, and is developing its material resources in the most rapid manner, is entitled to a more potent voice in the state councils and in congress than it has heretofore enjoyed. [illegible]

Senator Davis is a good senator, an able and learned man and all that, but St. Paul and Minneapolis should not be allowed any longer to appropriate all the great and influential offices. They are entitled to much and we will concede them much, but not in sacrifice of our own just claims. If one of the senatorships is to be wrested from the Twin cities, there is no portion of the state that can make so good a claim upon it as the Fifth district, and there is just as good material in that district out of which to make senators as can be found elsewhere.

Government Loaning Money.

The Prairie Farmer.

In your good paper, that I am glad to note has come out so bravely and well in the interests of the great class it represents, I have just read on page 188 (March 15, 1890) your criticism of your Michigan correspondent, Mr. Geo. Thomas, in which he advocates that our Government issue money "direct to the farmers on proper security," and you say, "It would be unfortunate, under our political system, if the Government should go into the business of loaning money to the people."

I would like to ask if the Government is not now, and has it not been for years, loaning money to one class of its people, and at a charge of only one per cent for its use at that? (With bills now before Congress to loan it absolutely free.) Take two men at the close of the war; one buys a farm for $10,000, the other buys government bonds for $10,000. Both are investments, the farm and the bonds; both represent value, and have a buying and a selling value. The money in the bonds, without any labor of the holder, has paid a much larger interest, it is true, than has the money in the farm, with all the hard work of the farmer and his family.

Those favored few, the special class "of the people" who own the bonds, can take them to Washington, deposit them in the Treasury (say $100,000), they are safer there than at home, the interest on them never stops, it is regularly and promptly paid, and on these bonds as security Uncle Sam loans this special class "of the people," $90,000 in money which they take home and as middlemen, loan government money to the farmers and others "of the people," at six, eight, ten, twelve, or more per cent interest. Now why not let the farmer have the same chance with his property? If the bankers loan the money they have obtained from Uncle Sam to a farmer on his note and he fails to pay it, don't they take his farm if necessary?

In my State, New Jersey, for many years past the State (the government) has loaned its school moneys to farmers with their farms as security, and with entire success and satisfaction.

In England a number of years ago the government loaned large sums of money on long time and very low rates of interest to farmers, for the purpose of draining their land.

How many hundreds of millions of dollars has our government loaned to another class "of the people" to help them build railroads that are now too often used to oppress the farmers?

It simply makes a difference who is doing it. U. S. Senator Stanford, of California, has within a few days introduced this matter in the Senate, and the world moves and farmers are awaking and commencing to move with it.

"All citizens shall be equal before the law," says our National Constitution, and that means finance laws, tariff laws, and all laws. Let us think on these things.

MORTIMER WHITEHEAD.

[The Prairie Farmer asserts, on broad grounds, that government should not go into the business of loaning money at all; certainly not to one class to the exclusion of others.—Ed. P. F.]

Foreclose the Mortage.

Chicago Sentinel.

For years we have been telling the people about the great land steal which was engineered by the syndicate which built the Pacific roads. We have time and again explained:

First, how the government voted money to build the roads—and then threw in 200,000,000 acres of land besides.

Second, how it has consented to accept a second mortgage for its first mortgage, for the $200,000,000 which it advanced.

Third, how it has been compelled to pay the interest on its bonds (for the $60,000,000 which it advanced) in order to protect its own credit, till it has paid out over $50,000,000 of interest.

Fourth, that Uncle Sam now stands in on $60,000,000 of principal (to be paid) and $50,000,000 interest (already paid) and a first mortgage of $30,000,000 to take up, making a grand total in round number of $140,000,000.

All for a road which cost only about $30,000,000 to build originally!

Suppose it now forecloses its mortgage and takes the road. It will have cost 20,000,000 acres of land and $140,000,000 cash for a $30,000,000 railroad.

Great scheme of financiering!

Great robbery of land!

Great head plundering the people!

And now what?

Why the robbers have had the audacity to go into Congress and ask for a continuance of their indebtedness to the government.

And there are thieves and sconndrels in Congress who propose to grant the request. [illegible]

Who says Barney Feran is going to West Superior to engage in business? Barney himself says he is not and that should be good authority.

Something new in scissors and shears, at

[51-52] STEWART & SPOTTISWOOD'S.

No, that was not a hanging match on Robert street, though it did look like a cow boy had passed into the hence and left his hat hanging to a sign.

I. U. Jennings will sell cedar shingles at $3.75 per thousand. They do not warp, check or leak, and last three times as long as pine. [51-52]

Mayor McKinnon's address to the council was a plain, practical, common sense document, with out any fuss and feathers. Alex, is that kind of a man.

Call in and see our new stock of revolvers. Prices are lower than you can imagine.

[51-52] STEWART & SPOTTISWOOD.

[51-52] STEWART & SPOTTISWOOD'S.

Have you seen that beautiful floral arch at Mrs. I. U. Jennings' new millinery store on Robert street? And such a nice display as she has aside from that is worth a visit to see. She has an elegant stock of goods and is prepared to give good bargains. Call and see the opening display this week.

Mrs. I. U. Jennings will have an opening of spring and summer millinery from the 15th to the 20th of April. Her line of pattern bonnets, hats and toques &c., are on the way and will be of the latest productions. Smoked halibut, smoked bloaters, anchoivis and Norway herring at A. Holmboe's, Robert Street. [42-2]

P. J. LaChapelle suggests that all who are interested in steppers get together and arrange for fixing up the race track. He says he has a four-year-old colt that he will match against anything in the northwest for money, chalk or marbles, or will send him round at a 2:40 gait for the stuff, providing the track is made fast enough. The track should be fixed up at once.

New, large and complete stock of revolvers, fishing tackle, target rifles, pocket knives, scissors, shears and razors, at

[51-52] STEWART & SPOTTISWOOD.

Francis, the photographer, has a new plan by which the dwellers in every village and hamlet on the Great Northern road can secure the work of a good artist. He is fitting up a car with a complete photographer's outfit and will be ready to take the road by June 1st. He offers to sell his business here to a competent artist and take some of the purchase money in trade. This is a good chance for some good artist to drop into a good business.

Fine weather for seeding this week. Lots of wheat going in the ground.

Prices lower than the lowest. Goods can't be beat. Call at Mrs. E. E. Bangs' fashionable millinery parlors on Second street.

Alleck McDonald, having spent the winter rusticating upon his farm returns with the little birds of the spring ready for business.

Jim Creighton says he saw a million ducks and geese near John Ristow's place on Sunday. Jim didn't have a spy glass along either.

Himmelsback Bros. purchased a span of Clyde mares last week from a lot that were brought here for sale. They make a splendid team.

R. G. Marlette is able to be around but still quite feeble. He says at the rate he is eating now he will soon tip the beam at a ton or so.

Max Ericsson goes to Duluth and Superior this week to look about. He has never been at Duluth and thinks he would like to see what like it is.

Miss Greene, who has been visiting her cousin, Walter Alexander and wife during the past winter, left for her home in western New York this week.

The Crookston Furniture Co. bought a fine Clyde mare last week to be used on the delivery wagon. She is a fine animal and cost a good round sum.

John Hart left last week for Great Falls, Montana, to open a wholesale fruit house for Anderson & Co. He expects to make that city his future home.

Geo. J. McManus boarded the Fosston train as it was pulling out on Tuesday. It was filled with other farmers also going out to their farms to sow the good seed for the coming harvest.

The N. P. Express Co. and the Crookston Furniture Co. have consolidated their delivery facilities.

Seeding is being done in better shape than ever before, mostly by drill. McKinnon Bro's have sold a great many of the celebrated Dowagiac drills, than which there are none better in the market.

Mr. R. Smith left for West Superior last week to engage in a commission business. Mr. S. is the well-known wheat buyer at the Red River Elevator house in Carman. We hope he will do well.

G. M. Swift was in from Maple Lake last week. Reports seeding commenced out there and the farmers are as busy as bees this week getting in the grain. If they can only get equal justice in the markets next fall they are all right.

Conductor Walter Alexander intends to start for Tacoma about May 1st with his wife for a visit to her parents. Walt may conclude to locate there though he is not sure about it. He expects to be back again ere many weeks roll by.

T. O. Bergland was severely hurt in a runaway last Saturday night. He lost several front teeth, was cut some about the face and pretty generally banged up. He was brought to the city and patched up a bit and is now as good as new.

Call and see our spring carpets and shades. We dont have to have special sale days because our patterns and Qualities are selected with the utmost care and will sell at sight.

CROOKSTON FURNITURE CO.

The N. P. surveyors were at work over in Sampson's Woodland Addition last week. From the nature of things we do not imagine the road will go over there. It will, however, probably run a spur track in to the brickyard and Walkers Mill.

Eugene Besse left for West Superior last week to engage in the commission business with R. Smith. Mr. Besse is one of the old timers, has been one of our most successful farmers, and THE JOURNAL wishes him abundant success in his new calling.

M. C. Malone returned from Tacoma on Saturday. He is not altogether satisfied with that climate and says there are many out of work. He thinks the boom is at its height. Reports the old Crookston boys doing very well. He does not think he will be one of their number right away.

The seed is now being put into the ground very fast. The ground is in fine condition and weather the best. Real estate men have had an unusual demand for lands to rent. Charlie Lowe says of 25 farms on his rent list not a single one remains. This would seem to indicate that the acreage sowed will be larger than ever.

We have received so many calls for our issue of April 10 that our extras were all exhausted before the orders were half filled. The evidences of appreciation are truly gratifying to us and it shall be our endeavor in the future as in the past to merit them. Those who have applied for extra copies will understand why they fail to receive them.

Slick? Well, we should smile. That's what Herb and Dave are up to at Herb's place on the corner. Glass front? Well, rather! The inside is transformed into a bower of beauty by evergreens and trailing vines, forming a sylvan retreat where the sighing swain can inveigle his dulcinea while he treats to chewing gum and taffy. Yum, yum!

The North Dakota Firemens' Association will hold its seventh annual turnament at Fargo on June 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th. The affair promises to beat the record. A number of the best cornet bands of Dakota and Minnesota will be there with several base ball clubs and fun galore. Four thousand dollars in prizes offered. It is expected that a rate of 1 cent per mile will be obtained for all who go in uniform and one and one-fifth fare for everybody else. All who desire hotel arrangements made should address the secretary, Arthur Basset, who will forward program on application.

A Home Cheap.

We have put in a full line of the celebrated new Home sewing machines and the low price, warranted, and above all, the many late improvements in it, would surprise you.

CROOKSTON FURNITURE CO.

Doc. Just is moving his building back and putting on an addition.

B. F. Ashelman representing Fuller & Johnson, is in the city this week.

Henry Peterson was down from Fosston this week enjoying city life.

Al Kaiser, the good-looking editor of the Thirteen Towns was in from Fosston this week booming farmer Stephens for Governor.

Louis Fontaine arrived from Butte Saturday night. He says that Butte is the livliest town he saw on his travels, and he was so favorably impressed that he secured an option on several lots and may conclude to build two or three stores to rent. He thinks the prospects for making money there for a few years are excellent. He will go back again about May 1st.

Crawford's Grand.

Wichita Daily Eagle.

Bill Nye and his company entertained a fine audience last night at the Crawford Grand. The local critics claim that the amusement notices as a rule are complimentary rather than critical, and with their assistance it was intended to subject last night's entertainment to be fearless criticism. The same was studiously prepared in advance, the secret of humor was carefully studied and furnished, whole sentences that would apply to Mr. Nye's sketches, Mr. Downey's touch and execution were wrought into high sounding sentences, Mr. Thalberg's high notes were commented upon at length while Miss Torbett's faltering diminuendos and exquisite cadences, were whipped into foam. Mr. Nye evidently heard about it and changed the programme so the criticism won't fit.

Mr. Nye's humor lies largely in his manner of saying things and although the mind is only cognizant of what is being said, during the pauses it seems as if he was enjoying it too. A sympathy at once springs up between the listener and the speaker and the latent sentiment of each sentence gradually dawns upon the mind and starts a pleasant train of thought.

Mr. Thalberg the tenor, sings with ease and deligated the audience with several choice selections. Mr. Downey's accompaiments were deserving of comment while his pianoforte solo met with generous applause. The final trio fully brought out the native musical talent of the performers, and was listened to with wrapt attention.

The violin solos of Miss Torbett were entrancing. The beauty of the performer and the grace with which she handled the bow were sufficient entertainment in themselves. The power of the king of instruments is intrusted to her keeping and is wielded with a queenly dignity that has already won her fame.

A striking feature of the entertainment was the quiet that pervaded the house. Mr. Nye never once spoke higher than a conversatinal pitch, while nearly all the musical selections were pianissimo, and yet the audience kept so quiet that not a note or a syllable was lost in the farthest recess of the theatre. At the Opera House on April 24th.

A. D. STEPHENS, Crookston, Minn.

This issue closes volume XIII, and we wish to pause here, at the turning of another mile post, to thank the many iends of THE JOURNAL for the patronage that has enabled us to do all that we have accomplished, and we trust that such patronage will increase to the end that we may accomplish far more in the future. The beginning of our 14th year witnesses a condition of our market deplorable to see, but we have every reason to hope for brighter times if the dwellers of this upper country are true to their best interests. THE JOURNAL is doing all in its power to see a free and open wheat market established, and will not stop trying short of fulfillment. To this end we need the support and encouragment of every one interested as we are—and there is not one person in this country who is not interested, whether they admit it or not. If we all work togther for this object we can certainly obtain it, and it is to-day the most vital question affecting the welfare of this country.

The noblest Roman of them all, Sam Randall, passed into eternal rest at day-break, Sunday morning. He was one of the leading minds in the Democratic party and though he never rose higher than Congressman, he was a power there. He was an aspirant for the presidency and had the party chosen him instead of Cleveland they would have taken their best man.

In his communication to the Great West, Mr. Pillsbury says that no doubt the system allows the commission of acts of great injustice "by individual buyers." That's what we are kicking about and is a strong argument for changing the system. Give the independent buyers a fair chance in our markets and "individual buyers" will lose their power to commit acts of great injustice. By all means, Charlie, let's change the deal.

C. A. Pillsbury takes several columns in the Great West to show that the elevators are making no money by the present methods of handling wheat. Well, if he is right about it, what's the use of trying to maintain that method—the farmers are sick enough of it, so let's have a change. Let us have flat houses and small warehouses by independent buyers and try a new deal. If that does not suit the farmers they at least cannot complain. If Mr. Pillsbury is sincere in his statements he should try to bring about this state of things. If he should go to the railroads and ask them to allow the building of flat houses perhaps the companies would grant the request, then we could see what virtue there is in a change of diet. But by all means, Mr. Pillsbury, let us have a change in the deal.

There is every reason to believe that wheat next fall will bring a remunerative price. The attention of the whole country has been called to this matter so forcibly that there is no doubt that some steps will be taken that will contribute to that end. Not long since Mr. Pillsbury stated that one reason why farmers do not receive more for their wheat was because of the bucket shops' manipulation of the market. The Board of Trade of Chicago at once took steps to prevent the bucket shops obtaining quotations; whether this was the reason or not the fact is that since that time wheat has gone up 8 cents per bushel in this market. The fact that the life of agriculture is threatened by the system has at last dawned upon the minds of those who manipulated the markets, and now we may expect some relief.

The brethren of the quill will meet at Mankato, on Saturday June 7th, get something good to eat with president L. P. Hunt, then leave for Chicago in the evening to assist the citizens of that beautiful little lake village in selecting a site for the location of the world's fair. After having performed that duty to the satisfaction of all, they will proceed to Washington D. C. to instruct our lawmakers in their duties, which it is thought, will not take them long, when, after having satisfactorily regulated the affairs of the world, they will return to their various and sundry dens with the quiet satisfaction of a duty well performed. They will try and convince McKinley that there are some things that even he can learn about tariff reform and will tell the boys in the menagerie what their "constitcotents" expect of 'em. Then they will spend the balance of the time with the important campaign in writing up what they (don't) know about Washington and things.

"In the Front Rank" is "Peterson's" place among the May periodicals. It is rich in excellent illustrations, capital stories, and well written miscellaneous articles. The fashion and household department are as reliable as they are varied and complete. Miss Alice Bowman's serial "The Story of Digma" cannot fail to add greatly to her rapidly growing reputation. Miss Ella Higginson who has made her mark within the last few years, begins a novelet "A Love and a Passion" which shows great originality and dramatic power. The paper on "Out of Doors Plants" will prove of great help to amateur gardeners, and every housekeeper will be obliged to Miss Scovil's for her admirable "Talk by a Trained Nurse." Besides being among the best of the story magizines and at the head of the fashion monthlies, "Peterson" is a compendium of useful and interesting information. Terms, two dollars a year. Address, Peterson's Magazine, Philadelphia.

The Minneapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Some time ago many settlers in Polk, Marshall and Kittson counties, Minn., who had settled upon odd numbered sections of land, petitioned congress for relief from what they claimed was an unjust claim of the Manitoba road to these lands. The petition was sent to Representative Comstock, who informed them that there was no relief. The petitioners were not satisfied, and sent to Representative Haugen, of Wisconsin, making in their letter some very unpleasant statements about Comstock, saying that he was devoted to corporations. Mr. Haugen conferred with Mr. Comstock and it was determined to refer the whole matter to the interior department. The land commissioner says that the settlers have no relief except in the courts, unless congress should declare the land forfeited, but this it could scarcely do, as patents have been issued, which is something very hard to get around.

Minneapolis Journal.

The National Farmers' Alliance bill, providing for national sub-treasuries, does not seem to be running very swiftly through the congressional gristmill. It was introduced in the house about six weeks ago by Congressman Pickler, of South Dakota, and since that time there has not been even a whisper about it. The committee to whom it was referred have made no report on the measure, and a hasty tour of the capitol building to-day failed to reveal the fact that it had ever been given any consideration by any committee. Congressman Pickler seems to have lost track of it, and the officers of the National Farmers' Alliance have refused to give The Journal correspondent, who called at their headqurters, any information from the Alliance standpoint. The bill will doubtless never see daylight again this season. By some it is considered an entirely unreasonable measure. It is doubtful if a careful canvass of the members of both congressional branches would reveal 25 men who would declare themselves in favor of the bill as it is now drafted. A few straggling petitions have drifted in from the county alliances asking for its passage. The greater number of these have come from Mr. Pickler's district in South Dakota. The chances for the passage of the bill begin to look exceedingly slim. So far the 51st congress has given the agricultural element very little consideration, seemingly. The close of the session may show a better aspect of affairs, but it is doubtful.

BEETS IT IS.

GENERAL INTEREST TO BE AROUSED IN THE NORTHWEST IN SUGAR MAKING.

WASHINGTON special to Minneapolis Journal, April 12.—As has already been stated in The Journal's Washington correspondence, there is every indication that the cultivation of beets is soon destined to become a leading product among the farmers in the Western and Northwestern states. The belief is general here among men who have given the matter much study, that like Minnesota, the climate of the two Dakotas is especially adapted to the raising of sugar beets. Senators Moody and Pettigrew have become greatly interested in the matter, and the views of Gen. Washburn, of Minnesota, have already been printed in The Journal. A California capitalist, who is interested in the manufacture of beet sugar, has decided to try the experiment in South Dakota, and to this end is already sending seeds to the leading farmers of that state. It is proposed to put in a trial crop this year, and if good crops are raised wheat will doubtless have to yield some room to sugar beets in that state. This is pretty sure to follow in North Dakota, and, as Senator Washburn has said, the farmers of Minnesota will probably find sugar beets a very profitable crop. If they can be raised to good advantage manufacturing establishments are sure to go up in those states. In Nebraska manufacturing plants to cost an immense sum are to go up there this summer. Iowa, too, may dethrone King Corn and try the beet industry instead. Like every agricultural pursuit, however, the fear is that it may be overdone. This, of course, is possible but not at all probable. The experiment is worth the trying by all means.

What Is to Be Done?

The Western Rural.

What is to be done? The question assumes that there is something necessary to be done; and that is true. The man who can live in the midst of the present condition of affairs among the masses in this country and not see the need of doing something and doing it at once, is not only blind but criminally stupid. Our millions of producers are in a condition of distress. They are not making their business pay, simply because the prices they obtain for their products are not sufficient to cover the cost of production in some cases, and but just above cover in others. Is this state of things the result of some fault upon the part of producers themselves? If it were it would not alter the fact that something must be done to remedy the matter. We cannot stand by and see the masses bankrupt themselves from any cause whatever. Whenever we find a man who is wasting his substance, we put him under guardianship. When we find a man who will not work and has no means of subsistence, we send him to prison as a vagrant, for the theory is that such a man must live and that he will steal rather than starve. If our farmers are shiftless, the government should direct its energies toward the work of making them otherwise; if they are too ignorant to produce in a way that will make production profitable, the government must adopt means to instruct them; if they are vagrants, it is positively the duty of the government to make them its wards as it does the Indians. The necessity of doing something is absolute under any condition of things.

But our farmers are not shiftless, not ignorant and are not vagrants. The average farmer understands his business, and adversity has made him a student of economical methods of production. We do not pretend to say that all farmers are as good farmers as they ought to be. But no man living can produce oats profitably at fifteen cents a bushel; no man on earth can produce beef at the prices which have been prevailing for ordinary beef; and no man can produce corn and ship it to market at the price which is being paid for corn in sections of the West. The adversity of the farmer is no fault of his. He grows crops in abundance and at a reasonable cost of production; he produces cattle at a reasonable expenditure. But he cannot get enough for grain or cattle to furnish a margin of profit. Well, is this state of affairs natural? Is it a fact that in this rich, fertile country the millions on our farms are doomed to financial ruin and to labor hard year after year for nothing or at best next to nothing? If so, then the sooner we have a universal flood that will sweep the race from the face of the earth, the better. If the world has become too crowded and as a result it is a fact that we must all starve, there is not the slightest use in attempting to guard any of the interests which we are accustomed to call important. But these things are not true. This country is not bankrupt. There is not a moment of time in which the wealth of this country is not increasing at a mighty pace. There is not a moment of time in which people are not getting rich from handling the very products which are produced upon our farms at a positive loss. What then is the trouble? The trouble is that the big fish are eating up the little fish. The trouble is that monopolies are gorging themselves upon the masses. The trouble is the money is king, and the government of the country has been winking at the most infernal dishonesty, which has passed under the name of enterprise, that the world has ever seen. A few men get together and form a corporation. It may be a bank. The bank proceeds to play the roll of Shylock and never ceases to play the roll as long as it exists. It may be a stock yard corporation which charges the producer four prices for everything that he gets, and the government looks upon the robbery smilingly; it may be a millers' combine or an elevator combine, and in either case it will rob the farmer blind; or it may be a railroad corporation, and if it is, it will make dividends or the stockholders, or fortunes for the managers if it must take the bread from the mouths of the farmer's children to do it.

Present conditions are simply monstrously unjust. They are a grand hustle and tumble for money, and the man who has the most money has the greatest power for robbing his fellow men. The way to reform matters is to do justice; it is for the government, which costs us so much to sustain, to enforce justice. Now no one needs to be told what justice is. Every Congressman and every State legislator knows what justice is. Every one of them knows that to permit a railroad company to charge a Nebraska farmer so much for transporting his corn to market that he cannot make a red cent, is a cruel injustice. He knows that the government should have such a grip upon railroad management that it could compel the railroads to do some service that might not be profitable to them, when other branches of business must be run at a loss. If government will put a stop to the steady robbery of farmers by corporations and Saylocks, it will pretty nearly solve the problem as to what must be done to make farming profitable.

The Sub-Treasury Plan.

Iowa Tribune.

The sub-treasury plan for the financial relief of the country, proposed by the Knights of Labor and the various Farmer's organizations that met in St. Louis last December, is now attracting universal attention, and the South Dakota Legislature has called upon Congress to build warehouses in the various agricultural counties of the U. S. and receive the nonperishable products of the farmers, such as cotton, wheat, rice, corn, etc., and advance upon them 80 per cent of their market value, so as to relieve producers and help them escape the open jaws of the pools, combines and banks, that steal their substance like the locusts of Egypt. There is one thing that farmers are rapidly deciding, namely that the U. S. government must treat the producers of our food and clothing, and of all things that render life desirable, with as much consideration as it now bestows upon national bankers and whiskey distillers.

We have a thousand times exposed the favoritism of the government shown to bankers, and we have recently shown in what a remarkable manner distillers are favored. A few hours perusal of the Internal Revenue laws which may be found in the Revised Statutes of the U. S., will convince any reader of this partiality. The law absolutely requires that distilled spirits must be turned into the government bonded warehouse within three days of their manufacture. Upon their receipt by the government store-keeper a warehouse receipt is handed to the distiller, and he is allowed to leave his spirits in the hands of the U. S. for three years without paying any tax, and is financially taxed only on so much as has escaped evaporation during the long process of "ripening."

As soon as the distiller gets his warehouse receipt he can sell it for the full value of the spirits, or if he prefers can deposit it in a bank and borrow almost its value upon it. The national bank and whisky interests are so allied in this country that they fight together in Congress. The U. S. takes the banker's bonds and stores them twenty years, giving back 90 per cent of their face in crisp money on which only one per cent per annum is charged, and also pays the bank the interest as it accrues upon the bonds.

The U. S. takes the distilled spirits from the manufacturers and holds it three years for trifling charges, giving the distiller a receipt which enables him to realize the cash value of his goods in three days after their manufacture, or hold the same upon speculation as he may desire, without paying tax upon it. Twins!

In order to show our readers exactly the nature of the recept given by the U. S. for spirits, we called upon a bank in town where we found a number of these certificates upon deposit, which had been purchased outright for the value of the whisky described By the courtesy of the owner we were allowed to make an exact copy of one and give it to our readers. Of course we cannot show up the pretty pictures on it but give the words as follows:

U. S. BONDED WAREHOUSE RECEIPT FOR WHISKY.

Robbing the Farmers.

So Called Scheme of the Twin Cities to Bleed the Farmers.

LARIMORE, N. D., March 29.—A large majority of the farmers of North Dakota are indignant over the alleged charity of the business men of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and it is the intention of most of them to confuse the seed wheat purchased with the $300,000 guarantee fund raised in the Twin cities.

They look on the arrangement as a scheme concocted by the elevator companies, the millers and the bankers to sell wheat at twenty-five cents a bushel more than it is worth in the market and get 12 per cent interest on their money. Under the agreement a needy farmer must pay $1 for every bushel he secures for seed out of the first money he secures on his crops, because the seed wheat loan becomes a first lien, and is ample security to those who furnish the wheat if the yield is even five bushels an acre. The whole affair is doubly an outrage, because North Dakota's farmers were last fall forced to have this same wheat graded No. 2 and received fifty cents a bushel for it. Now they are asked to receive it from the elevator companies as No. 1 hard, and pay $1 per bushel for it, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent.

In many communities the more thrifty farmers will aid those who are needy, while in others there is a disposition to sow no grain at all rather than submit to this new species of robbery.

The Great West.

To our Senators and Representatives in Congress greeting: We the members of Farmers' Alliance No. 653, of Hennepin County, and state of Minnesota, look with alarm upon the present financial condition of our country, upon the general depression of business, the falling prices, the vast indebtedness of the agricultural class of our citizens, together with the grips of the money loaners on farms, and yet not money enough in circulation to meet their demands, or the demands of trade. As this depressed condition of trade pervades our country; therefore Resoved, That we call upon Congress of the United States, our money making power, to the effect that they issue fiat money, full legal tender, non-interest bearing in bills of $1, 2, 3, 5, 10, 20 and $100, denamiuation, (greenbacks), in such volume as will relieve this pressure upon the people. This money may be distributed through the sub-Treasury plan as proposed by the Farmer's Alliance, or by a general system of internal improvement, on public roads as proposed by the "Financier" and Great West, by Senator Sanford's plan or any other that will be effective and not speculative.

This business may all be done through the postal service with special agents.

We do not believe that any effective relief could reach the masses of the people through our present banking system.

Through a motion by Mr. [illegible] it was agreed that the plan proposed by Senator Sanford was the most effective of any of the others. Motion made by Mr. [illegible] that the [illegible] be sent to the Great West and [illegible] with a request that they all act upon the matter [illegible]

E. E. TAYLOR,
Secretary Alliance 653.
Hennepin County.

Money to Loan.

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance........$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest.......... 80 00

Total yearly payments...$ 168 44
Total for ten years.........1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest.......................$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of.......... 500 00
When the loan is due he pays.. 1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years......................... 1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest.............................$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years..... 1000 00

Total.................................$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

Fertile Journal.

SPOKANE FALLS, Wash., April 11, '90.

Comrade J. H. Pelham:

DEAR SIR:—To fulfill my promise I take this opportunity to write you a few lines to let you know that I am well and I hope this will find you and yours enjoying the same good blessing.

Well, comrade, I will give you a little history of my trip out here. We started Sunday morning, got fifteen miles from Fertile and discovered my car was on fire under the stove; stopped the train, put out the fire and arrived at Winnipeg Junction at 7 o'clock. I gathered up some brick and was fixing up the stove when a couple of cars came along and bucked against the car I was in. Well, I bucked one joint of stove pipe in two and knocked about three inches square of skin off from the side of my face. I jumped out of the car and there stood a brakesman. I asked him if he wanted to kill a man and he asked me how far I was going. I told him to Spokane Falls. He said, "Pard, you had better get your life insured." I suppose he thought there was lots of consolation in that; but I did not, and I told him so. Well, in about twenty minutes our train started and in a few minutes out crawled a couple of tramps from among the sacks of potatoes and at the muzzle of a 44 caliber I was ordered to make them some coffee and give them some breakfast, and as there were two and I only one I had to comply with their request. But didn't I wish I had some strychnine to put into that coffee? Why, of course not, for when I took the second look at them I discovered that they were old friends of mine, and they stuck to me all the way out here. Well, it was a very unpleasant trip for we had had cold weather. There is lots of talk of fine scenery between there and here but it is a mistake, or I had the misfortune to pass it all in the night. The only nice scenery I have seen here is the Falls, and they are grand. This is quite a city but the filthiest one I was ever in. It is no wonder it is so very sickly here. The people seem to be almost totally demoralized. There are 150 or 200 saloons and dance houses, all in full blast day and night and lots of churches, 12 to 15 of them, and only five schools in a city of 25,000 inhabitants. I consider this city a disgrace to a country that claims to be civilized. There seems to be but one object in view here, and that is to get the almighty dollar, but that dollar has got nearly out of the reach of the poor man, you can bet. It is very hard times here now; hundreds of men sleeping around this city in the woods without a blanket and nothing to eat, only what they beg or steal and no work for more than one-third of the men that are here and men coming here from Seattle, Tacoma and Portland say it is worse there than it is here. I have worked six days and a half since I came but no more show for work here. I shall leave here to-morrow or next day. I don't know just where I will go yet, but I think to Post Falls, 25 miles up the river from here.

Johnston went from here Wednesday to Post Falls. Ellis is here working in a lodging house at small wages till he can get something better. I saw Kleycn's brother here. He has not got work yet.

Well, comrade, I have figured this country up as close as I can considering the short time I have been here and have come to the conclusion that the poor man who comes from that country here thinking to better his condition will be fearfully disappointed when he gets here. I will give a few reasons why I think so. First, the wages are not as high here as there considering the difference in the cost of living; second, it is no farming country; third, it is no stock country and it is no lumbering country. There is some mining going on forty or fifty miles from here. This town has been boomed entirely by eastern capitalists and as fast as they realize about 900 per cent from their investments they leave the country for good. None of them come here to stay; that is the reason of the hard times and no work here now. There is no money here to build with, and in my opinion two years from now property that is held very high here now cannot be sold at all. It will be almost valueless. There is nothing to back the country up.

Before closing I will say, my advice to you and all is, if you are bound to leave that country, don't come here, for that country is far ahead of this for a poor man. Go to some better place than this. But if you have lots of money to get back there, and don't know anything about the temptations of a Christian and want a right smart pleasure trip just jump on a car of [illegible] and come to Spokane Falls and you will realize the whole thing. Yours respectfully,

J. B. THURSTON.

STATE FARMERS' ALLIANCE,
Office of Secretary.
Dawson, Minn., April 16, 1890.

ED. JOURNAL: Enclosed find charter No. 868 and receipt for fees. I may congratulate you as well as the alliance of Minnesota on the noble work you are doing for the agricultural class. There is no time now to stop to take breath, for if we intend to capture the next legislature, and I, for one, hope the Governor also, we must get our forces in hand in time.

I shall send out in a few days a circular letter to all the subordinate and county alliances in the state asking them to express their opinion on independent political action, and I want particularly to call the attention of our best thinkers to the gravity of the situation. For my own part, I see no prospect of relief from either of the old political parties. Senator Davis, whom we have all looked to, to champion the people's cause, has put himself on record as favoring the bill reducing the interest on railroad indebtedness to the United States, and allowing them to run practically ad infinitum. The recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the milk rate cases looks as though our inter-State Commerce law was a law only in name. The last vestige of relief seems to be slipping away from us, but as the Dred Scott decision was the death knell of slavery, so I trust this infamous decision may be the death knell of monopoly.

The only true remedy is national ownership and control of railroads and telegraph lines, and the sooner we grasp the situation the sooner we will apply the remedy. This decision ought to bring it to us in five years. By God's grace let us show that we are equal to the emergency. Yours,

JOHN LATHROP.

WINTER WHEAT.

A Considerable Portion of the Acreage in Several States Will Be Ploughed.

CHICAGO, April 15.—The following crop summary will be printed in the Farmers' Review of this week:

"The condition of winter wheat has not changed within the past two weeks. In many of the states a considerable portion of the winter wheat acreage will be ploughed. A few correspondents in Michigan and Wisconsin report that 25 to 30 per cent. of the winter wheat acreage will be ploughed. Wheat in Kansas has suffered from drouth and the high winds that have prevailed in that state during the past two weeks. An excess of moisture is reported in Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, and Wisconsin. Some seeding has been done in Illinois, but work has been greatly retarded in many counties by the wet weather. On this account little or no seeding has been done in Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky Wisconsin and Michigan. In Minnesota, the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, where the condition of the soil has been more favorable for spring work, seeding is nearly finished, and in Kansas farmers have began planting corn. We summarize by precentage the reports of our correspondents relative to the condition of winter wheat as follows:

Illinois...75 Missouri....86 Michigan...70
Indiana..72 Kentucky..88 Wisconsin...79
Ohio.....80 Kansas....93

THE SUGAR BEET.

Its Cultivation in Dakota.

Northwestern Farmer and Breeder.

Bulletin No. 16, issued in February by the departments of Agriculture and Chemistry of the South Dakota Agricultural College and Experiment Station, Brookings, South Dakota, gives the results of the experiments made by the Station in the cultivation and crop value of the sugar beet in that latitude. In the preparation of the soil it has been found that deep plowing in the fall, and thorough pulverization, gives the best results, but care should be taken, in the final preparation, to avoid any plowing or deep stirring that would cause loss of any moisture accumulated during winter; but thorough preparation of the soil is a prime requisite. The clod crusher and roller are recommended, also deep plowing which provides a depth of mellow soil sufficient to grow the beets entirely below the surface; if they are forced above ground the protruding portion becomes tainted, and requires extra work in clarifying the sugar.

In planting, it is shown that beets grown thickly in the row produce the heaviest crop and the largest percentage of sugar, and where land is cheap and manual labor high it is best to plant the rows at such distance apart as to be easily cultivated with horse implements. From twenty inches to two feet is recommended, but even this leaves hardly sufficient room for [illegible] cultivation. [illegible] the rows, thinned to eight inches apart in the row, which produced the smallest beets, but richest in per cent. of sugar.

The season's planting was done May 10th, in furrows one and one-half inches deep; drilled in with garden drill and covered with the hoe, the covering being well firmed to hold the moisture. Germination can be hastened by soaking the seeds twenty-four hours in hot water; they can be dried by rolling in plaster or dry soil. Thorough cultivation to kill weeds, early, and keep the soil loose and mellow on top, is advised.

The bulletin advises thinning done just after a rain, and this should be done before the roots begin to develop; or a sharp hoe can be used, but care should be taken to cut deep enough to prevent after growth, and also not to disturb the roots of those plants that are to be left to grow.

The greatest difficulty that appears to stand in the way of the cultivation of the sugar beets in some parts of the northwest is the heavy frost or freezing weather that may and often does come before the beets have time to ripen up. Of this danger the bulletin does not refer to directly, but under "Harvesting" we find this: "The crop should be pulled and stored in the root cellar or put in piles convenient for covering in the field before there is any danger of injury from freezing. * * * A temperature low enough to freeze the surface of the ground will destroy their keeping qualities. * * * Though the injury may at first seem very slight, experience has shown that they soon become spongy, then turn black and finally rot." The beet grower is cautioned not to cut or break the roots of the sugar beets, as their keeping quality will be injured.

The analysis with the view to determine the value of the varieties grown on the Experimental grounds, was conducted with great care, and the report given is very complete. Vilmorins Imperial gave the largest percent of sucrose, 12.3; White coming next with 11.2, the latter giving the largest yield per acre of the ten varieties, but deficient in percent of sucrose to make its manufacture profitable, if according to recent authorities, it requires 13. per cent of sucrose to pay for handling.

Prof. Foster, the agriculturist of the station, under whose direction the experiments have been made during the past two years, is to be congratulated on the thoroughness of his work which is evidenced by this carefully prepared bulletin. Further experiments during the present season will probably develop other facts with particular reference to seed to be sown to give the best results. Farmers can greatly aid in the work of the Station by experimenting on their own account. Samples sent to the Station will be analized free of charge.

Duty of Government.

The Western Rural.

People unite in national league and appoint agents, whom they call officials, to better insure the safety of life and property, and to aid in individual and public prosperity. In all such associations the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number is the basis of government action, and, therefore, individual rights and privileges are frequently circumscribed and sometimes completely neglected. But when the rights of the individual and of society do not come in conflict, the individual is entitled to complete protection, and the government must exhaust its force, if necessary, to give it. This is the character of all government worthy of the name. But the world has not fully grown out of the old monarchial idea that government means a polite employment for a royal herd, the assessment of taxes to support the rulers, and a means of defense against foreign attack. This is about all the governments of the Old World amount to, although the idea even there has suffered some modification as a consequence of the growing intelligence and developing manhood among the masses. In many particulars this country is still tied to its mother's apron strings. The shadow of England is very distinct in many of our customs and theories, and nowhere more distinct than in the prevalent idea of what government is. It would be pretty difficult for a candid man to say what government has ever done for him, except to eat up the taxes that he has paid. We elect a President and Congress for ornament. The very looks of them, it is true, frightens foreign foes, and in that particular, like scare crows in a corn field, they are useful. But as agents to carry out the wishes of the association that appointed them, [illegible] force for reasonable protection [illegible] the individual or the masses, they are lamentable failures. [illegible] archial governments the term would be applicable. They assume the divine right to rule, and grasping the sceptre whether the people are or are not willing, they should be in every sense of the word a parent to the children they are "appointed" to rule over. If one is weak, they should cuddle him. He pays taxes for the privilege of being cuddled. If one is bad, they should spank him, and they are pretty sure to do that anyhow. Government is both papa and mamma when the slipper is to be used, but it is government, cold, unfeeling, repulsive government when the child asks for sympathy and succor.

In a popular government like our own, the government is simply the head of a family. It is appointed to take care of our interests, individually and collectively. It does undertake to educate us, in the very face of the ranting of the press against "papa" government. It guards our morals and stands between us and the ruthless trade of a foreign army. But that is all it does, except to live on us. Formerly it maintained and regulated the highways on which we travel, but now it has given a part of them to the control of private parties; and it has permitted the weak to be robbed by the strong, and is permitting it all the time, until the average citizen earnestly inquires, What is government for? Scattered all over the country, in comparative isolation, are our thousands of farmers, gathering wealth from the fields and feeding the nation and a large part of the world. It is not always practical for the farmer to combine with his brother farmers—though he might do better in that respect than he does—to protect his own rights. In the centers of population, on boards of trades and in stock gambling resorts, combination is made to deprive him of the fruits of his own toil, and government permits it. The railroad, the telegraph, the produce markets and the oil from whose light he reads these words, are under the control of sharpers whose business of life is to make all the money possible regardless of the rights of others. If it is not the government's business to stop this system of robbery and to protect its citizens from pillage, we had better reform it. If it is not its business, then we have not yet struck upon the proper idea of government. If that is not within its province, then all that government is in its connection with domestic interests, is to present a political idea, and we submit that the support of a hundred thousand official tax eaters for any such purpose as that is a criminal waste of money. In the matter of postal facilities, the government furnishes them, and manages the postal services. Is there any reason, therefore, why it should not at least rigidly supervise the management of railroads, telegraph and the boards of trade? Entirely out of its line to interfere with markets, we expect to hear some one remark. Are you right sure of that? The government broke down the conspiracy of Black Friday and saved the people from further loss by unloading a large amount of gold upon the market. That looks as if it had something to do with markets, when it wishes to have, does it not? Nor will we forget that in every well regulated city there are public markets directly under the control of government. Government has a right to interfere with anything that is detrimental to the people, and if it is efficient government, it will do it. So far as our government is concerned, we can compel it to do so, if we desire.

Mr. Lind Objects.

To the Sugar Schedule—Other Minnesotans Pleased with the Bill.

The Minneapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—With the exception of Mr. Lind, the Minnesota delegation is pleased with the tariff bill. Mr. Lind objects to it because of the hardships it will entail upon persons in the South who have expended so much to produce and manufacture sugar, but Senator Washburn, speaking of this objection, says: "The people of this country have stood a heavy duty for years on 90 per cent of all the sugar consumed here, and it strikes me that 2 cents a pound on one-tenth they use and get nine-tenths free of duty will be an advantage to the people at large which the few sugar manufacturies of the South can well afford to yield."

A Chance for the "Soo" Bill.

Senator Davis Trying to Combine with Southwestern Members.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Yesterday Senator Davis and Senator Coke, of Texas, went over to the house and began some missionary work in the interest of the "Soo" bill among various members. They found the sentiment very favorable toward taking the "Soo" bill out of the river and harbor bill and coupling it with the Galveston deep water harbor bill and pass both as separate measures. Next Saturday Crookston alliance No. 698 will meet to consider the starch factory question and every farmer, whether a member of the Alliance or not is cordially invited to be present. THE JOURNAL is informed by Joseph Laframboise that he will be present representing at least 12 shares. Several other farmers have expressed a willingness to join under certain circumstances. All such should be present next Saturday as the matter should be decided one way or the other as soon as possible so that if it is decided to build, farmers can make arrangements to plant a sufficient number of potatoes. There is no time to lose and all who feel interested should turn out to the meeting next Sat

SYLVESTER—PETERSON.—In Milnor, North Dakota, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. Carl Seltwert, on Monday, April 14th, 1890, Mr. S. A. Sylvester, of this city, to Miss Ella Peterson, of Milnor, D. D.

S. A. Sylvester is one of Crookston's prominent young business men, being a member of the firm of Alderman & Sylvester, hardware merchants. The young lady is a prominent member of society in Milnor, North Dakota. The young couple will go to housekeeping on Ash street soon. THE JOURNAL extends congratulations to the happy couple.

Miss Jennie Newland is spending the week with Mrs. A. A. Dickenson at Stephen.

One of our faithful farmer friends writes us as follows: "I am sorry that the county board decided that we could better afford to take our chances on getting a crop from poor seed than they could afford to trouble themselves a little in our behalf to get a few bushels of good, (or at least fair seed,) into this county. The seed we are forced to use is so poor that it will be a miracle if even with the most favorable weather we get a half crop. It seems to me this is a "saving at the spigot" policy. The Great West is doing good work; every farmer who sees it will work right in line. THE POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and the Great West will get many subscribers here next fall."

Volume XIV No. 1. Everybody should enlist in THE JOURNAL army. Now is the time to subscribe.

Our thanks are due Senator Washburn for a copy of the President's message relating to the opening of the Red Lake Reservation and the report of the commission showing the names of the Indians who signed and all of the proceedings in the case. It makes a pamphlet of 193 pages full of interesting matter.

Give Us An Open Market.

The system we have is not that. It is a market wherein is no competition; wherein the price is fixed by the buyer with no regard to the rights of the seller upon a basis that will yield him an absolute certain per cent. on his money. The elevator system encourages dishonesty in that its buyers are all under bonds to make their weights and grades hold out, and, while in many cases they really think the wheat would stand a 1 Hard grade, they dare not take chances on it so down she goes at No. 1 Northern with as many points off as they think the victim will stand. If a rich elevator man owns a wood-lot in this country and should sell a settler wood from it at so much per cord, and said settler should take two or three or four cord feet over a cord at each load, the elevator man would call it and along would come the sheriff and snatch Mr. Poor Settler bald headed. Or if he should sell him a cord of No. 3 Northern wood for a certain price and Mr. Settler should (by mistake (?) of course) take a cord of No. 1 Hard, what a howl there would be, my countrymen! And away goes Mr. Settler to the bastile, and yet, with how much more justice in the wood case than in the wheat case? We wonder if our business men ever stopped to consider what proportion of the wheat that has been taken out of this country as rejected or No. 3 was really No. 1 Northern, or have been curious enough to try to ascertain how much wheat has been stolen from the country under the name of dockage? We believe the total would astonish most people, and we are pretty positive that if the total amount thus taken away from trade could be given in round figures there would be no wonder expressed that the farmer kicks at the system that allows this wholesale robbery. We want a change in that system; we must have it; we will have it if the farmers are

STEALING,

TRUE TO THEIR BEST INTERESTS.

We want a system wherein an independent buyer can engage on equal footing with the opulent elevator man; wherein grading is a matter of individual judgment, the wheat selling on its own merits. We claim that our Minnesota grown spring wheat is worth more for milling purposes than softer wheats grown in milder climates, and that the man who does the work necessary to produce the wheat is entitled to the benefits of this superior quality, [illegible] he does not get it. The system in which he markets gives this differ[illegible] to the elevator man and the mi[illegible] the former getting no more for his [illegible] than if it was a southern soft [illegible] And yet we are told that this is [illegible] country wherein the rights of the [illegible] man are as sacred as the rights of [illegible]illionaire! It will not be until the [illegible]lest citizen in the land can stand [illegible] an equality with the rich man in [illegible] markets. We want a free and open [illegible]ket for our wheat, and the Farmers' [illegible]lliance will be content with nothing

Norman County Herald: J. E. Campbell and N. A. Mott leave Ada the first part of next week for West Superior, Wis., where they will go into the livery business. Both Mr. Campbell and Mr. Mott have been identified with the interests of Ada from nearly the time the town was started and Ada people generally will be sorry to have them leave.

Grand Forks Herald: On Saturday forenoon the three-year old child of Judge Corliss accidentally swallowed some aconite by mistake. The services of Dr. Wheeler were speedily applied with successful result. It was a close call though and it will be some time yet before the child has fully recovered from the bad effects of the poison. The bottle containing the aconite happened to be lying somewhere around and the little one grabbed for it and quaffed the contents.

Marshall County Leader: Seeding is now in full sway. Some work was done last week but the ground was hardly in condition for good work until the middle of this week. Wheat has probably never gone into the ground under more auspicious conditions than at present. The wheat acreage will be decreased very much all through northwestern Minnesota, due principally to the failure last fall to complete the plowing. Most of the spring plowing will be sown to other crops. A general purpose of summer fallowing more land, will also operate to decrease the acreage of acreage.

What is the Alliance for?

The Great West.

The Farmers' Alliance must have some real cause for its existence, or else it should at once be disbanded, the firmers take up the usual routine of business, and the politicians continue his rule undisturbed.

What is the advertised cause of its existence? To unite the toilers together to overthrow the present political agencies which are in the control of the corporations and the exchangers. To so govern the country that the immense wealth of a few and the extreme poverty of the many is an impossibility. This is indeed its purpose.

What is the invisible cause of Alliance? If we say, after a careful inspection of the field, that in Minnesota a large portion of the official mechanism of the Alliance is oiled with selfish ambition and political schemery, how far will we be wrong?

Oh ye toilers—ye laborers—ye whose sweaty faces and soil-worn garments put upon your spirits the yoke of the oppressed—is it for this that you have struggled out of the night into the dawn—hoping that the glimmer of the morning is truly the warm flush of the rising sun? Is it true that the scarlet blush is but the red fire of political ambition—that selfishness is betraying you? Do you suppose that the trusted men you put at the head of your army are suddenly inspired to unholy ambitions—to use you even now as a sacrifice to their own selfishness?

What a terrible thing is the destruction of the public conscience! Into what pit of degradation are we fallen!

And yet, is it right, even now, with the facts pointing their leprous finger right at you, to destroy or defeat the Alliance? No, friends. Let the man who knows these unwritten truths cling still closer—work still harder, until the overmastering force of numbers and of public wrath compels even the recreants to do their duty.

There are cowards. For some inscrutable purpose God made men who would be cowards. He sprinkled them thickly amid his people. That his hand is in the destiny of nations is a visible truth. That cowards often betray the cause of righteousness so that even the children may awake to wrath, is doubtless true. If so, what a mountain of indignation will soon arise in the field of conflict, for the cowards are many and the secret betrayers not a few.

Oh, for Men—men in whose hearts is erected an altar, on which burns a sacrificial flame. The great spirit of a sinless Infinite breathes a perpetual prayer for humanity to produce brave men!

When we see the trading going on among many of those who talk of faith and loyalty, and secretly scheming for self; men with whom the slightest elevation in the Alliance spawns "bees" to buzz in brainless bonnets, it makes one wish for the swift lightning of Sinai or the hailfire of Sodom. Would to God that a cyclone from one of Hell's geysers would lick them up—as a Scavenger of Vengeance.

The day is yet brightening. The hope and promise are with us—but the great struggle is yet to come.

United We Stand.

The Co-Operator.

The most important requirement for the labor and farmer organizations to consider is, how to bring all their efforts to bear upon the objective points they are trying to reach; division is and has been the bane causing all troubles, discord instead of symphony has grated upon the tympanums of the needy ones who, until quite lately, have seemed to forget that it is necessary to have a majority in order to reach the goal of their ambition. It has been necssary to educate the masses that they may use ordinary common sense in their methods of action and not kill their best friends and make pets of their worst enemies. They are learning fast and will profit by the experience of the past, which until recently, they have never done. They can see now that it will save them money, time, health, happiness and a vast amount of troubles, trials and annoyances from the ruthless ruffians who have and are robbing, ruling and ruining them under the cognomen of friendship. We see and hear from every quarter now that the masses are uniting and it should be firmly impressed upon them that unity is the great essential, so that to secure it all should be, ready and willing to ignore all minor points that the essentials may be secured we can afford to drop all whims or specialties that only cranks adhere too, and work for the general good that all may be benefitted instead of a few. Some narrow minded ones seem to think one thing will cover all our wants, but men of sense know that to be a mistake and good people are willing to drop self as far as is practicable for the public good and those who are not willing to do so should be dropped as wolves in sheep's clothing. Organize, unite, combine and harmonize as far as is possble, and victory will soon be inscribed upon your banners and a permanent victory too.

Marshall County Leader: The improvements which were to be made in side track facilities are turning out in the usual way. The indications are that when the Great Northern completes the work now going on in the yard there will be but one side track, the elevator track, in place of the three there were at one time. If the object in leaving only an elevator track is to make private shipping more difficult and force elevator patronage, the Great Northern is taking the step at a very inopportune time. The railroad and elevator corporations should bear down light until after the fall election otherwise they may be placed under the disagreeable need of buying up a farmer legislature next winter.

Repeal of Tree Claim Acts.

The Moorhead News.

The following are the provisions of the bill, H. R. 7254, to repeal the timber culture laws, &c., which passed the house of representatives March 22, 1890. This bill we think should pass the senate and become a law, in justice to the government and the people, to say nothing of those deluded citizens who, during the boom periods, filed on tree claims and have since honestly tried to make trees grow on them while living elsewhere. Some of these have sunk in this useless endeavor from $300 to $600 and now have no trees to show for their large expenditure. The fact is it is simply impossible to make trees grow on the prairies of the Dakotas unless a man lives on the land where he can protect them from the fires and winds which sweep across them, and in dry seasons carry water to them, which last, however, would in most cases be impracticable. This act allows the entryman who has endeavored to comply with the timber culture laws, to purchase his claim at the government's minimum price of $1.25 per acre, or $200 per quarter section, an instance of simple justice. We hope the senators from Minnesota and the Dakotas will push the bill through the senate. It will render substancial relief to many entrymen who have found their tree claims a financial burden, but who are loth to give them up owing to the cash and labor they have heretofore bestowed upon them. We are indebted to Hon. S. G. Comstock for a copy of the bill:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

That the act to amend an act entitled "An act to encourage the growth of timber on Western prairie," approved June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and all laws relating to or authorizing timber-culture entries, are hereby repealed: Provided, That all entries heretofore made may be perfected to patent in accordance with the provision of said act.—And provided further, That all contests initiated against timber culture entries prior to the passage and approval of this act shall be heard and determined in accordance with the laws, rules and regulations governing such cases and in force at the date of the passage of this act.

Sec. 2. That any person who has made entry of any public lands of the United States under the timber culture laws, and who has for a period of four years in good faith complied with the provisions of said laws, shall be entitled to make final proof thereto, and acquire title to the same, by the payment of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre for such tract, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the secretary of the interior.

Sec. 3. That no land acquired under the provisions of this act shall in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt or debts contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor.

Now Let "Rome Howl!"

The Great West.

For weeks this paper has been stirring up the wheat animals in the commercial menagerie!

For weeks we have quoted No. 1 hard in the Liverpool and London market at $1.10 and $1.11—per bushel. Once we let slip the quotation $1.18.

For weeks the wheat men of Minneapolis have been jumping onto us—and two men came over to the State Meeting to show us that we didn't know the market price in Liverpool—300 farmers heard the positive statement that No. 1 hard was worth but $1.05 a bushel in Liverpool.

On our statements of a robbery of 20 to 23c. a bushel on Minnesota wheat there has been a challenge issued of $20,000 by the wheat dealers.

If now, the wheat men will change that challenge to what we made the issue, WE WILL TAKE IT UP. Our issue was that there was a difference of 23c. between Crookston wheat plus the freight—and the Liverpool market.

WE WILL GO FIVE BETTER, and wager that No. 1 hard wheat is this day (April 10) in Liverpool market reports, quoted at $1.20—or 58c. above Crookston at 62c.—or 33c. above Crookston plus the freight!!!!!!

Further, we will wager that "Duluth wheat"—a mixed grade—is quoted in the English market at $1.14 which was 53c. above Crookston.

And this is counting but 24c. to the shilling.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
Executive Department.
St. Paul, April 19th, 1890.

DEAR SIR: Some time since I furnished you for publication a report on seed wheat. Since then Prof. Harper has furnished me a report on seed oats, of which the following is a copy:

"Nearly all oats raised in the Valley, particularly in the nothern portion, were badly rusted in 1889. I have been unable to make a sufficient number of analyses of oats to say just how the rust has affected the chemical composition; but a comparison of the physical condition of badly rusted oats and badly frozen wheat leads me to believe that the effects on the two have been similar. It has been shown that rusted wheat, when well cleaned, has, under favorable conditions yielded good wheat. It is reasonable to believe that a similar result may follow the seeding of these "light oats." But there is this difference between wheat and oats: The structure of the grain facilitates the preservation and propagation of the rust spores from year to year, while wheat does not. As Dr. Lugger has explained the accumulation of straw stocks does the same thing in preserving the spores on wheat. To get rid of rust a renewal of either rust-proof or rust-free oats is demanded. The farmers have decided to secure at least the latter, and shipments are being made from places where there has been no rust. This, however, offers a chance for the introduction of foul seed, particularly wild oats. As this is a plant whose seed is not known by the farmers of this section, it is desirable to guard against its introduction. The only way which has suggested itself is by a system of inspection by competent persons similar to that exercised by the State Grain Inspection at terminal points. Indeed such an inspection of seed grain annually would seem advisable, where now for self-protection to the state it may be necessary in the case of seed oats. [illegible]

As will be seen, this report contains information of much importance to our farmers, and it seems to me that it would be well to enlighten them on the subject. Therefore I have the honor of requesting of you the additional favor of causing the same to be published in your valuable paper, or to make such comments thereon as seems to you most desirable. If you will kindly do this I will appreciate it very much.

Yous respectfully,
W. R. MERRIAM,
Governor.

Anti-Trust in the Senate.

Farm, Stock and Home.

A short time since an anti-trust bill was introduced into the United States Senate, the work of some monopolists who just now are standing in some awe of the usually despised mass of our people. The bill was framed with the evident attempt to have it defeat its own purpose; was, in the estimation of many good lawyers, clearly unconstitutional. It was referred to the judiciary committee, which comprises some of the best constitutional lawyers in the Senate. It was expected that the bill would take a long nap in committee, would then be unfavorably reported upon, because of its unconstitutional features, "there would be no time for further action this session," and so the farce would be played to its end. To the great consternation, however, of the trust-loving senators the judiciary committee amended the bill, fixed it up so it would accomplish its purpose, so its constitutionality would stand the test of courts, and promptly reported it to the Senate. The bill treats capitalistic combinations to advance prices of necessaries of life as conspiracies against the public weal, and as being clearly punishable as such. It is difficult to see how the Senate can fail to promptly pass the bill, or why the bill should not become a law within a very brief period. The fact is, the powers that be are beginning to realize that the people are aroused, that the "mud sills" are becoming restless under the weight they are supporting, and hence the people may reasonably expect some helpful legislation.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

CROOKSTON, MINN., APRIL 24, 1890.

Their Actual Cost.

Pioneer Press.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, April 6.—Representative Lind will to-morrow introduce an important bill, which requires the interstate commerce commission to ascertain and report the actual cost of construction of railroads in the United States. By the terms of the bill the commission is directed to commence at once and as rapidly as possible to ascertain and report the actual cost of construction per mile of each railroad in the United States, over or upon which interstate commerce is carried; also the cost of right of way, depot and terminals, amount of aid, municipal or other, received by the person or corporation constructing the road, the amount and value of lands granted by congress or state to aid construction, the amount realized from the sale of such lands, the value of such lands now owned by such company; also the cost of building such railroad depot and other buildings as they now exist at the present time. Power and authority is conferred upon the commission or any member of it to require the attendance of witnesses, the production of all books, papers, contracts, agreements and documents relating to or bearing upon the matter to be ascertained and to administer oaths; also to that end the commission or any member of it may invoke the aid of any court of the United States. Any of the circuit or district courts of the United States within whose jurisdiction such inquiry is made may, in case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpœna issued to any person, issue an order requiring any such person to appear before the commission or any member of it and produce such evidence as required, and refusal to obey the order shall be punishable as contempt. The information thus gathered shall be published in the annual reports of the commission, and when so reported shall be received and considered in all proceedings before the commission or any of the courts of the United States in which such facts are material on any question at issue. The commission, subject to the approval of the secretary of the interior, is authorized to employ and fix the compensation of such engineers and experts as may be necessary to enable it to carry out the requirements of the act.

Senator Kellar's New Twine Machine.

Farm Implements and Hardware.

State Senator Henry Kellar has recently returned from Washington where he succeeded in perfecting his patents on a new machine for the manufacture of binding twine from rye straw, and the Kellar Manufacturing company will immediately commence its manufacture in Sauk Centre, Minnesota, where a small plant has been established. D. O'Connor, traveling representative of Moline, Milburn & Stoddard, Minneapolis, has taken considerable interest in the new project, and tells Farm Implements and Hardware that it is sure to revolutionize the twine business. The machine was invented by Geo. Ellis, who lives at Crookston, Minnesota, and first brought to the notice of Senator Kellar by Mr. O'Connor, who believed it to be an invention of great promise. It is intended for the manufacture of twine from rye straw, and by the rapidity and thoroughness of its work is able to produce a quality of twine superior to manilla or sisal at less than half the cost of those varieties. Mr. O'Connor says that the inventor worked continuously for five years in evolving the principle and perfecting the constrution of the machine and mastered the process by patent and ingenious experiments covering this long period. The company has not yet decided upon its future course, but the probabilities are that this year's work will be confined to the production of a sufficient number of the machines to establish their utility beyond question and give them a thorough introduction in the agricultural world, with the expectation of a sufficient increase in the facilities of the plant before next spring to accomodate all the business required. This of course is under the supposition that the machines will be manufactured for the use of individual farmers in making their own twine, which is not yet fully decided upon. Whatever course may be pursued Mr. O'Connor says that there is ample capital interested in the enterprise and a digree of confidence in its success which assures the establishment of a large plant and the thorough development of all the possibilities of the invention.

The frequency with which ephemeral twine schemes have been sprung upon the country for the past two or three years has produced a general distrust of all innovations, which cannot be overcome except by the attainment of some extraordinary success in the manufacture of a twine equally as good, and cheaper, than the twines now in use. On the other hand, the demand for a twine equally as serviceable as the manilla or sisal and cheaper in price is so fervent wherever twine is used that nothing further than these two essential conditions would be required to completely supply them. If the Kellar twine machine can accomplish even [illegible] promised for it, it may serve a purpose which all other agencies have failed to do, in a very short time—produce a change in the twine situation which will benefit equally all concerned in its production or consumption. At all events the progress of the Kellar Manufacturing company in its new enterprise will be watched with interest until tangible results are announced.

At an adjourned meeting of the City Council of the City of Crookston, held the 15th day of April 1890, Alderman Jerome offered the following resolution, which was seconded by Alderman Lally. It is hereby ordered that a sidewalk of the standard size (five feet four inches) be laid on the eastern side of that part of Robert street extending from a point where Bridge street intersects Robert street to a point where Robert street intersects with Washington avenue, said sidewalk to be of two inch surfaced pine, and to be constructed in a good, workmanlike manner.

Upon the call of ayes and nays, the vote stood as follows:

Aldermen voting in the affirmative—Lally, Childs, Morrisey, Steenerson, Jerome, Bjoin, Buhn, Jennings, Watts.

Aldermen voting in the negative—None.

Passed this 15th day of April, 1890.

WM. WATTS,
President of the Council.

Approved this 16th day of April, 1890.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance.......	$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest....................	80 00
Total yearly payments..	$ 168 44
Total for ten years.........	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE,

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	$ 100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of.........	500 00
When the loan is due he pays..	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years....................	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest..................................	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years.....	1000 00
Total..	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

The Sub-Treasury Bill

A BILL TO ESTABLISH A SYSTEM OF SUB-TREASURIES, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

House of Representatives bill No. 7162, introduced by Hon. John A. Pickler, of South Dakota, embodies the demand of the Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union. It was referred to the committee on ways and means and is as follows:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, that there may be established in each of the counties of each of the States of this United States, a branch of the Treasury Department of the United States, to be known and designated as a sub-treasury, as hereinafter provided, when one hundred or more citizens of any county in any State shall petition the Secretary of the Treasury requesting the location of a sub-treasury in such county, and shall;

1. Present written evidence duly authenticated by oath or affirmation of county clerk and sheriff, showing that the average gross amount per annum of cotton, wheat, oats, corn and tobacco produced and sold in that county for the last preceeding two years, exceeds the sum of $500,000 at current prices in said county at that time, and,

2. Present a good and sufficient bond for title to a suitable and adequate amount of land to be donated to the Government of the United States for the location of the sub-treasury buildings, and,

3. A certificate of election showing that the site for the location of such sub-treasury has been chosen by a popular vote of the citizens of that county, and also naming the manager of the sub-treasury elected at said election for the purpose of taking charge of said sub-treasury under such regulations as may be prescribed. It shall in that case be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to proceed without delay to establish a sub-treasury department in such county as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. That any owner of cotton, wheat, corn, oats, or tobacco, may deposit the same in the sub-treasury nearest the point of its production, and receive therefor treasury notes hereinafter provided for, equal at the date of deposit to eighty per centum of the net value of such products at the market price, and price to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, under rules and regulations prescribed, based upon the price current in the leading cotton, tobacco, or grain markets of the United States; but no deposit consisting in whole or in part of cotton, tobacco, or grain imported into this country shall be received under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause to be prepared treasury notes in such amounts as may be required for the purpose of the above section, and in such form and denominations as he may prescribe, provided that no note shall be of a denomination less than $1, or more than $1,000.

SEC. 4. That the treasury notes issued under this act shall be receivable for customs, and shall be a full legal-tender for all debts, both public and private, and such notes when held by any national banking association shall be counted as part of its lawful service.

SEC. 5. It shall be the duty of the manager of a sub-treasury when cotton, grain, or tobacco is received by him on deposit as above provided, to give a warehouse receipt showing the amount and grade or quality of such cotton, tobacco or grain, and its value at date of deposit; the amount of treasury notes the sub-treasury has advanced on the product; that the interest on the money so advanced is at the rate of 1 per centum per annum; expressly stating the amount of insurance, weighing, classing, warehousing, and other charges that will run against such deposit of cotton, grain, or tobacco. All such warehouse receipts shall be negotiable by endorsement.

SEC. 6. That the cotton, grain, or tobacco deposited in the sub-treasury under the provisions of this act may be redeemed by the holder of the warehouse receipt herein provided for, either at the sub-treasury in which the product is deposited or at any other sub-treasury, by the surrender of such warehouse receipt and the payment in lawful money of the United States of the same amount originally advanced by the sub-treasury against the product, and such further amount as may be necessary to discharge all interest that may have accrued against the advance of money made on the deposit of produce and all insurance, warehouse and other charges that attach to the product for warehousing and handling. All lawful money received at the sub-treasury as a return of the actual amount of money advanced by the Government against farm products as above specified shall be returned, with a full report of the transaction, to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make record of the transaction and cancel and destroy the money so returned. A sub-treasury that receives a warehouse receipt as above provided, together with the return of the proper amount of lawful money and all charges as herein provided, when the product of which it is given is stored in some other sub-treasury, shall give an order on such other sub-treasury for the delivery of the cotton, grain or tobacco, as the case may be, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall provide for the adjustment between sub-treasuries of all charges.

SEC. 7. The Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe such rules and regulations as are necessary for governing the details of the management of the sub-treasuries, fixing the salary, bond and responsibility of each of the managers of sub-treasuries (provided that the salary of any manager of a sub-treasury shall not exceed the sum of $1,500 per annum), holding the managers of sub-treasuries personally responsible on their bonds for weights and classifications of all produce, providing for the rejection of unmerchantable grades of cotton, grain or tobacco, or for such as may be in bad condition; and shall provide rules for the sale at public auction of all cotton, corn, oats, wheat or tobacco that has been placed on deposit for a longer period that twelve months after due notice published. The proceeds of the sale of such product shall be applied, first, to the reimbusement to the sub-treasury of the amount originally advanced, together with all charges; and, second, the balance shall be held on deposit for the benefit of the holder of the warehouse receipt, who shall be entitled to receive the same on the surrender of his warehouse receipt. The Secretary of the Treasury shall also provide rules for the duplication of any papers in case of loss or destruction.

SEC. 8. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, when section 1 of this act shall have been complied with, to cause to be erected, according to the laws and customs governing the construction of Government buildings, a suitable sub-treasury building, with such warehouse or elevator facilities as the character and amount of the products of that section may indicate as necessary. Such buildings shall be supplied with all modern conveniences for handling and safely storing and preserving the products likely to be deposited.

SEC. 9. That any grain arising from the charges for insurance, weighing, storing, classing, holding, shipping, interest or other charges, after paying all expenses of conducting the sub-treasury, shall be accounted for and paid into the treasury of the United States.

SEC. 10. The term of office for a manager of a sub-treasury shall be two years, and the regular election to fill such office shall be at the same time as the election for members of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States. In case of a vacancy in the office of managers of the sub-treasury by death, resignation, or otherwise, the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power to appoint a manager for the unexpired term.

SEC. 11. The sum of fifty millions of dollars, or so much thereof as may be found necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for that purpose.

SEC. 12. That so much of any or all other acts as are in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

The Cost of Elevators.

A correspondent of the Rural World, E. W. K., writes from Higginsville, Mo., as follows:

It costs $7,500 to build an elevator with a storage capacity of 50,000 bushels. Such an elevator would elevate about 1,000 bushels per hour or clean 500 bushels per hour; of course the cleaning capacity can be easily made 1,000 bushels, the same as the elevating. The above includes an engine and everything complete, and by adding $7,000 more the storage capacity can be readily increased 50,000 bushels, thus making the total capacity of storage 100,000 bushels, and at a total cost of $14,500. The expense of operating such an elevator, if run on economical principles, should not exceed $1,500 per annum, or say 1½ cents per bushel. This includes everything, even insurance, which need not be excessive. The profits of an elevator from one source are this; During the months of July and August (in this section, Central Missouri) two-thirds of the grain (wheat) is threshed from the field, or out of the shook, and brought directly to market. The consequence is that the grain being new and soft, it does not grade No. 2, thus losing from 4½ to 5 cents per bushel in grading, or whatever difference there is between Nos. 2 and 3, and sometimes even No. 4. Here is one source of profit that would be saved were the wheat stored in an elevator until at least this difference in the grade could be saved.

From the above estimate, which seems to be a fair one, the cost of building the proposed sub-treasury warehouses can be made. The entire amount of all kinds of cereals produced in the United States for 1889, may be put at 3,400,000,000 bushels, the largest in the history of the country. Of this amount there was wheat, 490,560,000 bushels; corn, 2,112,892,000 bushels. The exports of all kinds of grain for the same year was about 210,000,000 bushels. Of this amount there was of wheat and flour 88,822,462 bushels; corn and cornmeal 70,241,074 bushels. The great bulk of the grain produced in this country was therefore consumed at home, and by far the largest part of the coarse grain must have been fed to stock on the farm. Bradstreets' reports from more than 1,000 different points East of the Rocky Mountains show grains in store as follows:

February 1, 1890.—Wheat, 49,681,000 bushels.
Corn, 18,420,000 "
Oats, 9,429,000 "
Barley, 2,398,000 "
Rye, 1,991,000 "
[illegible]
In store on Pacific coast [illegible]
Total 80,684,000

The total amount of wheat in store and afloat for the same time in the entire world was only 105,533,415 bushels. With this data an approximate calculation can be made of the probable amount of grain that would be warehoused at any one time. If the present amount of grain in store, say 90,000,000 bushels, is increased to 270,000,000 bushels, or three times the amount actually in store, it probably would be an outside figure, for the number of bushels that would be required to warehouse at any one time, at least for the present. The cost of building good and sufficient warehouses to store this amount of grain at the estimate quoted above, 15 cents per bushel storage capacity, would be but $40,500,000. The cotton crop of 1889 is given at 6,938,290 bales. The cost of building cotton warehouses is estimated at $1 per bale storage capacity. If the whole crop is taken into the calculation it would amount to $9,938,290, which would build those for tobacco also. If these figures are correct the entire cost of building the necessary warehouses for sub-treasury purposes would amount to only $47,500,000 in round numbers.

Certainly $50,000,000 would warehouse all the grain, cotton and tobacco contemplated in the sub-treasury plan, and likely to demand storage at any one period for some time to come. In this calculation the number of warehouses is not considered, but the whole amount to be stored is provided for. The expense of the undertaking can not be urged, therefore, as an objection. There is to-day in the United States treasury $25,000,000 of minor coin, classed as unavailable assets, for the payment of any Government debt. The National Economist will take this sum and build half of these warehouses and use no other kind of money. The mechanics of this country will not stand on the size of the coins; it is the amount that is doing the mischief. The above is a fair statement of the warehouses, and it is hoped that the friends of the sub-treasury plan will read it carefully.

How It Would Work.

After a careful examination of the sub-treasury system as outlined, the general verdict will be that it is fair, just, and equitable, but without an explanation of the details doubts will be expressed as to its practicability. In order to develop this system warehouses and elevators will be built in localities where the amount of products will warrant it. These warehouses and elevators will be owned and controlled by Government and operated under Government supervision. The farmer or planter desiring to practically use this system will, at his most convenient time, bring his products to these warehouses. It will there be inspected and graded. The market price for such products for that locality will be ascertained, and the farmer or planter will receive 80 per cent of the market value of his products in legal-tender money. He will also receive a certificate that he has warehoused a certain amount of products of a certain grade and has been paid 80 per cent of a certain price upon this amount. The certificate will show the cost of warehousing and insuring per month and the rate of interest (1 per cent) to be paid on the 80 per cent advanced. The 80 per cent is ready money, and, being a legal tender, can be used anywhere for any purpose. The certificate or warehouse receipt can be sold or exchanged by simple indorsement. The products may be allowed to remain in the custody of the Government for one year from date of the certificate. The farmer has the right, or the person holding the certificate, to dispose of this warehoused product any time during the year, just as his judgment dictates in that regard, whenever the market suits. When a sale is made the person selling simply transfers the remaining part of the product over and above the 80 per cent already received, by indorsing the certificate to the purchaser. When the holder of the certificate desires to obtain possession of the product he presents the certificate to the sub-treasurer, and receives a statement of the charges for warehousing and insuring, and the 80 per cent already advanced, together with the interest on same at the rate of 1 per cent per annum, the total amount of which he pays, and is then entitled to the product. This is briefly the working plan of the sub-treasury. With proper blanks and facilities the whole machinery can be made more simple than the methods in use at the present time. Regularity of inspection guaranteed, fair weights obtained, and all fraud and deception prevented.

A Kingly Plan of Relief.

In 1763, after a disastrous war of seven years in which he had contended with the strongest powers of Europe in combination against him, Frederick II of Prussia effected a treaty of peace at Hubertsburg, by which Maria Theresa withdrew claim to Silesia, the exciting cause of conflict. As the monarch returned to his capital he was met by delegations of farmers from various provinces through which his road led, who represented that the country had been overrun, and they were destitute of food and seed. The royal promise was given that whatever relief lay in his power should be granted. Every horse that could be spared without endangering the country in case of sudden attack was delivered up to the needy farmers, and the military storehouses were drawn on for seed for a crop. In one province 8,600 houses were rebuilt which had been destroyed, and the most distressed sections relieved from taxation, in Silesia the term being two years and in others shorter exemptions, as need suggested. In the work of recuperation, which took several years of constant application, those cities which had been fined by invaders under threat of fire had the money returned to them, and the Government accepted as the burden of the whole people the financial disaster incident to the national defense. The fourth and fifth years after peace were crop failures, and in some provinces the speculators ran the price of rye, the bread of the people, up to five thalers ($3.65) per bushel. The policy of the government had been to hoard grain for a time of military need, and the storehouses were opened and rye distributed at the price which the government paid for it in normal markets; thus causing disaster to the speculators and relief to the masses. A bank of 8,000,000 thalers capital was started in Berlin by the King, who seems in every instance to have moved to relieve his subjects from extortion by usurers. Finding that agriculture was not relieved by the bank, but lagged in the march of progress, Frederick took a step which entitles him to more praise, and better earned the distinction of "Great" generally affixed to his name than every other act of his busy life, and which was one of those victories more renowned than any on the battle field. The king seems to have realized the power of money to oppress in the condition of scarcity, the process of lowering values from the scarcity of war and famine being in active operation at the time, and the coinage being restored to standard value after very great debasement during the war period. The land owners of Silesia were yet the greatest sufferers, and the king founded in that province a system of co-operative banking, by which the land owners unitedly pledged the whole land of the province to the government, which in turn raised money on its own credit as if for a public loan. This money was lent to the association of land owners at the rate it cost the government, being in the form of a land stock, guaranteed by the government and transferable at pleasure. The immediate effect of this placing the government's credit at the disposal of the farmers was a fall in interest throughout the country to the government rate, and the people were freed from the power of money to oppress. This system was extended through other provinces with like beneficial results.

It is pertinent to note that there yet remains someting of this system of cooperation among the people of Germany, and it is stated that it is a means of great prosperity, having done much to raise the condition of agriculture where tried. Just substitute the use of the products of the people for the credit of the government, and the operation of the sub-treasury plan would be almost identical with that devised by Frederick the Great, who has been credited by history with having performed almost a miracle of statesmanship in leading his country to perfect recuperation, despite failure of crops and the disasters of war, together with the necessity for an army absolutely upon a war footing and all the preparations for war necessary by contiguity of enemies who were constantly prepared, and whose hostile demonstrations were prevented by fear of the military of Prussia rather than honest unwillingness to be guilty of any breach of national peace.

Friends of the sub-treasury plan have been met with the assertion that its practical application would produce the wildest inflation of currency at certain dates each season, and a corresponding contraction at others, which would materially injure business. One of the prime objects of this plan is to increase the volume of currency among the people, and not in the vaults of the banks. That it will do so there need be no doubt, but as to the extent of this increase only an approximate calculation can be made. To assume that all the grain, cotton and tobacco would be warehoused at one time each year would be an absurdity. The forced consumption continually taking place would to a large extent prevent such a condition.

CROOKSTON FURNITURE CO.

O. H. Dale was down from Erskine and made THE JOURNAL man happy by renewal. While we do not expect every one to do this at this time of the year, these little helps come mighty handy and are very highly appreciated. Mr. D. reports farmers busy seeding in his vicinity—nearly through, though.

Some brilliant genius set a prairie fire in Fairfax this week and it ran into and destroyed about 15 or 20 tons of hay for Peter Cornelius, on 17. Pete says he is onto the perpetrator and if he will come around like a man and talk the matter over it will probably go easier with him than if he attempts to nig.

W. A. Burnett returned this week from the coast and his family will follow soon. Mr. B. says that many more of our old citizens would return could they get the means. He says very many are out of work and this is liable to be the case for some time to come. He prefers Polk County to anything he has seen.

See the new ad of the Alliance Hail and Cyclone Insurance Company elsewhere in this issue. This company is prepared to give better rates than any of the old line companies. It is a company of the farmers, by the farmers and for the farmers. Agents for Polk, Norman, Clay and Becker Counties wanted. Address H. E. Cooke, Crookston, Minn.

The attendance at the alliance meeting last Saturday was small, owing no doubt to the fact that farmers were too busy seeding to spare time to attend to anything else. Nothing was done in the matter of the starch factory, but we learn that two or three farmers intend to take up the matter and push it to a successful issue. We believe this is the best way to do it.

Last week as Morton Date and May Zeigler were fishing along the banks of Maple Lake they found the body of Eddie Zeigler who was lost in the lake last winter. The body had come ashore near Smith's landing across the lake from where he must have gone in while skating from Minor Rood's place on his way home. Mr. Zeigler and Mr. Wyatt went out to bury the body as soon as word could be got to Mr. Z.

J. S. Nichols and wife, of Fertile came up on Saturday. J. S. has his wheat all in in excellent shape, with a press drill. He says if he don't get a big crop this year it will not be for lack of thorough cultivation. He says there are lots of wild oats in the seed oats brought into the country this year and cautions farmers to be careful not to sow any of that kind as once they get a foothold they are worse than mustard. He had procured a nice lot for seed and got them home before he discovered the presence of wild oats among them. Liberty alliance is steadily increasing in numbers and interest.

71st Anniversary of the

I. O. O. F.

GRAND CELEBRATION.

A Gala Day.

Crookston lodge, No. 79, did itself proud in its celebration of the 71st anniversary of the order. Visiting brethren from Fergus Falls, Barnsville, Red Lake Falls, and other places were present to join in the festivities of the occasion, many accompanied by their wives. A special from Grand Forks brought a large delegation from that city, accompanied by their band. The parade formed at four o'clock in front of the hall, in the following order:

Platoon of Police.
Grand Forks Cornet Band.
Grand Forks Lodge I. O. O F.
Carriage, containing His Honor, Mayor McKinnon, the speaker of the day, Dr. D. C. Estes, and Hon. H. Steenerson.
Crookston Cornet Band.
Crookston Lodge No. 79, I. O. O. F.
Citizens in carriages.

The line of march was up Main to Fourth, along Fourth to Broadway, along Broadway to Houston avenue, along Houston to Fletcher, up Fletcher to Broadway, along Broadway to Robert, and along Robert to place of beginning.

At seven o'clock in the evening the Opera House began to fill and at 7:30 "standing room only" could have been announced. The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. O. H. Elmer, followed by music by the Crookston orchestra. When Mayor McKinnon arose to make the address of welcome the kids in the gallery took occasion to greet him by various shrill whistles, cat-calls, &c., all the same as though it was a minstrel show, whereupon chief of police Gonyea immediately hustled the youngsters down and out, an act that was highly appreciated by all in the audience who wished to have the privilege of hearing themselves think. The Mayor made a neat little speech of welcome and then Dr. D. C. Estes made the address of the evening, in which he briefly outlined the object of Odd Fellowship and what had been accomplished by them. At nine o'clock the meeting at the hall broke up and all who had the little ticket to the banquet adjourned to McKinnon Hall, where over 300 people sat down to as fine a banquet as was ever spread in this city. After ample justice had been done, Mr. E. W. Wile as toastmaster, gave out "Our Guests," and called upon Hon. Halvor Steenerson to respond, who did so in his usual graceful style. Dr. Estes responded to the toast "Fraternity," and had a great deal to say about the sisters. "The Three Links" brought out a fine speech from Bro. Bierly, of the Grand Forks News, who paid Mr. D. Jacobus a justly deserved compliment for the artistic manner in which he had decorated the emblem with his electric lights. The "Rebekah Degree" was responded to by Bro. Purcell, of Grand Forks, in a neat little speech. Ed. Tulene responded to "The Signs" in a manner that left the impression that the poor fellow was deaf and dumb entirely—but he isn't. Judge Montague, "To the Ladies," did not know why he should be called upon to respond to that toast unless the committee had charitably considered him the best looking gallant in the crowd. He proved very complimentary in his remarks, however. Prof. Moore responded to the toast on "Education" in a forcible speech which showed that gentleman well acquainted with his topic. "Spiritual Odd Fellowship" brought out Rev. O. H. Elmer in a grand speech, in which he said that after what he had seen and heard today of the order, it was far more easy to talk upon this topic than he had imagined it would be. "Law and the lawyers," brought out a humorous speech from P. C. Schmidt who thought he knew more about the lawyers than the law. They were an innocent lot who took more abuse uncomplainingly than any other profession in existence. The closing ode was well rendered by the brethren and the audience was dismissed with a prayer by Rev. Mr. Sharp. The ladies of the M. E. church provided the feast of good things and attended to the distribution thereof in a highly commendable manner. The hall was beautifully decorated and the tables garnished with beautiful flowers. As a whole the Odd Fellows celebration may be written down as a grand success in every particular.

A Disgraceful Affair.

One day last week as two ladies, the wife and niece of a farmer living near the city were driving home from the city in a buggy, they were overtaken by two men in a lumber wagon drawn by a span of mules. Upon seeing the ladies the driver whipped his mules into a run, but made no effort to turn out to pass the buggy. The ladies turned out into the ditch to avoid collision, when the semblance of a man turned his team toward them with the evident intention of tipping their buggy over, when one of the men in the wagon caught hold of the lines and turned the team in time to prevent a collision, but so close did they come that one of the mules' heads struck one of the ladies. Seeing that he had failed to collide with the buggy, the drunken brute, as he passed, raised his whip and struck the horse the ladies were driving, but fortunately did not succeed in his nefarious attempt to wreck the buggy. He then drove on ahead very slowly not allowing the ladies to pass until, upon reaching the house of a neighboring farmer, the ladies stopped for protection, and the brave man (?) drove on. What a grand and manly act was that for a great stout man to thus terrorize two defenceless women!! The great cowardly brute who could so far forget what is due to manhood as to descend to do such an action deserves a term in State's prison until he can learn how to act in a civilized community. That he was drunk is no excuse, for a brave man, though drunk, would never think of making war on defenceless women.

Bill Nye.

This great genius, at whom more than half of the world has laughed, was advertised to be at the opera house on Thursday evening of last week and, of course the seats sold off like hot cakes. Well, the evening arrived all right, as advertised but for some reason or other the redoubtable Bill failed to materialize. He was at Grafton on Wednesday evening and upon arrival at Grand Forks and learning that he could not come by train, instead of driving over, he telegraphed to have the date cancelled. We can see no really good excuse for a break of this kind and don't feel reconciled to let it pass as one of Nye's jokes. It is true that Bill was Nye but not quite nigh enough to suit.

Senator Keller, of Sauk Centre, while in the city last week said that his new twine machine would revolutionize the business just as soon as they could get a whack at the manufacture of them. He says he could put in the necessary machinery at St. Cloud or Stillwater at a very slight cost to the state, and if this is so, we imagine that it would be far better than the hemp mills. Everything considered, it looks as though the day of high priced binding twine has nearly passed away.

Standard Works.

Wm. Clements has novels from such standard authors as Dickens, Thackeray, Scott, Pope, Charlotte, Bronte, Cooper etc., etc. These books are solidly and neatly bound in cloth, and are sold at prices that are the lowest ever offered in this city. What an elegant Christmas present you can get for a very small cost. Don't fail to see these books and get prices. [31-tf]

The Great West accepts the $20,000 challenge of Messrs. Pillsbury, Sawyer et al. Now gentlemen put up or shut up.

The Duluth Tribune of April 26th says: "Alvah Dewey, at one time in the newspaper business here, died recently at Graceville, of dyspepsia." Mr. Dewey was well known in Polk and Marshal Counties. He was the founder of the Warren Sheaf and the Fisher Bulletin going from Fisher to Graceville from thence to Brainerd where he established the Daily News, from there he went to Duluth where he published a democratic paper. Mr. Dewey was ever a bitter foe to monopoly and did good work for the farmers while engaged in business here. Since his failure in Duluth we believe he has not been engaged in the newspaper business. His death will be mourned by many friends in Polk County and wherever he was known.

Last year the State Board of Equalization raised the assessment on cows one-third—from $10 to $15, and succeeded in fixing a price double what the animals would bring in the fall, thus throwing an extra heavy burden of taxation upon the farmers. Will they be as quick to rectify that error this year as they were to make it? They gave the banking institutions a proportionate reduction. Will they equalize that? On reviewing the complexion of that Board we notice that the farmers are very conspicuous—by their absence. It strikes us that here is a fine subject for discussion in our alliance, ample food for thought for farmers. An effort should be made to fix a rate of assessment on cattle that will balance the double assessment of last year. Will it be done?

That Twine Factory.

It will be remembered that, at the last session of the Legislature, the subject of the manufacture of twine at the State's prison was brought up and discussed, resulting in the sending of a committee east to investigate and report. That committee reported that owing to the vast amount it would cost to put in an establishment that it would be wholly impracticable to manufacture twine in the prison, so the matter was given up, but the farmers were not all satisfied, and President Hall, of the State Alliance, corresponded with some manufacturers of machinery in New Jersey, who gave such facts and figures as lead to the conclusion that our committee had allowed themselves to be beautifully taken in by twine manufacturers, whose interests did not lie in the direction of a Minnesota twine factory. Upon presenting his testimony to the Governor a new committee, consisting of President Hall and Secretary Lathrop, of the Farmers' Alliance, and Messrs. Norrish and Temple of the Prison Board, were appointed a committee to go east and thoroughly investigate the matter, and they have gone upon their mission. A twine factory at St. Cloud or Stillwater may result.

A $35,000,000 Robbery.

Mr. Chas. A. Pillsbury has been filling many columns of the Great West lately in the endeavor to convince the farmers that the elevator companies and the millers are not and have not been making anything handling wheat. After fully answering Mr. Pillsbury's sophistries clause by clause, Dr. Fish sums up the whole matter thus:

"Now Mr. Pillsbury, we will give the facts in this business. When assaulted on our propositions, we only had the quotations from the papers. The authority was insecure. Now we are ready for any examination, and we will put our statements and authorities against yours.

We said wheat (January we believe) was worth 60c. per bushel at Crookston. You disputed it, saying you had bought no wheat there for less than 62c. When the books were to be shown us in your office when we went there for that purpose you failed to show them for Crookston—stating that to your surprise you found you had not bought any there! And yet now we find you did buy nearly 19,000 bushels.

We now have in this office a gentleman who is ready to make oath that he sold wheat to you for 60c. last winter when graded as No. 1 hard. That is point No. 1.

Now let us run through all your category of changes without modification, as you give them.

Of course we assert that you have the charges too high, but in no case do we modify them, except to put the price at 60c. at Crookston:

Price at Crookston	.60
Freight to Duluth	.10½
Duluth-Elevator Charges	.01¼
Lake Insurance	.00¼
Duluth Commissions	.00¼
Lake Freights	.03½
Buffalo Elevator and Insurance	.01
Canal	.04
N. Y. Charges	.01¼
N. Y. Commissions (this is no charge, for you are shipping to Liverpool and have already over-charged for N. Y. transfer by one-half cent—but we will "stick it in")	.00½
Ocean freight	.06
Ocean primage	.00¾
Ocean Insurance	.00¾
Liverpool Commission and Insurance—an unjust item, as you are not selling this wheat on commission—2c. is enough—but let it go as you put it	.04
No interest can be allowed while in transit—because you are not "advancing money" on it—and if you were, it is the interest, or profit we are now getting at. Total	.94
Price of No. 1 hard wheat at Liverpool ("ex-ship" and "ex-warehouse") by Mark Lane Express—immediately before the late rise—say March 31st—40s. per qr., 5s. per bushel. Allowing that exchange is $4.80—and it is $4.88—that is, counting a shilling as only 24c.—we have, per bushel,	$1.20

This Mr. Pillsbury, is an unaccounted difference of 26c. per bushel. In our former attacks upon the wheat trade we

PUT THE TOTAL CHARGE AND DIFFERENCE

(above freight) at only 28c. Now we put the amount totally unaccounted for—on your own figures—at 20c. Certainly our assertion that there was a 20c. robbery is not an exaggeration. We are willing to go before the country—before a committee—or before the courts—on our original statement of a 28c. difference between wheat and freight and the Liverpool price—yes, and now we will make it more stupendous—that there is a 28c. robbery over and above all

THE WHEAT, THE FREIGHT, AND THE CHARGES!

The effort to show us in error has not been successful. We are well aware that slight mistakes may be made—but not errors to cover over seven cents more—and then this wheat crop, as a total is robbed of twenty million dollars, without even referring to frauds in grades, in dockage, in unrighteous rod. her freights. We go still further in belief—we believe that on the grain crop Minnesota and the Dakotas are robbed of—35 million dollars a year.

The May Wide Awake opens with a frontispiece that all American young people will hail with pleasure, for it is a portrait of the author of The Heir of Redclyffe and the Daisy Chain, Miss Charlotte M. Yunge; farther on, Mr. Oscar Fay Adams, describes his visits with her at Otterbourne. Following comes a humorous story by Louise Stockton, the sister of Mr. Frank Stockton, entitled "The Baby's Masquerade." "Apple Blossoms" is a unique little story by Mrs. Bernard Whitman. "A Long Horror" is a powerful true story of a young French count and his wife, people living still, in Mrs. Fremont's "Will and the Way" series. "The Monitor of Grammar School II," by Annie Bronson King, and the "Cow-Bells of Grand Pre," by Grace Dean McLeod, are both dramatic tales. "Bonny and Ban," Mrs. Catherwood's serial, ends satisfactorily, as does Mr. Stoddard's "Gid Granger." The illustrated papers are very interesting; "The Aprons of Paris," by Josephine Jenkins, is illustrated by Henry Bacon, and "The Upper Ten," by Eleanor Lewis, has a dozen "taking" pictures from prints and photographs. "Japanese Kites," by Ensign Bernadon, has some very quaint pictures. Mrs. White's paper on "Stenographers and Type-Writers" will interest many young women, as will Mrs. Claflin's "Margeret-Party Letter," also. A paper on "Spelling," by one of the Masters of the Boston Public Schools; Granville B. Putnam, gives matter for serious consideration. "Men and Things" is delightfully readable. The poems of the number are choice: "Victor Hugo and the Mouse," by Theron Brown; "What Baby Knows," by Esther B. Tiffany; "The Unbidden Guest," by Celia Thaxter, and "The Fairy Prince," by Marian Douglas.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

A Pleasant Presentation.

G. F. Copeland and Wife Treated To a Surprise.

Duluth Daily Tribune.

Mr. G. F. Copeland, the popular general superintendent of the St. Paul & Duluth road, was very much surprised last evening when he was taken up to parlor "K" at the Spalding and presented with a magnificent gold watch and chain for himself and a beautiful gold breastpin and diamond earrings for his wife. The presentation speech in behalf of the conductors and officials of the St. Paul and Duluth road, the donors of these exquisite emblems, was made by General Roadmaster Fred Mc Naughton. His words were few, simple, yet eloquent. Mr. Copeland responded feelingly. The watch has a Swiss movement, is very plain, yet solid and beautiful. The chain consists of a series of large gold links, which give it a massive appearance. Mrs. Copeland's presents are also very tasty. The pin is of gold made up of a number of braided strands. The eardrops were also of braided gold and in the center of each was a diamond. Mr. C. M. Vance who selected the presents, showed admirable taste. They were indeed rich but not gaudy. The following gentlemen were present: C. M. Vance, general agent at Duluth; C. N. Norton, general agent at West Superior; M. Beaston, civil engineer at St. Paul; Fred McNaughton, of Duluth, general roadmaster; O. H. Oliver, Fred Hoery, John Stapleton and Ed. Digle, passenger conductors; Dr. McGee the comany's physician, of St Paul; Geo. W. De Corsey, general detective of the road; D. H. Williams, general yardmaster at Duluth, and Mr. John B. Sutphin, of Duluth.

MORTGAGE SALE.

[First publication May 1st, 1890.]

WHEREAS CHARLES H. BROSSARD AND Sarah J. Brossard, his wife, of Polk County, Minnesota, as mortgagors, did, on the fifteenth day of September, A. D. 1885, duly execute and deliver to the New England Mortgage Security Company, of the County of Windham, State of Connecticut, as mortgagee, their mortgage, bearing date of September 14th, A. D. 1885, whereby they mortgaged to said mortgagee the following described lands situated in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southwest quarter of section twenty-seven, (27) Township one hundred and fifty-two, (152) Range forty-two (42) west, containing 160 acres, to secure the payment of the sum of four hundred dollars with interest thereon, according to the conditions of one certain promissory note, with interest coupons attached, bearing even date with said mortgage, and made by said mortgagors to said mortgagee, or order, which said mortgage was, on the 18th day of September, A. D. 1885, at 12 o'clock m., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County of Polk, in book 27 of mortgages, on page one; and

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the sum of thirty-two dollars due as interest upon said mortgage on the first day of January, A. D. 1889, and the further sum of thirty-two dollars due as interest thereon on the first day of January, A. D. 1890, and the said interest is still unpaid and due; and

Whereas, it was stipulated and agreed by and between the parties to said mortgage that if default should be made in any of the conditions or covenants therein contained on the part of the mortgagors to be kept and performed, that then and from thenceforth it shall be lawful for said mortgagee, or its assigns, to consider the whole sum thereby secured as immediately due and payable without notice to said mortgagors or any other party; and

Whereas, The New England Mortgage Security Company, mortgagee, has exercised its option to consider and declare, and does hereby declare the whole sum of money secured by said mortgage to be due and payable; and

Whereas, there is now due and claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of four hundred seventy-eight 25-100 dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land therein described, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Polk County at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 14th day of June, A. D. 1890, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the sum due on said mortgage, together with taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees therein stipulated to be paid in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Money to Loan

On More Reasonable and Better Terms than Ever Before Offered in the Northwest.

We are now prepared to loan money in any amount from $250 up to $10,000 on well improved farms where title has been perfected, and U. S. patent is on record or has been issued.

Our terms are 8 per cent. interest, with a small commission to cover expenses and cost of making the loan.

Where the security is satisfactory we can make loans for five or any greater number of years, interest payable annually on the first day of January, and will allow the borrower, after two years, to pay any part of the principal, in sums of $100 or upwards on any interest day named in his notes. So much for straight loans.

We are the agents for the Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a company of great strength, and a public record for probity and fair dealing unsurpassed; and can write life insurance in connection with loans with great profit and advantage to the borrower, which, taken in connection with the loan for ten years, pays the loan by yearly payments, which is more full shown by the following statement: A aged 25 years, of sound health, applies for a loan of $1,000 on his farm, at the same time he applies for $1,000 insurance on the 10 years annual payment stock-endowment plan. He pays as follows:

Each year on his insurance	$88 44
Each year on his loan for interest	80 00
Total yearly payments	$168 44
Total for ten years	1684 40

which pays up for the insurance, and the insurance pays the loan in full.

If the borrower dies during the ten years his insurance becomes payable and due at once and pays his loan in full, leaving his farm clear and free of all encumbrances, for his family.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

If the borrower effects a loan of $1,000 on the plan usually followed, he must pay interest at the rate of ten per cent. and may be stated as follows:

$1,000 for five years, annual interest	$100 00
At the end of the loan he pays interest in the sum of	500 00
When the loan is due he pays	1000 00
Principal and interest paid in 5 years	1500 00

As much within $184.40 as he pays in ten years with insurance with us.

If he makes such a loan for ten years he pays:

Interest	$1000 00
Principal at end of 10 years	1000 00
Total	$2000 00

or $315.60 more than he would pay with us; besides on the 10 per cent. plan he is not insured against death, and if he dies during the life of the loan the "Old Detestable Mortgage" still hangs over the heads of his defenceless wife and children.

CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA, MAY 1, 1890.

The average amount of grain held in store during the months of November, December and January was less than 100,000,000 bushels, the cash value of which did not exceed $43,000,000. Applying the same rule to the cotton and tobacco product would give about 75,000,000 additional, or a total of $118,000,000. Suppose this amount is multiplied by three, which would be far in excess of any probable demand, and it amounts to only $354,000,000, or less than $6 per capita. There can be no great danger in this, and if there is, it simply threatens the present condition, which give to money its "power to oppress."

THE NEW PRINCIPLE.

The National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, when it announced to the world its sub-treasury plan, took one of the most important steps in the development of modern economic knowledge. Political economy has made very little progress since the days of Adam Smith; the same principles then enunciated are still taught with much the same manner of application. During the whole time it has been taught and universally admitted, and always will be taught and admitted, that fluctuation in price is the only thing necessary to enable the exploiting class to appropriate all the results of productive industry except a bare subsistence to the laborer. This must not be lost sight of; it is the key to a proper conception of the causes of the depressed condition of agriculture in America to-day. Fluctuation in price makes everything that the producer buys for consumption comparatively high and everything he has to sell comparatively low. Fluctuation in price acts upon the producer like the double-action force-pump upon the cistern; it rapidly depletes both on the up stroke and the down stroke. As a proof of the deleterious effects of fluctuation in prices one has only to reflect what the effect of stability in price would be. All kinds of future gambling and all forms of speculation would instantly cease, and the middle-man, having been forced to give up speculation, would have no use for a secret cost mark; he would do business upon known and legitimate margins based on the service performed. Another principle of political economy fully as well established is that general prices rise or fall in exact accord with an increase or diminution of the volume of the circulating medium of the country, hence the unavoidable conclusion always has been, and always will be, that general prices always fall when the volume of money in the country is diminished, and vice versa. The volume of the circulating medium may be modified in four different ways; that is, there are two ways to diminish the volume and two ways to increase it. One way to diminish it is by actually reducing its amount by extracting from it; this may be done by destroying, hoarding, exporting, or in any other way that takes it from circulation. The other way of reducing the volume is effected by not interfering with the actual amount of the circulating medium, but increasing the demand for it and its uses; this is easily and effectually done by additions to the exchangeable wealth of the country, especially additions of such products as must be speedily exchanged and consumed. Thus an increased demand for its use would act as a reduction of volume. An illustration of this form is every year shown in the sale of the agricultural crop. The volume of money supplies a stable demand for its use by manufacturers, traders, tradesmen, artisans, merchants, middlemen, and all others whose demand for exchangeable value is about the same during each of the different months of the year, but agriculture during the months of September, October and November dumps practically all her year's products, amounting to about seven billions of dollars, on the market. This is an actual, tangible addition to the wealth of the nation, and is of a character that its demands upon the circulating medium are imperative in spite of the fact that the circulating medium is in the same demand by other classes that it has been throughout the year. The value of this agricultural product is equal to many times the gross volume of the circulating medium, and therefore this great increase in wealth and consequent demand for the use of the circulating medium acts as a practical reduction in volume. As is well known, this always depresses prices.

The two modifications of the volume of the circulating medium by increasing it, are the opposites of the two ways just described for decreasing the volume. The great but unavoidable fluctuation in the demand for circulating medium produced by the yearly sale of the products of agriculture affect a fixed volume of such medium by making it small during the fall season, and large during the spring when such products have been largely consumed, thereby producing low prices when the farmer sells his products, and prices gradually ranging higher throughout the year, during which he is a purchaser of commodities for consumption. The gist of the new feature proposed by the measure is that it provides for a flexible volume of money in addition to the usual and necessary stable volume, and that such flexible volume shall correspond exactly to the necessity for fluctuation caused by the dumping of the agricultural product in the lap of the nation during the fall, and as such product is consumed such volume contracts to correspond. This is the new principle in political economy that all modern economists must sooner or later admit to be correct, and leads to the following maxims:

A stable volume with a variable demand will cause instability of price.

A flexible volume to correspond with the variability of demand throughout the year will produce stability of price.

The recognition and application of this principle is of vital importance to the productive industries of the country, because a simple increase in the volume to any extent will not prove an adequate remedy. The volume may be increased to fifty, or a hundred, or five hundred dollars per capita; it must stop somewhere or excessive inflation would soon destroy all values, and when it does stop, if the volume be inflexible it would only be a question of time when the present depressed condition would be greatly intensified on account of the greater disparity between the fortunes of the rich and the misfortunes of the poor. If the volume were five hundred dollars per capita, and general prices were raised in proportion, as they certainly would be, the gross product of agriculture would bear the same ratio to the gross products of the country, and therefore stand in the same ratio to the volume of money, and produce as great a comparative scarcity in the fall and as great a comparative superabundance in the spring, and consequently produce low prices when the product of agriculture was offered for sale in the fall, and high prices when the agriculturists purchase commodities with which to make their crops in the spring. There is no way to avoid the conclusion that inflexibility in volume would enable the middle-man to appropriate all the surplus products of the producer just as rapidly with a large volume as with a small one.

The conditions which make the application of this principle necessary have been developed by material progress, and modern methods for the transportation of commodities and the transmission of intelligence. Until recent times it took the agriculturist almost the entire year to prepare his crop for market and market it, and consequently its sale was distributed more evenly throughout the year. Farmers before the war often held seed cotton in houses for the greater part of the year before they could get it ginned; now they pick it into a wagon from which it is unloaded into the feeder of a gin and is often ginned and sold on the day it is picked. Formerly it took weeks and sometimes months to market the crop; now the most remote points can sell in New York every day in the year. These facts have developed the necessity for the application of this principle. It did not exist in Adam Smith's time, but it does exist in an eminent degree now. The honorable gentlemen of the Congress of the United States should lay aside preconceived ideas, prejudice and the "tendencies of early educational training" and step out squarely upon at high and progressive plane of advanced modern thought, and remember that the agriculturists of America ask no favors, but demand justice; and unless those who represent them in Congress intelligently comprehend the situation and keep up with the march of modern evolution of demonstrable truths, their constituency will surpass them and leave them alone to mourn their lack of application.
